THE seas around Japan are marvelously rich in rare species of crustacea, mollusca and fishes, thus compensating for the paucity of the fauna of the islands. Besides the rarity and scientific value of many of the specimens furnished to our museums from the Japanese seas, the remarkable size of some of the animals caught—such as the crabs in the Bay of Yeddo, with arms which from tip to tip measure sixteen feet, the salmon of Yezo, and the cuttlefish of the western coast—seems to border on the incredible. During the month of March a huge cephalopod was caught near the town of Kisaradzu, which lies directly across the bay from Yokohama. While some fishermen were fishing in a boat they were startled by the appearance of an enormous cuttlefish, which had seized the long, narrow prow of the boat, and was winding its tentacles around it, as if to drag it under. The sailors, in no way dismayed, attacked the creature, and after much pounding killed it. Its body, preserved by salt, was on exhibition for several weeks in Tokei (Jedo.) Even in its dry and greatly shrunken state the body alone measured over six feet in length, and from the end of the longest arm to the top of the body was a little over sixteen feet. Dr. Videle, a French physician, residing in the Japanese capital, made great efforts to obtain the salted specimen for a scientific institution in Paris, but failed. Cuttlefish four and five feet long are often caught by the fishermen who bring their wares to Yokohama. Perhaps the story of the Sea Devil, in Victor Hugo's "Toilers of the Sea" may not be greatly exaggerated, though, as Prof. Winchell says, it is told "unscientifically."

JESUS loves us with an everlasting love. He so loved us that he gave his precious life to save us. The more I think of his love, the deeper is my love for him. We do not realize how much he loves us, or we could not so often grieve him by our wanderings.

FAINT NOT; the miles to heaven are few and short. There are many heads lying in Christ's bosom, but there is room for yours among the rest.

Scientific.

IT IS SAID that ozone may be generated by blowing cold air through a series of flames from ordinary Bunsen burners.

A REMARKABLE discovery, made by M. Charbrier, has been communicated to the Academie de Sciences, that electrolyzed hydrogen, analogous to the similar state of oxygen, called ozone, will combine directly with nitrogen, and decompose, at ordinary temperature, the oxide of silver. If this production of active hydrogen be confirmed, it will lead to new and important revelations as to the physical state of matter.

AN ARTIFICIAL cooking-butter is largely sold in Paris under the title of "Margerine." It is prepared from raw ox-tallow by gently heating it with water, potash and macerated tripe; the purified, cooled and salted product is then submitted to hydraulic pressure to remove the stearine; the result is a yellow substance very much resembling butter that has been heated. It is said to be more durable than the natural product. A similar substance may be made by treating the tallow with a diluted hot solution of carbonate of soda—one part of carbonate with thirty parts of water—and then washing the product, first with water containing one per cent. of hydrochloric acid to remove the alkali, and then again with pure water. It is said that butter prepared by this latter method was used by the citizens of Paris during the late siege.

"CHILDREN'S EARS SHOULD NEVER BE BOXED."—So writes an eminent surgeon in the June number of the Popular Science Monthly. Though the statement will doubtless be received by many a juvenile reader in the light of a "self-evident proposition," there may yet remain a few parents and rural pedagogues to whom the reasons for the abolition of this form of rebuke may be of interest. "We have seen," writes Prof. Hinton, "that the passage of the ear is closed by a thin membrane especially adapted to be influenced by every impulse of the air, and with nothing but the air to support it internally. What, then, can be more likely to injure this membrane than a sudden and forcible compression of the air in front of it? If any one designed to break or overstretch the membrane he could scarcely devise a more effective means than to bring the hand suddenly and forcibly down upon the passage of the ear, thus driving the air violently before it, with no possibility for its escape but by the membrane giving way." So reasonable are these conclusions that there was not needed even the high authority of the writer for the subsequent statement that "many children are made deaf by boxes on the ear." It is unfortunate, however, that this and many other rebukes of the same order precede the reason, and hence a safer general order might be issued to the intent that no child should ever receive any form of corporal punishment until the parent or preceptor has stopped to reason—first with the child, and then with himself.

THE FIXED STARS.—Among the well-determined facts of astronomical science, none are more startling than those which concern the fixed stars. These bodies, like our sun, are self-luminous, and are in all probability centers of planetary systems; but they are situated at such enormous distances from the earth that only in a few cases, and by the most refined observations, have astronomers been able to detect any change in their apparent positions due to the orbital motion of the earth. Nevertheless, it is by the measurement of such changes that the distances of some of the fixed stars have been determined. Stars having the greatest apparent motion are inferred to be nearest to us, and this has determined the selection of certain stars, in preference to others, in the efforts which have been made to ascertain their distances. According to this rule, the star α Centauri, whose distance was determined by Prof. Henderson, may be regarded as nearest to the earth; and yet that distance is found to be more than two hundred thousand times that of the sun, or, in round numbers, about twenty trillions of miles. The human mind can, of course, form no conception of such a distance as this; but perhaps we may approach a little nearer to a realization of its magnitude when we reflect that, since light travels at the rate of one hundred and ninety-two thousand miles a second, it would require three years and a quarter for the light of the nearest fixed star to come to the earth. This is the limit for the brightest and nearest stars; but what distances must we allow for those innumerable stars of the smaller magnitudes, which are only just disclosed by the most powerful telescopes in the remote regions of the Milky Way? Among the infinite number of such stars, it is but reasonable to conclude that there are many individuals which are intrinsically as bright as those which immediately surround us. Assuming this to be true, it is easy to prove that some of the telescopic stars are situated at such distances from us that their light requires over two thousand years to accomplish its journey to our own system. From this it follows that, when we note the appearances of such stars, we are actually reading their history more than two thousand years ago. An eye situated at such a star, and gifted with sufficient power to discern changes on the earth, would see the surface of our planet as it was before the beginning of the Christian era. Startling as these conclusions appear, they are not to be avoided without attributing an inferiority of intrinsic illumination to all the stars of the Milky Way—an alternative much less in harmony with astronomical facts connected with other sidereal systems. The intrinsic splendor of the star α Centauri has been found to be more than twice that of our sun; but how can we imagine the splendor of Sirius, which shines with more than one hundred and forty times the sun's intrinsic brilliancy?

Religious Intelligence.

FOUR DEACONESSES have been admitted to St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal church, Brooklyn.

THE English New Testament revisers have finished the nineteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles.

THE Niger mission of the Church Missionary Society is conducted exclusively by native African agents, under a native African bishop.

A CHURCH GUILD has been formed by the Episcopalians of Chicago for disseminating the doctrines of their church, and for the prosecution of charitable labors.

THE Presbytery of Western Africa has sent ten African youths to this country to be prepared for the ministry, and returned as preachers to their native land. They are now at Lincoln University, Pennsylvania.

THE English Primitive Methodists propose to establish a mission in Fernando Po, at the request of its principal chief, and £300 have already been bequeathed for the object. Unfortunately the climate of Fernando Po is perilous for the white man.

THE Methodist says the first steeple on a Methodist church in the world was placed on the church at Marlboro street, Newport, Rhode Island. Bishop Asbury was greatly disturbed by it, and when he saw it, exclaimed: "Organs and choirs will come next!"

THE Rev. S. R. Maclay, D. D., and wife, of the Methodist mission, arrived in Japan on the twelfth of June, and will locate for the present at Yokohama. Rev. Dr. Newman, of Washington, preached in the Union church of Yeddo on Sunday, June 15.

FROM a census recently taken in Paris it appears that there are in the city 1,732,529 Catholics, 30,421 Israelites, 17,281 Calvinists, 14,940 Lutherans, 9,842 Anglicans, Methodists and Quakers; 422 Mohammedans, Buddhists and Brahmins; 2,500 persons who declared that they belonged to no religious sect, and two only who had the courage to confess that they were freethinkers.

THE following is said to be an approximately correct classification of the adherents of the various churches among English-speaking people: Protestant Episcopalians, 12,500,000; Presbyterians, 11,500,000; Baptists, 10,500,000; Congregationalists, 7,500,000; Methodists, 15,000,000; Roman Catholics, 10,000,000—57,000,000 of Protestants against 10,000,000 of Roman Catholics.

THE "Annals of the Propagation of the Faith" (Roman Catholic), published in January, announces the departure of sixty-four missionaries for Australia, Africa, South America, the United States and the British Provinces of North America. An "apostolic caravan of nineteen persons" arrived at Cairo on the twenty-sixth of last September, on its way to Central Africa. The papal church may well be an example in missionary zeal to the Protestant churches.

A DECREE has been issued in Guatemala proclaiming freedom of worship. It declares "that to grant liberty of worship is not to attack the Roman Catholic Church, seeing that the Roman Church can also enjoy all the privileges of liberty of worship; that the Roman Catholic Church is purer in countries where there is liberty of worship, and it finds itself surrounded by other churches." Which of our churches will take advantage of this decree and establish a Protestant mission in Guatemala?

REV. A. M. MERWIN, of the Spanish Protestant Church at Valparaiso, Chili, writes that the Spanish services under his care are well attended. "At one time ninety persons were present on Sabbath evening, and the room usually occupied for the weekly lecture and prayer meeting has been found too small to accommodate those who come. The Sabbath school has now an average attendance of thirty, including the teachers, and three individuals are hoping to unite with the church at the next communion season."

IOWA LUTHERANS.—The Lutheran Synod of Iowa numbers 100 ministers, 180 congregations and more than 20,000 communicants. Their seminaries also are prospering, the one at St. Seahold having graduated 26 theological students in June. Some of these institutions draw their supplies, in the way of students and candidates for ordination, from schools in Germany; and these German schools, beside supporting the students while in the Iowa institutions, also pay their traveling expenses to this country.

THE missions of the United Presbyterian Church, in the order of their founding, are in Syria, India, Egypt and China, with their leading centers at Damascus, in Syria; Sealkote and Gujranwalla, in India; Alexandria and Cairo, in Lower Egypt, and Oslout, in Upper; and at Canton, in China. In these missions there are 21 stations and out-stations, 15 licensed and ordained American missionaries, 22 American female missionaries, one printer, two physicians, 97 native ordained ministers and teachers, 18 churches, and 563 communicants, 21 schools and 2,322 scholars.

REV. JOHN R. MCDOUGALL has at length been able to secure for the Free Italian Church in Florence a suitable edifice. For £2,000 a suppressed Roman Catholic church and monastery, situated very advantageously for Protestant purposes, have been purchased, and an additional sum of £1,000 (of which Mr. McDougall has already obtained a part on the spot, and hopes to collect the rest this summer in Scotland) will adapt them for their new destination. The church will be used for public worship; the conventual buildings will be transformed into a school-house for the use of the evangelical schools of Santa Croce.

THE Young Men's Christian Association recently organized in Rome is prospering greatly. Its headquarters are in the heart of the city, opposite the Propaganda. It consists of two branches—one of English and one of Italian young men. Both are very zealous, and are working with a will. Several gentlemen in London have agreed to pay the rent of suitable rooms for them, and also to employ and send out a young Italian, now in London, who will assist them very much in their work. A free reading-room has been opened, and about twenty periodicals are already on file for use.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST STATISTICS.—At the English Primitive Methodist Conference (the fifty-fourth,) held in London a few weeks ago, statistics for the year showed, with one grave exception, an almost uninterrupted increase of connectional property, usefulness and means of faith propaganda. There was an increase over last year of 43 ministers. The number of local preachers is 164 more than last year. The class-leaders' list is swollen by 55. The connectional chapels number 87 more, and this will partly account for a decrease in the number of the "hired rooms" for preaching. Sunday schools are 52 more than in the past year; the teachers therein, 197; and the scholars, 5,371 more. There is a decrease of six day schools, but an increase of 533 scholars in the present number of schools over the number for last year. All these are encouraging signs of the increased piety which should, and we doubt not does, accompany these efforts of the great missionary body called the Primitive Methodist Society. The number of members shows the serious decrease of 806; the present number, 160,658, being less by some 800 than that reported last year.

FROM very careful investigations it appears that the increase of communicants of evangelical churches in the United States, from 1870 to 1872, is more than 600,000, or a little more than eleven per cent. in two years. If we continue at this rate through the next decade, the increase will be fifty-five per cent. in 1880, or at least ten millions of communicants. All the late talk about the "decline of Protestantism" is fallacious, at least so far as our own country is concerned. Protestantism has a profound sway over the American heart and conscience. Skepticism, "spiritism," "liberalism," etc., make much noise, but evangelical religion, meanwhile, goes on, deepening and widening all through the nation. In no former period of our national history has religion had a more pervasive or deeper power in this country. Such is the fact, whatever may be the mystery of it to philosophical doubters.—Methodist.

IN AN essay on "Modern Missions and their Results," in "Ecclesia," Dr. Mullens, who was for some years a missionary in Calcutta, says that 100 missionaries, chiefly from America, are laboring in Turkey, Persia, Palestine and Egypt. A hundred more, from all countries, occupy the ports of China and Siam. In India and Ceylon 500 are engaged; nearly 300 in Madagascar and South Africa; 130 in the region of the Gulf of Guinea; 220 among the negroes of the West Indies; 105 among the Indians of North America; and 200 more among the tribes of Polynesia. Great Britain sends from its 21 societies 970 missionaries, at an annual expense of $2,793,145; the continent of Europe sends 425 to represent its 13 societies, at an expense of $573,775; America's eight societies expend $1,530,710, and support 542 missionaries; and 96 Jewish missionaries swell the total of societies to 50, of missionaries to 2,033, and of money expended to $5,164,670.

ON SUNDAY, June 15, eleven of the brightest and most intelligent Chinese youth in San Francisco made a profession of faith in Christ, and were baptized and admitted to membership in the Chinese mission church. The Occident (San Francisco) says, in connection with this matter: "A most unexpected and glorious result seems likely to be interwoven with the opposition and wrongs flung upon the Chinese on our coast—a revival of religion—if there is any propriety in calling that a revival which is really a beginning. The Chinese are no fools. They are deeply struck with the contrast between the treatment they receive from Christ's servants and the devil's servants. By the latter they are abused, hated, derided, and, when possible, outraged. By the former they are kindly treated, are instructed, are encouraged in every good word and work, while their sins are reproved and every effort is made to lead them to fear God and keep his commandments. The great law of right, impressed by God on every human heart, tells them that Christianity is true, and as fast as they become thoroughly instructed they manifest their deep interest in the gospel. Among this class a great deal of seriousness prevails."

THE success of our American missionaries in establishing upon heathen soil the various forms of church machinery with which we are familiar at home must be unquestioned; and a report of a recent meeting of the Telugu Association, by Mr. Timpany, of the American Baptist mission, is of interest, especially from its close resemblance to reports of similar meetings in America. The association met at Ramapatam, and its sessions continued for three days. Nearly 600 Christians met together the second day. After the opening sermon letters were read from the different churches, indicating increased prosperity throughout the mission, and reporting over 900 baptisms during the year. A circular letter was read by one of the native preachers, and a new church at Allur was welcomed to their number. Upon the Sabbath a candidate was examined and ordained to the ministry, and fifteen new converts were baptized. One of these, a carpenter, was the first caste man baptized in that field. In the eastern part of the Ramapatam field, after three years of labor, the seed sown seems to be taking root, and all the head-men in one village have been baptized. In other villages many are begging to have preachers sent to them. Mr. Timpany significantly remarks: "The brethren at home must say whether or not the harvest is to be reaped." The seminary recently established here is in a prosperous condition. Mr. Timpany is assisted by two native teachers.

Glorified by the Spirit.

Not in heaven but on the earth was Christ to be glorified by the Spirit. He was glorified in heaven before the Spirit was given, but after the everlasting gates had lifted up their heads and the King of glory had come in, the Spirit's mission of receiving and telling began. To take and to show were the processes, and by these Jesus was to be manifested in his true character. Not otherwise could the apostles themselves comprehend him fully. They never understood him and his kingdom until the Holy Ghost came upon them on the day of Pentecost. His teachings, miracles, resurrection and ascension left them in a state of bewilderment and comparative twilight. The person and offices of Christ were never fully displayed until his bodily presence had vanished from their sight, and the Comforter had come with energy and power to their souls.

The vision in the mount may have been a scenic or symbolic representation of what was about to happen under the dispensation of the Spirit. As that portrayed the coming of the Son of man in his kingdom, and exhibited the kingdom of God in its power, revealing Christ in his divine and regal majesty, so in a much broader and truer sense is he transfigured and made manifest by the Holy Spirit. The transaction "in the holy mount" finds its import and realization in the glorification by the Spirit, when the kingdom of God came with power, and when the divine light shed upon the apostles and disciples gave them their first complete conception of their ascended Lord. Then Christ was truly and gloriously transfigured before the entire company of believers, and they saw him in his kingly beauty invested with a splendor more brilliant and dazzling than that which shone upon the mount. "He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you." Christ was to be made glorious to his disciples, to be manifested to them by the Holy Spirit, as he had not been by his words and miracles. Even the favored ones who witnessed the bodily transfiguration probably knew but little, if anything, of its meaning until after the resurrection and the baptism of fire.

Those who heard the Savior's wonderful teachings, and were present when he raised the dead, fed the multitudes and stilled the tempests, had but imperfect views of his character and doctrine. They still looked for an earthly kingdom, and for a temporal and visible enthronement even after the resurrection. There was a film upon every eye and a vail upon every heart until the Spirit was given. Not until he received and showed them the things of Christ had they any accurate and worthy conception of the Savior. Then he was glorified indeed—to their hitherto dark understandings Jesus was manifested as the Lord of all, and they could testify that "Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins."

From the day of Pentecost the apostles are different men altogether. Their timidity is gone, the kingdom is no longer Jewish and temporal, and a personal reign on earth is thought of no more. The Spirit had begun to take and to tell, and Christ to their clarified vision comes forth from almost midnight obscurity, from the midst of carnal hopes and perplexing misconceptions, into the cloudless day of grace and truth. Without this work of the Spirit to receive and show, Christ could never have been understood on earth, and if Christianity had been perpetuated after the ascension, it would have degenerated into a system of error, to be finally absorbed and lost in the drift of human religions and philosophies. It is true now, as in the apostolic age, "that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." His character may impress the student of history as something altogether exceptional, and his life may arrest the attention and excite the admiration of scholars, but false views and skeptical convictions are likely to be the result. He cannot be "the power of God and the wisdom of God" to the natural man, but rather a stumbling-stone and a rock of offense. If the apostles who were with him in the holy mount, and attended on him through his entire ministry, needed the Spirit to illuminate a character with which they were so familiar, this dependence must be perpetual and universal.

The Spirit is the great expositor of Christ. He takes and wields the affluent properties of him who declares that "all things that the Father hath are mine," and he draws from this armory the well-tempered blade, and a thousand arrows dipped in the blood of Calvary. What Christ himself could not tell even by word and example and miracle, the Spirit receives and shows. Relative to Jesus, this is his eminent work: to take and to tell, to glorify Christ by displaying him to the consciences of sinners, and by revealing his grace and loveliness to the believing heart. To this end he is reproving "the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment," and is striving with the inveterate unbelief of the ungodly. He comes to all as the Spirit of truth to lead the troubled and ignorant, and to guide the halting and fearful. He is abroad in this great mission in the world to glorify Christ by quickening dead souls, and by opening the blind eyes to the divine Son as the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person. And he does glorify Jesus in every believing soul by manifesting the Savior in all his power and sweetness, and by pouring light ineffable and satisfying into the heart that longs for life and peace.

Not alone in conversion, but in the progressive experience of the Christian is this work felt to be going forward. Christ is being glorified more and more in the devout heart, he rises higher and higher in the embrace of the believer's faith and love, and there are continually unfolding sublimer views of him in whom are hid all the riches of wisdom and knowledge. In the heart-life of the true believer the Spirit is always taking and telling, the horizon is lifting, the vault of sapphire exposes depths of cloudless light opening into the depths beyond. Christ is to be glorified by the Spirit. No other agent can make him plain to the human mind, and manifest him to the faith of man. This is his prerogative, and his peculiar and distinctive work. The wise and the simple are alike and absolutely dependent upon him to apprehend and grasp the Savior of the world. Philosophy, criticism, art and taste may stand at the mountain's base, and speculate, admire or distrust; but none can climb the heights, and go up and penetrate this mysterious wisdom, without the aid of the Spirit of truth.

Not by a personal coming and reign is Christ to be glorified. Not by observation is the kingdom to come. By this process alone of taking and telling, and by this agency, is the Redeemer to be exalted among men and his reign to be established. "He shall glorify me." There is to be no other demonstration of the Son of God on the earth until the winding up of human probation. There is to be no coming with clouds, no raising of the dead, no trumpet sounding from the skies, no miraculous interpositions among the forces and organizations of the material elements. The Holy Spirit is given to reprove the world of sin, and to make Christ plain to the darkened understanding. His main work is close to the cross, and related to the person of the Son of God. His gracious movements and his tireless activity revolve upon this great center—to receive of Christ, to take of him and of his, and to tell it to the ear which no other voice can reach.

Centenary College.

CIRCULAR OF CENTENARY COLLEGE, Jackson, Louisiana, for the academical year 1872-3. Established by the State in 1825. Ceded to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1845. New Orleans: Robert J. Harp, print., 112 Camp street, 1873.

This is quite a modest little circular, but it puts forth some very cheering intelligence. The Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana will be gratified to learn of the "rising again" of Centenary. For several years this college seemed to be under a cloud; but the information contained in this circular reveals the fact that the cloud is floating away. Those who have charge of the interests of the college seem to have commenced the work of reconstruction at the very ground. The board of trustees, the faculty and the course of study have all been somewhat remodeled. It would be difficult to find a board of trustees representing a larger number of the interests of society than this board represents. Here are ministers of the gospel, teachers, physicians, judges, lawyers and farmers constituting this board. It seems to me that this is wisdom. An institution of learning should be so governed as to meet all the demands which society makes upon it. When the interests of society are represented in its governing board, such an end is more likely to be attained. We have, then, in the very constitution of this board of trustees an assurance that in the control of the college the various wants of society will be kept in view, and a guarantee that the education of our sons in Centenary will qualify them to meet all the demands which the age shall make upon them.

The circular represents the faculty as full. As we are perhaps too much addicted to the practice of "puffing" our preachers and teachers, we will not say much of these men. Some of them have been connected with the college for years. When Centenary, before the war, was at its highest prosperity, they were there.—Since the war they have stood by it in its dark days, and contributed no little by their efforts to bring it up to its present position. Most of these professors have been known to the writer for a long time, and he speaks from personal knowledge and personal experience when he says they are qualified for the positions they occupy in the institution.

The course of study has been somewhat remodeled, so as to adapt it to the special exigencies of the times. It will bear favorable comparison with the course in any other school. The student has choice of two courses, the regular and the scientific, both of which are pretty thorough. Perhaps if the study of the German language was added to the scientific course it would be well. It would meet a demand which is felt to be growing in some quarters.

While in some schools and colleges the rates of tuition have been advanced since the war, in Centenary they remain as they were. They are reasonable enough. Boarding is at a moderate price, and we know that Jackson is a very pleasant, healthy village, and its society is good. We have heard lately of an agent of another college who represents the society about Jackson as composed principally of the low French element. This is a most marvelous display of ignorance in a college agent. In fact it borders very closely on the miraculous. Having been about Jackson a good deal, we have always thought that its society was about as good as that of any other place. Excepting the French professor in the college, we never saw there but one man who could talk French, and he was not a Frenchman.

The circular shows an attendance last session of one hundred and twenty-four students. This is cheering to the friends of Centenary. Now is the time to give support to this college. She has done an immense good in the past. She gives promise of doing much good in the future. She designs to scatter the blessings of education through the land. She aims to train men for any employment of life. She simply asks fair play and no misrepresentations. Let the people send their sons, and Centenary will turn them out polished and ready to be fitted into the great temple of society. The regular academic year begins on the first Monday in October. In conclusion let me say: "I have no ax to grind." I have no connection with the institution.

OUTIS.

Seashore Camp Meeting.

W. V. T. furnishes the Baltimore Episcopal Methodist an account of the Seashore camp meeting. The writer was himself quorum pars magna. We extract as follows:

"Last year six or eight straggling tents were all the show of a camp meeting we had. This year they numbered thirty-eight. The increase another year, I am almost persuaded, will approximate to the same ratio. The heavy artillery, absent last year, came up this, and the effect was grand. Perhaps two thousand people were present on Sunday.

David Ayres, of Galveston, Texas, historical in Methodism there, here and almost everywhere, was tented on the ground with his family. His tent was rather a house complete, of plank, whitewashed, and with a yard substantially inclosed. He is over eighty years of age, and I am tempted to write something of his glorious record, but for this larger information a special letter would be desirable. He is very deaf, and his auxiety to hear the word prompted him to prepare for the preachers' stand the same arrangement which he has had introduced into the pulpit at Galveston, and by which he hears preaching. He brought to the camp a walnut desk for the stand, covering a funnel-shaped fixture, which was connected by tube underground, and flexible near his seat, outside the altar-railing, with his ear. The experiment was a perfect success.

A substantial shelter, of heavy timber and shingle roof, and capable of covering one thousand two hundred hearers, made the services at the stand independent of sun and rain. It is a provision such as I never saw in Maryland, and an immense improvement. The seats are of cleaned plank and comfortably backed with wide strips. I give these items because they will present a new feature in camp meeting accommodations to my Maryland friends, unless they can quote the two years past of my absence in opposition.

For its specific purpose the meeting was a blessed success. Hardened sinners of years past were brought to God. The church was jubilant for the far larger than adequate compensation for outlay and labor, as we humanly determined, which the Lord was pleased to give us in the refreshing of believers and the conversion of souls.

Bishop Keener was with us all the time, and was the proprietor of two commodious tents, whose hospitalities of shelter, cot and food many wayfaring men and women were glad to enjoy. The Bishop also grandly illustrated in his preaching the manner of doctrine and directness appropriate to a Methodist camp meeting. Great grace eminently rested upon all the ministry present. Every sermon seemed to travail with souls. Parker gave us, "Praying in the Holy Ghost;" Keener, "The prodigal son;" Gillespie, "Christ crucified;" Goodwyn, "Let him that is athirst come;" Urquhart, "The embassadors;" Watkins, "Work out your own salvation;" Andrews, "Hold fast the profession;" Wadsworth, "If any man will do he shall know;" Evans, "The fullness of joy;" Rush, "If any man love not, anathema;" Moore, "The swelling of Jordan;" Mathews, "Salvation is far from the wicked;" White, "The New Jerusalem;" Leith, "The beatitudes;" Foust, "The strait gate;" Walker, "Behold, I stand and knock;" Keener, jr., "The humiliation and exaltation."

As the triumph and joy increased from day to day, it was a glorious opportunity for the translation of some saint, and so it happened. Bro. Shropshire, one of our best and best-beloved, gave in his testimony on Monday, and before Wednesday night was in heaven.

So ends a plain account of the late Seashore camp meeting.

The Schools.

Under this head the St. Louis Christian Advocate has the following sound and suggestive counsel:

You will send your children to school, of course. And while casting around for a choice of schools to which to send them, allow us to remind you of the importance of making a right choice. Perhaps you have not reflected with sufficient care on the influence and results of a child's school-days. You may send your child to an incompetent teacher, where, in all probability, he will acquire at first a dislike to, then a disgust for learning, and afterward live and die an uncultured, uneducated, ignorant and comparatively useless man; or you may send him to an irreligious teacher, who, whatever his mind or attainments may be, is infidel at heart and infidel in life, and the child, receiving no sound religious or moral training, will imbibe first the spirit of indifferentism, then the spirit of positive viciousness, and afterward live as a moral pest of society; or you may send him to one whose religion is simply an intensified form of superstition, and whose teachings lead to moral idolatry, if not to practical as well; and under these the child may grow up narrow-minded, bigoted, superstitious and intolerant, and be lost at last; or you may send him to a teacher who places intellectual culture above everything else, ignores the sensitive and moral natures, and teaches the child in a parrot-like way to repeat rules and principles of the nature of which he is ignorant, instills into his mind false ideas of sociology, human duties, rights and privileges; inflates him with vanity and pride, and that child turns out to be an adventurous vagabond; or you may send him to a teacher who, with a becoming sense of the true character and responsibility of his work, will faithfully endeavor to enlighten the mind, refine the sensibilities, develop and direct the moral nature, and thus lay the foundations for true manhood and a useful life.

Which of these will you choose? You can take either. Each and all of these classes are abundantly represented in this country, and the future happiness, usefulness and salvation of the child depend greatly upon the teacher to whose care you commit him.

Without reference to other denominations, allow us to say to Methodists that they have their colleges and schools. They have them in Missouri, and in every other State where they operate. We hazard nothing in saying that in a mere literary point of view these colleges and schools will not suffer by comparison with any others of the land. Superadded to this is the excellence of their moral and religious character, and the moral and religious influence they exercise. If, then, you believe the doctrines of your church, if you believe in the scripturalness of the institutions and polity of your church, if you desire the salvation of their souls, then send your children where they will be taught accordingly as you believe and desire. What if it do cost some money. It will be far cheaper in the end to educate them properly, though it be at a cost of hundreds or thousands of dollars, than to educate them improperly, though it be done without the expenditure of a dollar. And what in this respect we say to Methodists we would, if our advice were asked, say to all other denominations: Support your own schools, no matter what it costs in money.

The Colored M. E. Church.

Bishop Miles, says the Nashville Christian Advocate, writes encouragingly to the Christian Index—a paper which we are glad to see so well edited. He had a good District Conference at Brownsville; the preachers are better paid—$50 was received for the Bishops—$23.38 for missions. The Hopkinsville District Conference was also a good one. The Rev. Peter Spillman is building a church in Princeton. The Bishop says: "He went to the woods and cut the timber for the sills, and has them framed and lifted down, and a good part of the lumber on the ground. The foundation is thirty by forty, with fourteen feet ceiling. The white brethren gave us the use of their church for our conference session, and also for preaching; and we also had the courthouse granted to us. I preached at the courthouse at eleven o'clock A. M., June 1, to a large and well-behaved congregation. By the request of the whites I preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at night, to a very attentive congregation of whites. We were all well treated by the citizens, white and colored. They seem interested in our success. Bro. Spillman reports twenty-four members at Princeton, and five joined the church on Sunday night. The reports from the presiding elder and preachers were very favorable. The church is growing and in healthy condition. Meetings well attended, preachers supported. The blessing of God has been poured out upon the people, and many have been converted and added to the church. Several donated aid to our Book Concern—Judge J. M. Dorsou, $1. May he live long and do good in the church of God. I intend to bring this matter before the people everywhere I hold a district meeting and Annual Conference. Brethren, help to establish our Book Concern. I will deposit all the money donated to the Book Concern in bank until the Book Committee meet at Memphis in May. Whatever is paid to me of the ten-cent assessment money I will pay over to the book agent, at Memphis, Tennessee. I hope that the other Bishops will solicit donations for our Book Concern, and deposit all received in bank until our episcopal meeting next May. I will have plenty of catechisms, hymn-books and Disciplines with me. Hereafter all of you preachers come prepared to buy for your schools and for family use. No church can get along in this progressive age without its own literature. I have our own catechism with our imprint."

Decline of Methodism in New York.

By the aid of the thorough investigations of the Rev. C. C. Goss, we are able to present decisive evidence upon the question: "Is or is not Methodism declining in the city of New York?" Mr. Goss has acted upon our suggestion, and has included in his comparison the towns and counties immediately around the city.

Before commenting upon the article, we wish to protest against the perversion of the facts, made unconsciously, we suppose, by the secular press. The New York Times of August 19 copies the substance of Mr. Goss' article, without acknowledgment, however, with the title: "Decline of Methodism." Methodism in the United States is not declining, but growing at a prodigious rate. In 1850 the total of members in our own church was 859,726; in 1870 it was 1,173,159; in 1871, 1,233,008; in 1872, 1,272,498; or, adding probationers, 1,458,441. Thus since 1860, or in twelve years, our increase has been 412,722. This is not decline, but growth, and marvelous growth.

The history of Methodism in the city of New York, for nearly thirty years, tells a totally different story. In 1845 we reported here 9,571 members; in 1870, 10,706; in 1872, 10,322. Since 1845 our gain has therefore been only 751. Comparing ourselves with three other leading denominations of New York, we find that in 1872 we were, as to the number of church-members, 7,456 behind the Presbyterians; 3,841 behind the Episcopalians, and 930 behind the Baptists. In 1830 we were more numerous in New York than the Baptists and the Episcopalians, so that, as regards them, we have lost our rank; in 1830 the Presbyterians had 8,926 members to our 3,955, or more than twice as many. It will be seen, therefore, that we have gained upon the Presbyterians since 1830, while in that time the Episcopalians and Baptists have gained upon us.

When the religious statistics of the twenty-five important cities and towns in the vicinity of New York are exhibited, Methodism appears to advantage. In the twenty-five selected by Mr. Goss we have 24,144 members; the Presbyterians, 23,825; the Episcopalians, 17,913, and the Baptists, 15,682. In the nine counties adjacent to New York county the results are similar.

We are brought again to the conclusion, announced by us in our recent article, that the itinerancy apparently works to disadvantage in large cities. Perhaps these disadvantages might be remedied by special exertions. We content ourselves to-day with placing the facts before our readers.—Methodist.

BISHOP PIERCE was the alumni orator at the recent commencement of the University of Georgia. "N'Importe," in the Columbus Inquirer, says: "He arose to a master's commanding attitude, talked with a master's power, and left a master's influence on his hearers. It was an oration for everybody. The commonest man could grasp it. It was pronounced the most superb effort of the Bishop's life. His venerable father, now verging on to ninety years of age, the grand old man of his day, was present, looking well. Hon. H. W. Hilliard, General John B. Gordon and many other distinguished alumni were among the great men who occupied the rostrum."

Death of Rev. Dr. Spring.

The venerable senior pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church of New York, Rev. Gardiner Spring, D. D., died at his residence on Monday last, in the eighty-ninth year of his age. He had been for many years laid aside from active duty by infirmity, but his death was somewhat unexpected at this time. Mrs. Spring died only last week.

Dr. Spring was the son of Rev. Samuel Spring, D. D., one of the chaplains of the Revolutionary army, and was born at Newburyport, Massachusetts, February 24, 1785. He was prepared for college in the grammar school of his native town, and also received instruction from a private tutor in the office of Chief Justice Parsons. He entered Yale College and delivered the valedictory oration at the close of his course in 1805. He studied law in the office of Judge Daggett, of New Haven, but a portion of his time was occupied in teaching, and he passed fifteen months in the Bermuda Islands, where he established an English school. He was admitted to the bar in December, 1808, and began practice with favorable prospects, but his attention was soon turned to the gospel ministry, and he abandoned the practice of law to enter upon a theological course. He attributed, in after years, this change in the purpose of his life to the advice of his father, but still more to a striking sermon by the Rev. Dr. John M. Mason, from the text: "To the poor the gospel is preached." He passed a year at Andover Theological Seminary, and was licensed to preach toward the close of 1809. Early in the following summer he accepted a call to the Brick church in this city, where he has remained pastor until the present time, a period of sixty-three years.—New York Observer.

BISHOP DOGGETT, says the St. Louis Christian Advocate of August 20, reached this city on the morning of Saturday of last week, and left on Monday of this week to attend the Conferences on the Pacific coast. Two preachers, one from the Holston and one from the Mississippi Conference, accompanied him with a view of laboring henceforth in the Columbia Conference.

Some time ago the Bishop made a call for volunteers for the coast, to which call he received no less than thirty responses! Thirty men willing to go and labor there as ministers—some ready to go at once, others after a short time. If the church had provided the means the Bishop might, before the beginning of next winter, supply the coast with a sufficient number of men to meet the demands. What a pity the means had not been supplied! Of the number offering themselves there were many who, so far as man can judge, are well suited to that field of labor; and what a rich harvest they might have gathered! Some—several indeed—will yet go so soon as they can provide the means, and others whose circumstances are such that they cannot hope to provide the means of themselves, will go if the means be provided by the church. Here now is a pressing demand for the exercise and manifestation of the true missionary spirit. Let preachers and people think and pray, then think again and act.

PLEASANT MEMORIES.—Our esteemed brother, Price Williams, of Mobile, in a private note speaks of the recent camp meeting on the seashore in terms which will find a response in hundreds of hearts. He says:

"The memories of our camp meeting—how pleasing, how delightful! Temporal joys and pleasures are oftentimes pleasant in retrospect; but the reminiscences of the camp meeting are not confined to what we saw, heard and felt then and there. These are sweet and delightful. But, my dear brother, they are a sort of prelude to joys immortal to come. So these are retrospective and prospective. My soul doth magnify the Lord because of his blissful presence and prospective fruition.

I wish we could oftener have such precious reunions. I love the brethren we meet there, and I hope and trust it will lead to a growing interest and a closer brotherhood between the Methodists of the two cities and the coast.

The good brethren are generally well, and doing well religiously here."

OUR READERS in search of a school for young ladies will, of course, give attention to the advertisement, in another column, of Crab Orchard Springs College. Prof. Tarrant and his accomplished wife are in charge, the location is most salubrious, and all the appointments in the way of buildings, furniture and board are probably unsurpassed. This institution is highly indorsed by the best people, and is, no doubt, worthy of extensive patronage. The session begins September 15. For particulars address Rev. John F. Tarrant, A. M., Crab Orchard Springs, Kentucky.

WE ARE PAINED, says the Southwestern Presbyterian, to announce the death of Rev. Wallace H. Stratton, pastor of the Baton Rouge Presbyterian church. He was called from his work on earth to the rest of heaven on the twenty-first of August, after a short illness from congestion. His last hours were happy ones as of those who die in the Lord—full of the triumphs of faith.

THE Rev. John D. Willis, a member of the Mississippi Conference, died in Newton county, Mississippi, August 16, 1873. His end was peace. An obituary notice will appear next week.

REV. JEREMIAH MCMILLAN, a member of the Virginia Conference, died August 17.

THE MISSIONARY PRIZE ESSAY.—At a meeting of the Board of Missions, August 15, it was resolved that the time for the forwarding of manuscripts be extended to January 1, 1874. It will be impossible for the two Bishops who are on the committee of adjudication to examine all the manuscripts before that time. We hope, however, that all who contend for the prize will forward their manuscripts as soon as convenient. The board will retain all the essays, and publish such of the unsuccessful ones as shall be deemed expedient. It sometimes happens that "rejected addresses" prove more popular and useful than those which gain the prize. It may result so in this case.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

A ROMISH priest at Clifton, Staten Island, New York, advertises in the Tablet, August 9, that he has received "a large supply of the miraculous water from the grotto of Lourdes." This is the place to which the French and English Catholics are making pilgrimages. The advertisement says: "Any one writing to him (Father Lewis) and inclosing an offering, will receive by express a flask of the precious water." If the "offerings" yield a surplus over actual expenses in procuring the water, it will be given to the sanctuary of Lourdes or some other charity; prayers and the sacrament are recommended in conjunction with the water. If this is not superstition, we will be pleased to have some one define what constitutes the article. The fact is that Catholicism, in transmitting its thousands to this country who have been bred in the ignorance and superstitions of countries where it reigns supreme, is compelled to import some of its superstitions.—Central Christian Advocate.

JUST AS IT SHOULD BE.—Many of our correspondents are kind enough to keep their book and ADVOCATE business separate. They never write about the business of the two on the same sheet. Although they may inclose the two letters in the same envelop, they are dated, signed and addressed separately, and distinct from each other. This enables us to attend more promptly to each. When the business is mixed the book-keeper and department must collect himself to wait till it has passed through the other department—order filled, goods shipped and letter answered—before the business of his department can be attended to; and as the book-keepers and clerks of the two branches of business are separate, and file their letters separately, it must be apparent to every man of reflection that much perplexity results from writing about the business of both on the same page. When money is remitted it should be distinctly stated what for; and if for two or more purposes, how much for each. Write nothing in business letters except that which has reference to business.

THE WEEKLY WATCHMAN, LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS.—Under contract with E. H. Holckliss, editor and proprietor, the subscribers of the Watchman will be furnished with the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE during the time of the suspension of said paper, being thirty-six weeks further, as agreed upon, or until notice thereafter.

NAVRA & OFFNER, No. 174 Canal street, New Orleans, wholesale and retail dealers in China and crockeryware.

MASSASSOIT HOUSE, SPRINGFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS.—This is the leading first-class hotel in the above place. It is centrally situated on the principal street, and contiguous to the Union depot; at the same time free from all the noise and unpleasantness which a person would suppose, being in such close proximity to it, all the trains being made up far away from the house. The hotel is conducted by Mr. E. S. Chapin, who devotes his entire time to the management, and leaves nothing undone which will insure the comfort of his guests. The vegetables and milk supplied to the house are fresh from Mr. Chapin's farm every day. The most fastidious could not but be satisfied. The house has recently undergone a thorough renovation, at great expense to the proprietor. It is fitted up with all the modern improvements and conveniences. The halls are large and airy. We would say to those from the South visiting Springfield that they will find the above house second to none in New England. Travelers think it a great privilege to get a Massasoit dinner. Mr. Chapin is an old and respected citizen, having lived there for years, and is connected with several prominent institutions.

WE CALL the attention of our readers to the advertisement, in this issue, of the New York Watch Company, of Springfield, Massachusetts. The manufacturers claim for these watches that they are equal to any watches made in the world, for the same money. Sold by dealers everywhere, and by E. A. Tyler, New Orleans.

THE Morgan Envelope Company, of Springfield, Massachusetts, are the manufacturers of "Morgan's Patent Reservoir Mucilage Stands" and "Peerless Ink stand." They offer a line of sermon papers, perforated half sheets; sizes, 5½x8½, 5½x9, 7x9½ and 8x10; prices, $2, $2.50, $2.80 and $4.30 per ream. Samples by mail.

MR. E. E. F. ROSS, our resident advertising agent, is now on a brief tour through the West and North, and we commend him to the attention of our patrons, and shall be thankful for courtesies extended to him. They are assured that Mr. Ross has no other business, but devotes his entire time to the paper, and is entitled to all the consideration of one of its business corps.

WE SEE that Procter & Gamble's EXTRA OLIVE SOAP is becoming very popular in our city. Its quality, we know, is superior, and being nicely perfumed, we are not surprised that consumers prefer it, and that it has a large sale.

COLGATE & CO.'S new perfume for the handkerchief, "CASHMERE BOUQUET," will be appreciated by all who have enjoyed the delicate and peculiar fragrance of their toilet soap of the same name, which is so universally popular. jy12 ly

BUSINESS NOTICES.

THE greatest pain reliever in the world is Dr. Tobias' Venetian Liniment, established over twenty-six years. Every bottle sold has been warranted to give satisfaction, and not one returned; so the term humbug cannot be applied to it. It is perfectly innocent to take internally (see path in the pamphlet). It is warranted to cure, when first taken, cholera, diarrhœa, dysentery, croup, colic and sea-sickness; and externally, chronic rheumatism, sore throat, pumps, old sores, sprains, bruises, etc. Depot, 10 Park Place, New York. au23 ft

DR. E. P. MILLER'S HOME OF HEALTH, Nos. 37, 39 and 41 West Twenty-sixth street, New York.—This is a pleasant house for the preservation or the restoration of health. It is located in an agreeable part of the city, near Broadway. It has all the advantages of a quiet home, and at the same time of a public house. Liquors and smoking are excluded, and the whole management is had with reference to health and comfort. Many dyspeptic and otherwise invalid has been restored here to vigorous health; and the advantages of the house to visitors to the city cannot be overestimated. The house is conducted with a strict regard to neatness. The table is well kept and the charges are moderate.

Turkish baths are furnished in the house to both sexes.

With these advantages we may confidently claim the liberal patronage of those who are permanent residents or temporary sojourners in the city. Circulars send on application. au7 ft

THOMAS ROUGHTON, of Cincinnati, says: "U. C. Hamilton & Co.—I had the agate for two long years, and had tried several remedies of acknowledged or pretended merit without any good result. I finally tried your preparation—Kress' Fever Tonic. One bottle completely broke up the malady, and I am now perfectly well. I can testify that your medicine does all you claim for it; and it is only due to you that this acknowledgment should be made, especially as so many worthless chill medicines are now offered." This medicine you will find at Frederickson & Hartt's and E. J. Hart & Co.'s, New Orleans. jy31 2m

PROFESSIONAL and amateur musicians should examine the Combination Solo Stops, found only in GEORGE WOODS & CO.'S ORGANS.

THIS UNRIVALED SOUTHERN REMEDY is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is containing those Southern Roots and Herbs which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It will cure all diseases caused by derangement of the Liver.

PURELY VEGETABLE,

THE SYMPTOMS of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth; pain in the back, sides or joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism; sour stomach; loss of appetite; bowels alternately costive and lax; headache; loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; debility; low spirits; a thick, yellow appearance of the skin and eyes; a dry cough, often mistaken for Consumption. Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the Liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and, if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue. This

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

REDUCTION IN THE PRICE —OF— OUR HYMN-BOOK.

We are gratified to be able to announce to the Church that we have made a reduction in the price of our HYMN-BOOKS. We have been anxious to achieve this result for several years, but have not seen our way clear to do so until now.

We publish below the retail price of the several styles. The usual discount will be allowed to preachers and wholesale dealers.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

A Chartered Literary Institution under the Auspices of the M. E. Church South.

Located at Meridian, Mississippi.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The annual term of 1873-4 will open on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873. It will be divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. Comfortable convenience for boarding in the college-building will be furnished and supervised by the president. The Board of Trustees claim to have made ample arrangements for the Literary, Scientific, Ornamental and Musical departments of the college, by the election of competent and experienced teachers for the various departments, and that facilities for thorough and liberal education in the East Mississippi Female College may not more than be equaled by the best of other similar institutions. Our college is recommended to public consideration with candor and with confidence of a successful career. We hope to see its interests and influence widen and deepen, under continued and steady prosperity, and it be apprehended that young ladies who now place their names upon the roll of this institution will be pleased in coming years by reorganizing in their Alma Mater a living and honored success of educational enterprise.

BOARDING.

Boarders engaged for the whole term will be charged $160, $80 of which must be paid at the opening of each session.

Those engaged for one session will be charged $90, $40 of which must be paid at the beginning of the session. Those engaged for a shorter or an indefinite time will be charged $20 per month, to be paid quarterly in advance.

Extra charges will be made for washing and lights. Each boarder must furnish two sheets, one blanket and two towels. Especial printed regulations will be given to each boarder, giving her directions and restrictions respecting absence, family and social relations and practices.

In all cases of sickness, resulting in the removal of boarders from the college, advance payments will be promptly refunded. No pains will be spared to render every boarder comfortable and happy. Their treatment will be parental, and indulgences of strict propriety and refinement will be continually brought to bear upon all their habits.

Our college is in its infancy. The enterprise has been recognized by the Mississippi Conference as meeting a growing demand for educational facilities in east Mississippi. In the judgment of the church and Conference, Meridian is the proper place for the institution. The location is healthy, access is easy, society is of the right type, and almost every consideration strengthens the judgment of the board and Conference in locating the college at this place. Since this institution is under the supervision of the church there is no hesitancy in urging earnest co-operation on the part of the ministry in the surrounding country. Our appeal is earnest. We propose to place the standard of instruction high, that they who graduate here may prove themselves worthy of honors conferred, and thereby honor themselves, the college and the world. Address J. W. ADKISSON, au14 3m President.

CRAB ORCHARD SPRINGS COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES, CRAB ORCHARD SPRINGS, KENTUCKY.

Messrs. Shelby & Thorel, Proprietors.

REV. JOHN F. TARRANT, A. M., AND MRS. S. F. H. TARRANT, PRINCIPALS, With a full Corps of Assistants.

Session Begins September 15, 1873, AND ENDS JUNE 17, 1874.

To Southern Methodist parents I would call attention to this institution. Convinced that here the Southern people would find every requirement in the way of elegance, comfort, health and economy in the education of their daughters, my wife and myself readily consented, at the solicitation of the proprietors, to assume its control. We are southern people, and had been teaching in Alabama and Mississippi eighteen years previous to our removal to Kentucky. We have over a thousand pupils in the South. Desiring a favorable location and opportunities for doing good, we readily consented to the removal. Send your daughters to Crab Orchard Springs. Our college building is the finest south of the Ohio river. Our equipments are of that of any other in the Gulf States. It is lighted with gas, will be warmed by steam, with water pipes running through the entire building, has numerous bath-rooms, and every other convenience of a modern city hotel. The building has been newly equipped—every room elegantly carpeted and furnished. Only two pupils in a room.

Full board and tuition, only $250 per scholastic year, without any extra charges.

We challenge the strictest inquiry. Send for pamphlets, containing every information. We are Methodists, and wish to obtain the patronage of our Methodist brethren. Address THE PRINCIPALS. au23 3t

AUGUSTA FEMALE SEMINARY, STAUNTON, VIRGINIA.

Miss Mary J. Baldwin, Principal.

The academic term of this institution begins on the third Wednesday in SEPTEMBER, and closes the middle of the following June.

This is the largest first-class institution in Virginia, and has a corps of upward of thirty officers and teachers. The English course is as thorough as it is extensive.

Advantages for Music and Languages cannot be surpassed. Seven music teachers, four instrumental and three vocal—are constantly employed, whose reputation has extended as far as the school is known.

A native French gentleman and resident French governess teach pupils to speak the language, as well as to read and write it. Both French and German are spoken at table by pupils studying those languages.

The buildings are convenient, comfortable and elegant, furnished with complete apparatus, and Pianos and Organs from the best factories in New York and Baltimore.

For further particulars apply to the Principal for catalogue. au21 4t

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE OF THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE, Summerfield, Alabama.

The Thirty-second session of this institution will commence on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873.

The special advantages embrace a healthy locality, pure water, good community, faithful, efficient teaching, economy, ample accommodations, spacious buildings, elegant grounds, large rooms, well ventilated and thoroughly warmed. Pupils here will not be permitted to suffer for anything which will promote their health and comfort. At all times they will be the recipients of the most unremitted kindness and attention, and will be guarded with parental solicitude. It is an institution where pupils will find a safe and pleasant home, surrounded with the purest influences and a religious atmosphere.

The expenses have been reduced as low as they can be made to sustain the institution. Board, $16 per month, and tuition, $40 per year. For catalogues, giving full particulars, address au21 6t A. D. McVOY, President.

1873-4.—VIRGINIA FEMALE INSTITUTE. CHARTERED 1841.—REORGANIZED 1848. Staunton, Virginia.

Rev. R. H. PHILLIPS, A. M., Principal; Rev. J. C. WILEAT, Vice Principal; assisted by a full corps of professors and teachers. The course of study is comprised in ten schools, viz.: English, Mathematics, Natural Sciences, History and English Literature, Languages, Moral Philosophy and Belles Lettres, Instrumental and Vocal Music, Elocution, Drawing and Painting, etc., Calisthenics and Physical Education.

☞ The institution is strictly first-class, with a very large first-class patronage from all the Southern States. For circulars of forty pages, references, terms, regulations and full information, address the Principal, or Hon. N. K. Trent, or Colonel W. H. Tams, Secretaries, Staunton, Va. au21 1m

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA. LAW DEPARTMENT.

J. H. Minor, LL. D., Prof. Com. and Stat. Law; S. O. Southall, LL. D., Prof. Equity and Law Merchant; International Law, etc. Session begins OCTOBER 1, 1873, and continues nine months. Instruction by text-books and lectures combined, illustrated by Moot-Court exercises. For catalogues apply (P. O. University of Va.) to WM. WERTENBAKER, Secretary of Faculty. au28 1m

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Three full courses of study—Classical, Scientific and Agricultural. Ten professors. Open to both sexes. Location healthful, beautiful, central. TUITION FREE. Other expenses very low. Accommodation for Four Hundred students. Send for catalogue, with full particulars, to the President, REV. JAMES CALDER, D. D., Agricultural College P. O., au21 4m Centre county, Pa.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, AT BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

The exercises of this school will be resumed on WEDNESDAY, the first of October next.

As the number of pupils is limited, it is desirable that all applications be made as early as possible. For circulars apply to W. H. N. MAGRUDER, au21 3m Baton Rouge, La.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE. OWNED BY LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Fall session will open on the Twenty-fourth of SEPTEMBER. Instruction thorough. Location healthy. Terms moderate. For catalogues, address CHAS. B. STUART, President, au21 4m Mansfield, Desoto parish, La.

VERONA FEMALE COLLEGE. REV. T. C. WIER, A. M., PRESIDENT.

LOCATION—On the Mobile and Ohio Railroad at Verona, Mississippi; pleasant, accessible and healthy.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

VIRGINIA FEMALE INSTITUTE, STAUNTON, VIRGINIA

Rev. R. H. Phillips, A. M., Principal.

Assisted by a full corps of Experienced Officers.

The Twenty-eighth annual session will commence SEPTEMBER 10, 1873.

The location is remarkably salubrious and beautiful. The buildings are spacious, elegant and comfortably furnished. The grounds (four acres) have extensive walks and shade trees.

The course of study is full, the standard of scholarship is high, and the classes under the care of experienced graduates of our best institutions.

The Department of Music is under the care of seven professors and teachers, and its facilities are seldom equaled and nowhere excelled. Twenty-five first-class instruments are in use.

French and German are taught by natives, and success in this department has been most satisfactory.

The terms are remarkably low for the advantages. Pupils represented fifteen States during the last term.

From Gen. R. E. Lee and Other Patrons.

The undersigned have had daughters educated at the Virginia Female Institute, in Staunton, Virginia, under the care of Rev. R. H. Phillips. They therefore know it to be an admirably-conducted and superior institution for young ladies, and they cordially recommend it to favor even beyond its past extensive patronage.

GEN. R. E. LEE, W. and L. U.
GEN. E. H. SMITH, V. M. I.
GEN. WM. N. PENDLETON, Lexington, Virginia.

From Hon. B. H. Walker, of Alabama.

Previous to my way a circular of your institution, and a two years' residence of my daughter in your family has given the unqualified cause for gratitude.

From (Hon.) Mrs. A. T. Spencer, of West Virginia.

I have prayed that your life might be spared to educate my youngest daughter—the fifth we have had under your care.

From Gov. R. E. Pinney, of Georgia.

To select a school for my daughter I personally inspected the most eminent institutions, even as far north as New York, and finally dwell upon yours. Her success justifies my choice.

From Hon. William Ballard Preston.

Committing my third daughter in your care, I thereby express my increased confidence, for I confess, as a Virginian, I am proud of your institution.

* * * From my own personal knowledge of the school, I cordially commend it as one of the very best female schools, within my knowledge, in the Southern States.

For catalogues address the Principal, or Hon. N. K. Trent or Colonel William H. Tams,

The Child's Corner.

MOTHER'S DOLLY.

BY GEORGE COOPER.

Mother's dolly, what a treasure!
Twenty years and out of date!
What a bonnet, such a size!
What a funny pair of eyes!

Twas a beauty then, 'tis said,
Mother often to a child
Nursery at the same time;
Now the legs and arms are gone!

Could it ever stand on wheels?
Very much it did resemble
As the fashions would allow,
Ink spots make the teeth of brown!

I declare, it looks so queer
Sitting up in my dolly chair
Little I have much taste in dress
In these days, I must confess.

If I dared to take a peep
Into the cupboard where it sleeps,
Why the boys are sorry one
Would be always poking fun.

Yet I'll dress it up with care
And it shall have a rocking chair
For mine dolly once to me
Must be grandmother to me.

Broken Things.

Harry Vince sat at the table with his face in his hands, looking very miserable and gloomy. Uncle Fred came in at that moment and looked quietly at him.

"Well, Harry, what is the matter?" he said presently.

"I think you can see what is the matter, uncle," said Harry, pointing to some fragments of porcelain that lay on the table.

"You have had an accident, I suppose?"

"Yes; a very bad one too."

"What is broken?"

"A very beautiful inkstand which the boys in our class gave me."

"How did it happen?"

"I was busy making this ship for Charlie, and got so interested in it that I forgot the inkstand which stood on the table. I do not quite know how the accident occurred, but somehow I pushed the inkstand off the table and it fell on the floor. Even that would not have broken it, I think, but there happened to be a large pebble which I had brought in, and placed just where the inkstand fell, and of course this trouble followed."

"The inkstand certainly seems much scattered."

"It is broken into more than half a dozen pieces."

"Have you tried to make the fragments fit together? Some wonderful things are accomplished in the way of mending with cement."

"But this inkstand cannot be mended. The pieces will not fit in closely enough."

"What a pity!"

"It is, indeed, a pity! I would not have had it happen for any money. You see it is not only the value of the thing itself, but of course I should like to have kept it forever in memory of the kindness of my school-fellows."

"Of course you would. Why did they make you the present?"

"Oh! it was a simple thing that caused it. You know I am a good swimmer, and some of the boys cannot swim at all. Well, one day a little lad fell into the pond. I do not suppose he would have been drowned even if I had not been there; but I happened to see the accident, and sprang in after him."

"Very good; and I suppose the boys thought it a brave action, which deserved to be rewarded?"

"Yes, they said so; and a few days afterward they came in a body and presented me with the inkstand."

"It seems to have been very handsome."

"It was, very. And when I think that by my own carelessness the thing is spoiled, it makes me feel quite furious with myself."

"I do not wonder at that, Harry."

"I would not mind so much if it could anyhow be stuck together."

"'All the king's horses and all the king's men Cannot put Humpty Dumpty together again.'"

"That is it, you see; and it is very trying. I feel as if I shall never forgive myself for my folly."

"I suppose a little thought might have prevented the accident?"

"Certainly. If the inkstand had been in its place in my room, instead of standing on the table, it would not have happened. If I had not been making the ship in this room, where I certainly ought not to have been making it, the inkstand would be whole at this moment. Or if I had not foolishly brought that big stone here the consequences would have been less distressing."

Then there were three ways of preventing the occurrence, if only you had thought of either one of them?"

"Yes."

"Well, Harry, my boy, I am truly sorry for you. But I think that, after all, the accident, though it has pained you so much, may possibly do you good in the end."

"That is so like you, Uncle Fred.! But I do not want to be done good to if the process must be unpleasant."

"Very likely not, Harry; but the great Teacher does not wait to ask us whether we want his lessons or not. He simply sees our need, and gives us what is necessary."

"But you do not suppose, uncle, that God sent this trouble for my good?"

"I am sure he permitted it to come."

"But it was my own fault."

"Yes; and he often makes use of troubles that are of our own bringing in order that we may be profited."

"Can any good possibly come out of our own sin and humiliation?"

"Oh! yes, I think so. A boy does wrong, and the consequences are very painful both to himself and to all who care for him. But his own sufferings make him thoughtful, and he feels ashamed of his weakness and folly, and resolves to be better. Having discovered the fact that he is much worse than he thought himself to be, he asks God's grace for the future. The result is that he is henceforth a better and stronger lad."

"Yes, I see. But what of my broken inkstand?"

"Well, it may at least remind you of many other things that are broken through carelessness and forgetfulness. Did you ever break a promise, Harry?"

Harry's face became more red as his uncle's eyes were fixed on it.

"Yes, uncle. I am afraid I have broken my promises sometimes."

"You once promised an old man that you would go into his house for a few minutes every day, and read a chapter from the Bible to him. When did you last go?"

"I am ashamed to say that I have not been for a fortnight."

"The last time you went you began to read the seventeenth of John, and the old man enjoyed the words, for they seemed like life to him. But a playmate called you, and you went away hastily, promising that you would return in the afternoon and finish. The man waited, listening and longing for the sound of your footstep, all the rest of that day. He quite expected you, and every person who came near his door caused him to look up with eager hopefulness. But you did not go on that day or on the next, and the slow hours passed away and left the man without the comfort of the soothing words of Jesus."

Harry started up and put on his hat.

"O uncle! I am very sorry and ashamed of myself. I will go at once to the man and beg him to forgive me."

Uncle Fred laid his hand on Harry's arm.

"It is too late, my boy. Your promise is like your ink-stand—it is broken past repair."

"What do you mean, uncle?"

"The old man died yesterday. Almost his last words were those of regret at your long absence."

Poor Harry! He was utterly cast down by the news, but I think he will try not to break things in future. London Christian World.

One Way to Be Happy.

"Hush!" whispered Teddie, with his finger on his lips, "papa is asleep."

"Well, what if he is?" said Horrie, puffing and out of breath; "I guess I am going to have my kite."

"You must not come in now," whispered Teddie through the door-crack, holding the door as tightly as possible with his little chubby hand. "I am keeping everybody away: I'll get the kite."

So Horrie stuck his hands in his pockets, and whistled and waited, swinging round this way and that way, first on one foot and then on the other.

"Hush!" whispered Teddie slipping the kite through the crack. "Your boots squeak, they do."

But away scampered Horrie, clicking his heels at every step, untangling his bobs and fixing his string, and stumbling over Aunt Susan's rocking-chair, carrying a latter every inch of the way.

Hardly had the door-latch clicked behind him when a merry little voice, laughing in great glee, came nearer and nearer up the lane and in at the bowed-up shutters. "There she comes now," said Teddie to himself, peeping through the lattice. "I'll just go this minute and meet her."

But before he could tip-toe to the door the big latch in the hall came up with a click, and a bustling, frizzle-headed little girl came bouncing in, just commencing some exclamation, when she spied Teddie on his tip-toes and his finger on his lip.

"My! what's the matter, Teddie?" she said, all earnestness in a minute; "has mamma got that dreadful headache again?"

"No," he said, laughing and pulling her out the door, and further and further along the porch, and peeping into the tiny lunch-basket that was brimful of red cherries. "You did get them! What a lot! Why, no, nobody is sick; only papa came in from his work so tired-looking, and when he sat down on the settee I got him a pillow, without saying anything, and tucked it up in a bunch in the corner, and in two minutes he was sound, sound asleep; and I've been keeping everybody still, so that he could get a good long rest."

"And you never came to get a single cherry. Oh, my, but we had lots and lots and lots!—and Lucy Watson! she got twice as many as I did; and you could have had some too if you just had come right on after Lucy and me up the road, as you said you would."

Teddie looked very sober as she went on: "And now you cannot have any at all, for Mike has picked the very last, single one he can, because he's going to Denvers to market, and nobody can get them but Mike; and, beside, mamma will not let you go when there is nobody there like Lucy Watson and me to see to you."

The tears were pretty nearly in Teddie's eyes; but he tried to keep them back, and still the frizzled, brown head went on bobbing up and down, and every way over the cherry-basket, while the tongue trotted on, too, as fast as possible.

"You see I could not spare you mine, for I must have them for luncheon to-morrow. I might spare you four, may-be, and may be Lucy might spare you six; that makes"—counting on her fingers—"let me see, why, it would be quite a lot! six and four make ten; but I just do think you might have gone to get your own and"—

"But, sister," broke in Teddie, "I don't want yours a bit, only just to taste. I did want to go, but then you know papa was so tired, and there was nobody to take care about the noise; and you must not speak so loud now; it will just wake him right up, after all."

But, as it happened, papa had been awake several minutes and had come to the window just in time to see the little frizzle-head thrown back laughing and shaking at the idea of anybody so little as Teddie staying home from the cherry-tree to take care of anybody so big as papa; in time, too, to see a tear roll down the little brown cheek, as Teddie tip-toed back to the hall door, his heart almost breaking between thinking of the lost cherries and of being so little he could do no good to any one so big as papa. But when Teddie peeped softly in the door and saw papa looking bright and refreshed after his good sleep, and felt the kiss which said, "My little Teddie has done all, all this for me," plainer than any words could, he forgot all about cherries and about being so very little, and knew that to give happiness was in truth to receive it; and that, though only "little Teddie," he had done papa good.—New York Observer.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Ladies and Honey-Bees.

There are thousands of widows with children, and other females, who need additional and suitable employment to increase their comforts and elevate their position. To meet the necessities of such the following statements of Mrs. E. S. Tupper, of Iowa, to the Department of Agriculture, are very suggestive: "Within the last four years many women have turned their attention to bee-keeping as an occupation—pleasant, easily managed, and remunerative. We are glad to know that in every instance which has come to our knowledge success the most marked has attended the undertaking. From reports that have been made to us we condense the following instances: One young lady who had been teaching for several years, and whose health had failed, undertook the care of her father's bees, twelve colonies in number, that had never been profitably managed. Under her care the first year, they increased to thirty colonies, and the third year after she took them in charge she sold $1,200 worth of honey, and had in the fall fifty-four strong colonies in good hives. She says: 'The time I devoted to them I did not miss, and the pleasure afforded by the work was so great that I would enjoy it even if no profit were derived.' A widow of scanty means invested $50 in ten poor colonies, and about as much more for ten good hives for her bees. She got her money back the first season, and $30 over. The second year she received $600 for honey sold, and had thirty strong colonies in the fall. The largest apiary in all the West is managed entirely by women, who rear for market Italian queens, at a large profit, besides producing honey in a wholesale manner. Miss Kate Grimm, of Jefferson, Wisconsin, managed one of her father's apiaries of one hundred and eighty colonies, which she soon doubled in number, and sold $2,032 worth of honey one year, and $1,634 worth the next. She is a school-teacher, and says from her experience a person can earn ten times as much by keeping bees as by teaching school."

THE FOOT OF A HORSE.—The human hand has often been taken to illustrate divine wisdom—and very well. But have you ever examined your horse's hoof? It is hardly less curious in its way. Its parts are somewhat more complicated, yet their design is simple and obvious. The hoof is not, as it appears to the careless eye, a mere lump of insensible bone fastened to the leg by a joint. It is made up of a series of thin layers or leaves of horn, about five hundred in number, and nicely fitted to each other, and forming a lining to the foot itself. Then there are as many more layers, belonging to what is called the "coffin-bone," and fitted into this. These are elastic. Take a quire of paper and insert the leaves one by one into those of another quire, and you will get some idea of the arrangement of the several layers. Now the weight of the horse rests on as many elastic springs as there are layers in his four feet—about four thousand; and all this is contrived not only for the conveyance of his own body, but for whoever burdens may be laid on him.

INFLUENCE OF FOOD UPON POULTRY AND EGGS.—There is no better fattening material for poultry than corn meal, especially if mixed with milk, and we notice that it has come to be used largely in some of the poultry-yards of France. When insects are not procurable animal food in some form is desirable; and here again we see that although poultry devours the flesh of the dead horses which have been flayed in France, it has been found to impart a disagreeable taste to the fowls so fed.

Fowls, like hogs, are supposed to be universal scavengers; but, as with hogs, neither delicate nor healthy flesh can be made from them if fed upon garbage.—Great care should be exercised in the matter, for the influence of the food upon the quality not only of the meat, but of the new eggs, has, in too many cases, not been duly appreciated.—Maryland Farmer.

THE CANKER-WORM.—A correspondent of the Agriculturist, who for twenty years had tried many experiments to exclude the canker-worm from his trees, has come to the conclusion that this is simplest and best: He makes bands of sheathing paper six or eight inches wide, tacks them around the trunks of the trees, and then covers them with refuse printers' ink. The ink costs twelve and a half cents per pound, requires from two to four applications each season, and the whole cost is about ten cents a tree annually.

STEWED KIDNEYS.—Cut one beef kidney in small pieces, fry in butter five minutes, drain off the gravy and put in a stew-pan a small piece of butter; when melted add a teaspoonful of flour; stir until brown; add half a teaspoonful of soup stock and the gravy from the kidneys; stir until boiling. Add a little chopped parsley, a squeeze of lemon, salt and pepper to taste; put in the kidneys, make them hot, but do not let them boil. Sheep's kidneys can be done in the same way.

FRENCH ROLLS.—Warm one ounce of fresh butter in a gill of milk, add a large tablespoonful of yeast and a little salt. Sift one pound of flour into a pan, pour in and stir well the milk, and let the dough rise in a warm place, covering it with a thick cloth. When light, knead well and form into rolls. Put these in a well-floured pan in a warm place to rise, and bake in a quick oven.

APPARATUS AND CABINET.

The College possesses a valuable set of Philosophical, Astronomical and Chemical Apparatus, also a considerable Mineralogical and Geological Cabinet. The apparatus includes a Theodolite, Compass, Chronometer, Atwood's Machine, Whirling Tables, Electrical Machine, Air Pumps, numerous combinations of the Mechanical Powers, Batteries, Chemical Tests, etc., sufficient for a full and extended course of observations and experiments. Steps have been taken by the Board of Trustees to put these in thorough repair.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

There are two regular Literary Societies connected with the Institution. These are of much use to young men acquiring a liberal education—improving them in the art of public speaking, making them in some degree familiar with the proceedings of deliberative bodies, and in cultivating habits of business. Each society has a convenient hall and a well-selected Library—about seven hundred volumes each, which, added to the College Library of two thousand volumes, make about five thousand volumes in the college.

BUILDINGS.

The Trustees are determined to continue the repairs on the buildings till completed. The Center Building is a noble specimen of architectural beauty and adaptation to the purposes of education. The wings, built of solid brick, present each a front of two hundred feet, with upper and lower galleries the entire length, supported by [illegible] columns and with the center making in front a colonnade front of seven hundred feet.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

In the Preparatory Department students are fitted for regular college classes or may obtain a thorough English or commercial education.
Its FACULTY are men of experience and success in teaching.

New Orleans Markets.

From the New Orleans Price Current.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the thirtieth ultimo:

|---|---|
| Louisiana and Mississippi | bales .. 470 |
| Mobile | 75 |
| Total | 551 |

On Saturday the market was quiet throughout the day, and the sales were confined to 20 bales at prices indicating no quotable variation. This closed the movement of the commercial year 1872-3. On Monday the new year commenced with but little actual movement, the trade being busily engaged in forwarding the annual returns. The sales were restricted to 45 bales, and the market released nominally at previous rates, except for clean lots of ordinary and average good ordinary, which were in request and commanded fuller prices. On Tuesday the inquiry was more general, and the indications were that, had there been a better supply, the sales would have been of liberal extent, but, the movement being restricted by the scarcity of the kinds wanted, the business did not exceed 400 bales. Ordinary, strict ordinary and average good ordinary being in good request, with very limited offerings, were held about ⅛c. higher, and the actual sales showed a marked improvement, but strict good ordinary and the higher grades were without any quotable variation. The business included ordinary at 12¼c., strict ordinary to good ordinary at 13@13¼c., good ordinary at 13¾, 15-16@14c., strict good ordinary at 14¼, 15-16@14⅝c., and low middling at 17-16c. There is no quotable difference between new and old crop, but the former commands rather stronger prices.

The sales noted above make an aggregate for the past three days of 1,100 bales, against 1,127 for the corresponding time last week and 1,727 the week before, but, dating from Monday, the commencement of the new year, they embrace only 800 bales.

The receipts proper since August 31 will reach 170 bales, against 2,366 last year.—Wednesday.

SUGAR.—There is very little demand, and the market is dull. The sales were confined to 20 hhds, fully fair on Saturday at 10⅜c., and 20 hhds, commoon run Monday on private terms. On Tuesday 58 hhds. Demarara, received the day before, sold to a dealer on private terms.

MOLASSES.—There is none coming in from plantation, and no demand for the stock in the sheds.

CORN.—The supply is light, with a fair demand, at unchanged prices. On Tuesday 5,515 sacks sold at 65@66c. for mixed, white mixed and yellow mixed, 64c. for white, and 66½c. for St. Charles county white.

OATS.—Have been in fair supply and moderate demand, at previous prices. On Saturday the sales comprised 1,250 sacks at 43c. for new in poor order, and 45c. for choice St. Louis. On Monday 1,800 sacks sold at 45c. for ordinary in second-hand sacks, 46c. for choice St. Louis and for choice Galena. On Tuesday 1,900 sacks sold at 45c. for ordinary, and 45c. for choice St. Louis.

BRAN.—The supply is fair, with a moderate demand. On Saturday and Monday 1,150 sacks sold at 80c. for ordinary in poor order, and 85@87½c. for choice. On Tuesday 700 sacks sold at 85c. at the railroad depot, and 85@87½c. on the landing.

PORK.—There is scarcely any demand, but the stock on hand is very small, and held strongly. New mess is held at $18 and sold at $17 ₱ bbl. On Saturday 160 bbls. new mess sold on private terms, and on Monday 25 bbls. at $17.75 ₱ bbl. New mess is retailing at $18.25@18.50 ₱ bbl. On Tuesday a lot of 140 bbls. new mess sold at $17.50 ₱ bbl.

BACON.—Is dull, but there is very little offering, and it is held strongly. Most of the stock on hand is held out of the market for higher prices. On Tuesday the sales were confined to 13 casks jowls at 5¾c., and 35 do. clear sides at 11½c. ₱ lb. Shoulders are quoted at 9@9½c., clear rib sides 11½c., clear sides 11¾c. ₱ lb.

HAMS.—Are in good supply and dull. Choice sugar-cured are quoted at 15@15½c., ordinary brands 14@14½c. ₱ lb. On Monday a lot of 15 tierces sold, to arrive, on private terms.

LARD.—On Tuesday 40 tierces refined sold, in job lots, at 9½c. ₱ lb.

Special Notices.

NOTICE.—There will be a camp meeting on the Farmerville circuit, at Alabama church, half way between Homer and Farmerville, commencing on the nineteenth of September. The people are invited to come, bringing their tents and provisions with them. The ministers will be provided for.

H. PARVIN, Pastor.

MIDWAY CAMP MEETING, Floyd and Delhi circuit, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday, October 1, 1873. Arrangements have been made to establish a public restaurant for the accommodation of those who may prefer it to tenting on the ground. Meals will be furnished at fifty cents. Horses will be fed and taken care of at reasonable rates. In case families desire board they should write and make arrangements with P. W. DeFrance or James A. Leggett, Midway, previous to the commencement, so as to avoid inconveniences that otherwise might occur. All ministers of the gospel are invited, and will be cared for free of charge. Ministers should report to Joel T. Hayes, presiding elder, or G. M. Liverman, preacher in charge, as soon as they arrive, who will see that they are provided with comfortable lodging. Brethren, remember in whom you trust, and that nothing good has ever been accomplished without great effort. Heaven is to be gained only by overcoming.

G.

THE New Hope and Pleasant Ridge camp meeting, for DeKalb circuit, Mississippi Conference, will begin on Friday night before the second Sunday in October next. Ministerial help is solicited from the adjoining works. Conveyance to the camp ground from Lauderdale station, Mobile and Ohio railroad, will be furnished on Friday to ministers coming by railroad.

D. G. W. ELLIS, Pastor.

THE District Sunday-School Convention will be held at Hazlehurst, September 18. On the nineteenth there will be a union picnic. All the schools in the district are requested to send delegates—at least four from each school. Superintendents will please inform Rev. C. Chamberlin of the number and names of delegates to be provided for. All schools desiring to attend and contribute to the picnic will report to Rev. C. Chamberlin, who will hand the report to the committee of arrangements.

W. E. M. LINFIELD, P. E.

THERE will be a camp meeting at Lewis' Creek, Alabama, beginning on Friday morning before the third Sunday in September. Ministers of the gospel will be properly provided for, and are cordially invited to attend. The meeting is to be self-supporting—that is, each family goes in covered wagon or provided with tent, and provides for itself. All except ministers who attend must provide for themselves unless they have special invitations. The camp ground is near Slade's station, on the Mobile and Alabama Grand Trunk railroad. Conveyance for the preachers will be at the station on Thursday.

WILLIAM H. MORRIS, P. C.

CAMP MEETING.—The camp meeting on Big Creek, fifteen miles north of Alexandria, begins on Wednesday, October 1. Preachers are invited, and will be provided for. Others must come prepared to take care of themselves. Corn will be on hand at a moderate price;

F. WHITE, P. E.
J. F. WYNN.

CAMP MEETING.—Change of Time. The time of holding the camp meeting at China Grove, Bale county, Alabama, has been changed from Friday night before the second Sabbath in September to Friday night before the first Sabbath in October next. The friends of the camp meeting and ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church south are cordially and earnestly invited to attend.

A. DOWLING, P. C.

THERE will be a camp meeting on the Sparta and Ringgold circuit, five and a half miles east of Sparta, on the Vernon road, commencing on Thursday before the first Sunday in October next. We expect a good many tents, and hope to entertain the people well. We invite both preachers and people to attend.

DAVID A. BODDIE, P. C.

CAMP MEETING.—A camp meeting will commence at Smith's [illegible] and, Gaston circuit, Alabama Conference, near DeSotoville, Choctaw county, Alabama, on Friday, the third of October next. A cordial invitation is extended to ministerial brethren.

C. B. DEBOSE, P. C.

THERE will be a camp meeting at Spring Dale camp ground, Attalla circuit, Yazoo district, North Mississippi Conference, commencing on Friday before the fourth Sunday in September. The preachers and people are invited.

S. D. TERRY, P. C.

CAMP MEETING.—There will be a camp meeting at the Line Wood camp ground, Spring Hill circuit, Meridian district, commencing on the twenty-sixth of September, 1873, which is Friday before the fourth Sunday in September. We invite all ministers who can do so to assist us. Line Wood is about twenty-two miles from Lauderdale station, Mississippi. Brethren wishing to attend will please address me at Daleville, Lauderdale county, Mississippi.

J. D. HAY, P. C.

CAMP MEETINGS.—Our camp meetings will take place at the following times and places:

Bethel will commence on Friday night before the third Sabbath of September next.

Beulah will commence on Friday night before the first Sabbath of October next.

All are urged to come, but come prepared to take care of yourselves. Of course the preachers and their families will be cared for.

JAMES E. BRADLEY, P. C.,
Pleasant Hill Ct., Louisiana Conference.

Appointments for Quarterly Meetings.

NOTICE.—The Publishing Committee of the ADVOCATE gave it as their opinion that the insertion of the notices of Quarterly Conferences once or twice was sufficient, and, as the space of the paper is valuable, they passed a resolution recommending that they "be not inserted more than once or twice." Our friends who are interested in these appointments will take due notice thereof, as we propose to be governed by the resolution in future.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 21.—W. W. Peabody, superintendent of the Marietta and Cincinnati railroad, telegraphs to the city, from the scene of the accident, that the collision was due to the watch of the conductor of the freight train being fifteen minutes slow. He says the conductor and engineer ran away as soon as the accident occurred, and adds later: "We have arrested the conductor, and have a warrant for the engineer of the freight train. We intend to prosecute them for murder."

CINCINNATI, Sept. 3.—The fourth Cincinnati Industrial Exposition was opened to-night in the presence of a very large audience. The doors were opened at seven. Ten minutes before eight a procession consisting of ex-Secretary Cox, who was to deliver the address, Mayor Johnston, the presidents of the Chamber of Commerce and the Board of Trade, President Blymyer, of the exposition, and the exposition commissioners, accompanied by members of the press, and headed by Currar's band, formed and passed through the various departments.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, Sept. 4.—The regular semi-annual conference of the churches of Jesus Christ of the Latter-Day Saints convened here to-day. Several thousand "saints," from all parts of the world, were in attendance, and it is expected that the meeting will be unusually interesting, as Joseph Smith, son of the founder, is present, and is leading the meetings.

AUSTIN, Sept. 5.—On the fifth ballot Richard Coke, of Waco, received six hundred and fifty-nine votes, more than two-thirds of the entire vote cast, and he was declared the nominee of the convention.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The lowest bid for head-stones for Federal graves was $900,000. There are over two hundred and fifty thousand identified graves.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 8.—Colonel B. R. Taylor, a noted Utah miner, just returned from the vicinity of Baxter Springs and Joplin, reports great excitement there over the richest discoveries of lead yet made at Cornwell diggings. They are taking out pure and solid nuggets of lead weighing from four to seven tons within eight feet of the surface.

AUSTIN, Sept. 8.—Conflicting reports come in regarding the prevalence of yellow fever in Galveston, Houston and Shreveport.

It is rumored that the Central, International and Great Northern and Texas railroads have been blockaded.

It is impossible to ascertain anything of a reliable character. A perfect panic prevails in Galveston and Houston, and the north-bound trains to-day and last night were crowded with people flying from both places.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The Republicans have carried Maine by about 11,000 majority. Their majority last year was 16,037.

The $15,500,000 awarded to this government at Geneva was to-day paid into the treasury by Secretary Fish, in one bond.

JACKSON, MISS., Sept. 9.—The Mississippi State Grange assembled here to-day. There are upward of three hundred granges in the State, and they were nearly all represented; including about twenty lady delegates. Colonel Hooker will deliver, by invitation, an address on the subject of the granges on the twelfth instant.

FOREIGN.

PANAMA, Aug. 24.—Up to the eighth instant the news from Guatemala continued to be highly satisfactory. The revolution carried on so long by a chief called Mulgar, aided by Palacios and others, against the Liberal government of Guatemala has at last been brought to an end by the active measures of the present constitutional president. Mulgar, Bachito and other chiefs have all been captured, and will doubtless be shot.

The filibustering party under Palacios, which effected a landing on the coast of Honduras and tried to revolutionize Central America in the interests of the clerical party, have had to re-embark on board of the American steamer General Sherman, but the steamer continues to hover off the coast of Honduras and Guatemala.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—By a decree of the Emperor the names of distinguished generals of the German army have been bestowed on the forts of Strasburg, Metz and other places in the territory acquired from France.

LUCERNE, Sept. 3.—M. Thiers, who is now sojourning here, was called upon yesterday by the French residents of Lucerne, and in response to their greeting addressed them at some length. He said he had devoted his life to the establishment of liberty in France. He had endeavored to establish it under the monarchy, but had not succeeded, and he had come to the conclusion that the one excludes the other. He had therefore become a Republican, and was resolved to devote the remainder of his life to furthering the permanent establishment of a republican form of government in France.

BAYONNE, September 4.—It is announced upon authority that there are now about forty thousand Carlists under arms in Spain. They are making arrangements to establish a cannon foundery near the town of Tortosa or Tarazona.

MADRID, Sept. 5.—The Insurgent junta in Carthagena is sending emissaries, who are plentifully provided with money, to Barcelona to organize a movement in favor of a separate government for Catalonia.

MADRID, Sept. 6.—In the session of the Cortes to-day Senor Castellar further demanded, as the conditions upon which he would accept office, that he be empowered to increase the purchase of five thousand rifles, to organize the militia, and to impose a forced loan, or be furnished the means by which he could obtain five hundred million pesos to meet the expenses of the war against the Carlists and Intransigentes insurgents. He also demanded authority to suspend the constitutional guarantee and deprive the Ayuntamientos of the power they now exercise, when in his judgment such measures become necessary. The Cortes unanimously voted to confer all the powers demanded.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—The French government has received notice from Berlin that France, having fulfilled all her engagements, the occupation of her territory by the German forces is legally ended. The evacuation of Verdun by the Germans has begun.

HAVANA, Sept. 7.—Last night the square of buildings known as the Plaza Vapor was reduced to ashes. The fire broke out simultaneously in the four corners of the square, and is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. The loss is estimated at over $8,000,000. It is reported that twenty lives were lost. The scenes around the burning square were exciting and terrible. Parents threw their children from balconies to save them from the flames.

MADRID, Sept. 8.—The Cortes today elected Senor Castellar president.

President Castellar has determined to make a supreme effort to crush the Carlist and Intransigentes insurrection, and has decided to call into active service seventy-five thousand men of the army and five hundred thousand of the militia. He believes that with this force it will be possible to establish peace in the country before spring. The number of Carlists and insurgents, notwithstanding their success, has been considerably reduced lately, and they are now capable of fighting in unimportant skirmishes only.

Senor Olozoga has arrived in this city, and Senor Sagosta is expected to reach here to-day.

THE British Wesleyan Conference met this year at Newcastle-on-Tyne. Rev. George T. Perks, M. A., was elected president by a vote of 320; next came Alexander McAuley, who received 27 votes; and Dr. Punshon 10. Rev. Gervase Smith, M. A., was elected secretary. He received 182 votes, and Rev. J. H. James 100. The committee on the Kinswood and Woodhouse-grove school met July 25; that on the children's fund, July 26; and the educational committee of review in the afternoon of the same day. Not having received our foreign files, we clip from the Christian Advocate the following summaries:

THE following dispatch was received by William S. Pike, Esq., yesterday, and is evidence of the situation our sister city is in. We sincerely hope the disease will speedily disappear.

SHREVEPORT, September 9, 1873.

To W. S. Pike, Vice President Howard Association, New Orleans:

We return our sincere thanks to the Howard Association of New Orleans for their kind offer, and say that the fever is epidemic, and on the increase, and that we would be glad to have experienced nurses, but have not the means at present to remunerate them; also five physicians, via Vicksburg.

THE Pensacola Express says: "The yellow fever prevailing at this time is not very dangerous, and if it had not been for the insane panic among our citizens, from so light a cause, the excitement in regard to it would have passed away before this. Of the six cases mentioned as yellow fever cases, all are well and out except one."

The Savannah News of the fifth instant says: "Information has been received that the yellow fever has broken out in Tortugas. On the twenty-fourth ultimo there were nine cases, four of them fatal, genuine black vomit."

BELLEVUE CIRCUIT (ST. LANDRY,) LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: We have just closed a very interesting and successful protracted meeting at Bellevue church, which commenced on Saturday, the sixteenth instant. From that time until the close our meetings were well attended with the most attentive hearers.

Bro. B. F. White, our presiding elder, held Quarterly Conference and preached. Bros. B. J. Baldwin and C. A. Frasee, from Opelousas, and Bro. J. V. Pointer, from Plaquemine, were also with us and labored zealously. Best of all, God was with us.

Many were made to mourn on account of their sins, sought the Lord, and it is believed that at least sixteen found him as their Savior. Ten were received into the church, and we might add that they are among the most promising of this community. We expect others.

WILLIAM HART, P. C.

BELLEVUE, August 25, 1873.

ABBEVILLE, PARISH OF VERMILION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: Please say to the brethren and readers of the ADVOCATE that the good Lord has been with us on this work. There have been seasons of refreshment from the presence of the Lord frequently among our people, but at times more marked than others.

On Saturday, the twenty-third of August, the third quarterly meeting for this circuit was held at the Prairie Gregg church. Our beloved elder, Rev. B. F. White, being quite sick, was absent. The meeting was protracted for five days, and resulted in greatly reviving the membership, some conversions, and fifteen accessions to the church; which, with fourteen previously received, makes a total of twenty-nine, up to this time, for this Conference year. Bro. T. B. White, from New Iberia, came to my assistance at Prairie Gregg, and worked mightily, in the Spirit of the Lord, for two or three days, and the Lord blessed his labors. I love to work with such men of God.—"Neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth; but God, that giveth the increase." To God be all the glory. R. S. I.

GREENSBORO DISTRICT CONFERENCE, ALABAMA CONFERENCE. Mr. Editor: The Greensboro District Conference, including the fifth Sabbath in August, and held at Plantersville, Alabama, was both pleasant and profitable.

All the preachers in the district were present except one, and there was an average attendance of delegates. Though we were not favored with the presence of a Bishop, yet under the efficient leadership of the presiding elder, Dr. A. H. Mitchell, all the interests of the district received proper attention. The preaching of the occasion was marked by "sound speech" and earnestness. On Sunday night, after a sermon from Bro. R. S. Woodward, four or five young persons presented themselves as candidates for church-membership, and we felt our hearts moved to see among the number a son and daughter of our deceased brother, Edwin Baldwin. God's blessing be upon these children, for the memory of their departed father lingers with fragrance and freshness upon many of our hearts!

Rev. H. D. Moore, with face cheerful and pleasant, favored us with his presence several days, preaching, during his stay, a sermon of much excellence, and looking with prudent care after the interests of the Alabama Conference Female College, at Tuskegee, Alabama.

Bro. A. D. McVoy was also present, making an earnest presentation of the status and prospects of the Summerfield Female College, and preaching a sermon suggestive and profitable. Of course Dr. A. S. Andrews, the energetic president of the Southern University, permitted the broad light of his natural and intellectual countenance to fall upon us. He too, as usual, was giving diligence to secure increased prosperity to the University, over whose interests he presides with ability and success. The sermon of Dr. Andrews, on Sabbath morning, was good to the use of edifying to many, and the sacramental service following led some to believe that the Master was indeed at the feast. The love-feast was not forgotten, but was observed at an early hour on the holy Sabbath, with spiritual profit. In Plantersville is the residence of Prof. D. C. B. Connerly, who, with his neighbors, showed us so much kindness and Christian hospitality that memory will ever revert with pleasure to our sojourn among them. Dr. Mark S. Andrews made us a visit from Selma, and gave us the valuable aid of his counsel in our deliberations.

The following brethren were elected delegates and alternates to the next session of the Alabama Conference, viz.: Delegates—Judge A. A. Coleman, Dr. C. M. Howard, Dr. S. P. Smith and Rev. D. H. Smith. Alternates—B. A. Rush, J. S. Hunsberger and J. L. Chughton.

CAMDEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The Camden District Conference has just closed its third session. The conference was held in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in that appropriately-named village, Pleasant Hill, Dallas county, Alabama. The united testimony of all the members was that we had a truly pleasant time on this Pleasant Hill, with its pleasant citizens. Really, it was delightful to be there.

The hospitality of the community was commensurate to the occasion. The Baptists and Presbyterians are largely in the majority here, and they seemed to have felt called on to put forth their best efforts of head and heart to render the occasion one of pleasure to all visitors, and, over all, to make it a spiritual blessing to themselves. There are four denominations represented in this little place—Cumberland and Old School Presbyterians, Baptist and Methodist—and, while they all stand firmly to their churches, they live in peace and friendship among themselves. Doubtless one cause which contributes largely to this general good-will is the musical tastes and culture of the people. The power and "service of song" is here duly appreciated, and in no community that I know of are there so many good singers, male and female, in proportion to the population, as here. Organs are in all the churches. But I cannot think that even Bishop Pierce would object to the choirs of Pleasant Hill; for while they can, and do when called on, render in fine style the grandest anthems of our tune-books, yet left to themselves they select plain, simple, gentle-flowing airs, and then "sing with the spirit and understanding." The good Bishop doubtless would have rejoiced to have heard them sing, "How firm a foundation," "How tedious and tasteless the hours," "How happy every child of grace," "Jesus, lover of my soul," and many other old familiar hymns, to the same good tunes he learned in his boyhood. How much of this disposition to sing the old hymns and tunes is due to Misses Moore and Simpson, the principal organists, I know not; but sure I am that these ladies appear to think and feel that God is to be praised and worshiped in song, and that he is present, and they are in his house.

The conference convened on Thursday, August 7, with Rev. J. W. Shores, the presiding elder, in the chair. Bro. Shores has no committees to make reports, but taking the order of business, as indicated in the Discipline, went into a searching examination of the condition of the work. Pastors and laymen were closely questioned, thereby bringing out many points and facts that could not have been reached in written reports of committees.

The subject of family altars was brought before us, and the reports indicate great neglect in this matter. The number of families on a circuit of large membership who regularly hold family prayer is surprisingly small, pastors reporting on some works as low as only three families holding family prayer regularly. There was one report that was widely variant from all others. The Rev. J. U. Scott, preacher in charge on the Farmersville circuit, reported that out of the forty families constituting his charge, twenty-three hold family prayer regularly. Class and prayer meetings are held regularly at each appointment on this work. A layman said Bro. Scott had not missed a single appointment at his church in four years. Other ministers are doing well, the district showing signs of much improvement. Upward of one hundred have joined the church on the district since the year began. Twenty-four adults and twenty-three infants have been baptized.

The Sunday schools are in good condition generally; over seven hundred Sunday school pupils. The conference manifested strong opposition to union Sunday schools, speakers urging as an objection that from these schools and their supporters were gathered the recruits for Mormonism, which has taken root in the bounds of the district. Mirabile dictu! Yet it is true that the Mormons are among us, and are drawing members from evangelical churches. We need a stronger missionary force in the region where these facts exist. The reports to the conference showed much unoccupied territory, or rather territory where more laborers are needed.

The district has raised up to date $282.55 for missions, and doubtless will raise more. The plan proposed by the Mission Board at Nashville was not favored by the conference—i. e., they passed resolutions asking to have the present plan to continue.

The reports show much trouble on the work caused by whisky-drinking and selling. On nearly every work there was trouble caused by whisky. The following resolution was passed:

Whereas, There is a disposition upon the part of many members of our church to take advantage of the absence of any specific law against selling ardent spirits; And whereas, There seems to be a difficulty among our ministers in meeting such cases; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the ministers and lay delegates to the next Annual Conference from this district be and are hereby requested to urge the Annual Conference to petition the next General Conference to enact a more specific and efficient law to eradicate this evil from the church.

The resolution called forth a most hearty "Amen" from all.

Last year the district organized a Ministerial Educational Aid Society. It reports the sum of $156 in its treasury, which is to be applied to the payment of the expenses of a young man preparing for the ministry. The board of managers selected one who now has a father and a brother in this Conference as its beneficiary.

The delegates to the next Annual Conference are: W. W. Drane, R. W. Russell, Rev. M. Padgett and J. R. Watson. Alternates—K. L. Davis, C. C. Howard, M. N. Ethridge and A. D. Hart.

The next District Conference is to meet in Camden, Wilcox county.

Analysis of the Annual Report.

The following analysis, by the Rev. S. G. N. MacDonnell, of the annual report issued a few weeks since by the Board of Missions, will give the reader a very correct and comprehensive idea of the state of our missionary work:

"Having analyzed the annual report of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, for the fiscal year ending June 1, 1873, I submit the following statistical facts for the information of all who are interested in the missionary operations of the church.

"The parent Board of Missions, located at Nashville, has under control the Indian, German, China and Mexican missions, which look directly to the board for their support.

"The Indian missions are organized into a separate Conference, known as the Indian Mission Conference, comprising four districts, with the following statistical exhibit: Traveling preachers, 20; local preachers, 82; superannuated preachers, 3; members, 5,216; total ministers and members, 5,321; Sunday schools, 15; Sunday school scholars, 475.

"There are also two flourishing day schools in this Conference; one of them a manual labor school, sustained in part by the Missionary Board.

"The future prospects of this mission-field are very promising.

"The German missions, under the control of the board, are located in Texas, Louisiana, Maryland and Virginia; and the labors of the past year have been crowned with gracious success. They report as follows: Missions, 18; missionaries, 17; members, 833; Sunday schools, 13; Sunday school scholars, 522.

"This field is steadily increasing in interest, and gives promise of much fruitfulness in future.

"The China mission, under the control of the board, has a ministerial force of two missionaries, the Rev. Young J. Allen and the Rev. J. W. Lambuth, with their wives as helpers. There are also two native preachers, who are doing a good work among their countrymen. The total membership of our church in China is 79, 11 of whom were added to the church the last year. There are 3 mission stations, 3 boarding schools for boys, and 1 for girls, having 53 pupils. In Shanghai 2 Bible women are at work, reading the Scriptures to their country women, and there are 2 Sunday schools of about 40 persons.

"The Rev. Young J. Allen is still in the employ of the Chinese government as a teacher, and receives his salary from that source; but labors steadily for the spiritual good of the people. The superintendent, in his annual report, says: 'Upon the whole, we have good reason to be encouraged in our work, from the progress made during the past year, considering the embarrassments under which we have labored.'

"The Mexican mission was organized about six months since by Bishop Keener, who purchased a lot and suitable building in the city of Mexico, and placed a native preacher in charge. This promises to be one of the most inviting and important fields of missionary labor yet occupied by us.

"In addition to these mission-fields the board extends pecuniary help to the Pacific, Columbia, Los Angeles and Western Conferences, which are rapidly growing in strength, and before many years will be self-supporting.

| The total collections reported by the Annual Conferences for 1872 amounted to | $50,730 05 |
| Additional contributions sent direct to A. H. Redford, treasurer | 1,799 50 |
| Total receipts for the year | $52,529 55 |

"The disbursements of the board for the year ending June 1, 1873, are as follows:"

| Paid for support of China mission | $ 5,000 00 |
| Paid for support of German missions | 2,000 00 |
| Paid for support of Indian missions | 11,350 28 |
| Paid for support of Mexican missions | 4,000 00 |
| Paid for support of domestic missions in weak Conferences | 12,000 00 |
| Paid on old debt | 400 00 |
| Paid for salary, incidentals and traveling expenses | 3,000 00 |
| | $37,750 28 |

"The amount expended by the Annual Conferences for the support of the missions within their bounds is $57,384.22."

Let the reader add the following statistics taken from the domestic department, and his views of the operations of the board will be enlarged. This does not give a full statement, inasmuch as a number of Annual Conference boards failed to report; but, so far as heard from, the following may be relied upon as nearly correct: Number of missions, 267; number of churches, 426½; number of members, 36,436; received during the year, 4,955; baptisms—adults, 3,009; infants, 1,462; Sunday schools, 477; Sunday school scholars, 16,191.

A LIBERAL CONTRIBUTOR.—A friend, not a member of our church, sent a check the other day to the secretary for $250. His contributions are coming every year. Last year he contributed $500; then he gave, a few months ago, $100 for the China mission, and $100 for the Mexican mission, besides sundry donations. Nearly every enterprise set on foot by our board receives aid from this great-hearted Christian. Nor does he live in the bounds of the Southern Church, but in one of the Western States. God will bless and prosper the liberal soul.

TOUCHING.—While at the Summerville District Conference, a few days since, I received the following note: "When my little boy, James Read, was a baby, I gave him a dollar in gold. God took him from me the other day, so I give him the money too, and add another dollar in gold for my remaining boy, to be sent to Bro. Lambuth, in China. G. B. Baskerville." We tender to Bro. Baskerville our sincere sympathies. He has lately buried his excellent father, the Rev. John T. Baskerville, M. D., a man of great moral worth. Though God has called him home, he lived to see, before his departure, two of his sons enter the Christian ministry.

A year or two since Bro. F. B. Kerr, of Dancyville, Tennessee, gave the handsome sum of $300 to the cause of missions. On the thirtieth of July, 1873, he lost his aged and much-beloved wife. Sister Kerr was a native of Sumner county, Tennessee, and had been, at the time of her death, a Methodist for forty-four years. The Rev. A. R. Wilson, her pastor, says she was the mother of twelve children, nine of whom still live to mourn the loss of one of the best mothers. In her long and laborious pilgrimage religion was manifested in all the relations and duties of life, and when the last enemy came it was evident that she had not lived in vain, "neither labored in vain," but was anxious "to depart and be with Christ, which is far better." That was enough to move the hardest heart, when her nine living children, with the deeply-stricken husband, were called around her bed to receive her farewell blessing. Beginning with the oldest, and concluding with the youngest, she gave them such godly counsel and advice as none but a Christian mother could give. The husband is crushed, the children feel sad; but when they remember those last words sent back from the shadowy land (said her oldest son: "Ma, is the way clear?" "The happiest day of my life," and fell asleep in Jesus), then they bless God, and take courage. She has passed over the river, and rests under the shade of the trees. Some one has said: "Our people die well."

Books and Periodicals.

LIFE AND TIMES OF ALFRED THE GREAT. By Thomas Hughes, M. P. Revised by Attlens G. Haygood, D. D. Nashville, Tennessee: Published by A. H. Redford, agent, for the Methodist Episcopal Church South, 1873.

An interesting subject, and handled in a sprightly way. Mr. Hughes makes Alfred his ideal of justice, and a King whose life and character he would fain impress upon the political convictions of the present day. Not only for England, but for our own country is the work timely. For sale at Nashville and New Orleans.

A COMMENTARY, CRITICAL, EXPERIMENTAL AND PRACTICAL, ON THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS. By the Rev. Robert Jamieson, D. D., and others. Volume 4. Jeremiah Malachi. By the Rev. A. R. Fausset, A. M. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co.

This is a continuation of the four volumes heretofore noticed by us, and for some reason reaches us some time after the fifth volume. The distinctive theology of the work is, of course, Calvinistic, but it is a most valuable commentary, very compact and condensed, and so recent as to embrace all the latest results of critical learning, and the discoveries of science and travel. Paper, type and binding are all of the best. One more volume, we suppose, will complete the work, as volume 5 embraces the four gospels. For sale at the Methodist Depository, 110 and 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

CROSS AND CROWN. By James D. McCabe, Jr. National Publishing Company, Cincinnati; Continental Publishing Company, New York, 1873.

This volume is splendidly bound and illustrated, and contains 619 octavo pages. It is a book of martyrs, and contains sketches of the great persecutions and the prominent sufferers in them. The Voudois, the Huguenots and the English Martyrs are the titles of the three parts into which the book is divided. It is a volume calculated to entertain and also to strengthen all right religious principles.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE for August has an excellent table of contents. We note especially: The Joy of Birth; The Word of Christ; Customs and Curiosities of Madagascar; In Reformation Times. Good Words for August has: St. Paul's Standard of Orthodoxy; A Ladies' Congress in Germany; Spring in Mexico; On Being Acquainted with God, and other articles. The August number of Good Things is unusually good in the quality of its articles. Woods' Household Magazine, the Little Corporal and the Southern Cultivator for this month are all excellent in their way, and most desirable for the family reading-room.

THE ALDINE for September has the following beautiful illustrations: 1. Clear Creek Canon, Rocky Mountains; 2. The Blue Bird; 3. In the Rocky Mountains; 4. Snowy Range of the Sierra Madre, Rocky Mountains; 5. Who is it? 6. Brookside Willows; 7. American Farm Scenes; 8. Emperor Charles the Fifth and Titian; 9. The Sleeping Palace; 10. The Sleeping Beauty; 11. The Skye Terrier.

For THE ADVOCATE.

TRUST IN THE LORD.

Father, we trust in thy love,
Calmly abide 'neath thy wings;
Thy kind hand, stretched from above,
Our peace and security brings.

Father, we walk in thy love,
Gladly obedient each day;
Since in thee we live and move,
Guide thou to heaven our way.

Father, we hope in thy love
When gloom o'ershadows our path;
Life-long thy mercy shall prove—
A day shall measure thy wrath.

Father, we joy in thy love,
Though tearful sadness oft come;
We hear thy voice from above
Calling thy little ones home.

The Old and the New.

MR. EDITOR: Visitor, in the ADVOCATE of July 3, representing the Brookhaven District Conference, winds up the fulminating paragraph with: "The devil always hated Methodism, and so do some others." We do not believe that he intended this remark to apply to the "Young America" of which he speaks.

"Young America" was at the district meeting with some bold assertions, among which were: "The bankrupt lists of the United States District Courts do not look so dark, when compared with the financial reports to our Annual Conferences, showing how our people meet their pecuniary responsibilities to the financial boards, boards of stewards," etc. "The habit of pioneers catching pigs and calves with dogs, marking them and turning them loose, to be caught again when wanted, compares favorably with that of baptizing children, enrolling penitents and young converts, and losing their names, localities," etc. "That our fathers do our grandfathers injustice, when they interpret quarterage to mean a quarter of a dollar." That "the word Methodism in the abstract does not mean an absolute want of system."

"Old Fogy" was there with the "same old plan," "the same old way," etc. The Bishop says this means "no plan, no way," and foretells a like success. God bless these earnest, honest old men! How grandly they stand in every breach and combat every error, but how loath they are to make one move. Methodism is systematized aggression, and they are to its polity what long-ranged siege pieces are in an aggressive campaign. Who that has been in an aggressive campaign does not remember how these heavy, cumberous machines were despised and scoffed at as we saw them hid away in some secure place till after the first shock of battle had won a safe and eligible place for them to occupy; and yet again, how our hearts warmed toward them after they, with great toil and delay, had been drawn up to propitious positions in our rear, and had opened their bronze throats with the fierceness of lightnings and the voice of seven thunders, and how with bounding hearts every ear was intent to course the screeching shell, every eye to catch the cloud of smoke which heralded its mission accomplished.

So it is in our church. At every advance that is proposed in our church policy these venerable men throw up their hands in holy horror—so when a church conference is proposed; so when the importance of the Sunday school is brought before them; so when it is proposed to pay a preacher more than $150; so when the instrument is brought into the Sunday school to regulate the voices of the children; so when the standard literary and theological excellence is raised higher by the College of Bishops; so when any plan of finance is proposed; so when the District Conference and lay delegation are proposed.

Wesley at a single leap sprang fifty years in advance of his age, and by the inspiration of God so comprehended our moral and social natures, and met the wants of the same through the prudential institutions of the church, as to "become all things to all men." But now these almost idolizers of Wesley lose sight of his example, and, discarding his institutions, refuse to move forward because he has not marked the way for them through conditions of society of which he could know nothing.

The Methodist Church was "for America," and its rapid growth in all things shows how wonderfully it is adapted to man's moral and social wants and elevation; and if the examples of some of our advanced city churches were followed up its appliances are equal to every emergency. But imagine, if you can, a church with no register more expensive than a folded sheet of paper, with the names of the members pencilled upon it; no data of admissions, removals, deaths, baptisms, etc. Imagine a Quarterly Conference with three to five attendants, twenty minutes spent in reviewing the work of the quarter, nine of the eleven questions answered with a "0." Imagine a protracted meeting in progress; many joining, their names taken down on a greasy slip of paper, to be transferred to that "folded" paper (if not forgotten;) no data as to whence or how they came. Imagine the preacher in charge going to a community of boasted intelligence and Methodism, and calling for the church register, when this folded paper is produced, with not a pencil-mark made on it in five years; and this in hearing of the railroad engine. Imagine a venerable deacon, an exponent of the doctrines of Wesley, with dramatic gestures describing the particulars of the tragedy in which Cain slew Abel with a "light-erd knot." Imagine, if you can, ye favored members of McKendree and Carondelet Street churches, all this, and more, that Young America has seen and heard, and then wonder, if you can, that he should call for reform in the manner of our methods. Imagine this; then know that Young America is toiling with the concentrated energy of his nature to educate and embellish his children so as to make them worthy of the church of Wesley, while he gathers them around him at the family altar, in the closet, and prays God daily, hourly that they may become lights in his church, and recounts to them with pride how the little seed that, within the last one and a half century was dropped by an humble Moravian in the rich soil of Wesley's heart, has been watered and cultured by his God-like intelligence until it has sent out a vine that has not only covered the face of the earth with its glorious fruits, but the odor of whose flowers has revivified "holiness to the Lord," and is rapidly attuning Christendom to the song of justification by faith and a free salvation.

Know all this, and then marvel, if you can, that sleep is driven from his eyes when the unwelcome thought will obtrude that the miserable meanness and old fogyishness of our people, as evinced in our old barn church-houses, clap-board parsonages, half-starved preachers, neglected ordinances and institutions, lawless and formless procedures, systemless methods and two-bit quarterage, will insult their pride and cause them, like thousands of others, to seek association among those who give more evidence of pride and public spirit. Then tell me if he would not do violence to his stewardship if he did not call for reform, yea, exhaust his power in one long, wailing call, or else be heard by the law-making power of our church? Yes, we want the chapter of the Discipline upon district meetings so amended as to give to the District Conferences jurisdiction over local preachers, and throw upon it the responsibility of recommending applicants to be admitted into the traveling connection. There are frost-hairs enough on the temples of Young America for him to remember when a quarterly meeting was an epoch; when the territory of a Quarterly Conference could not be spread upon that of a modern district; when every member was expected to attend; when every Methodist desired to attend; when there was life in the Quarterly Conference; when there were holy and brave men who dared say no; when there were good, true and humble men who needed to be drawn up; when we knew such an institution as an humble exhorter; when the zeal for God's cause so moved the hearts of licensed preachers that they could ride scores of miles to get their license renewed; when preachers did not plead, as a motive for orders, that it would save them the trouble of attending Quarterly Conference; when local preachers, church secretaries and exhorters did not plow or loiter or hunt or fish within five miles of the Quarterly Conference, and feel that its complement was made when the stewards and a few women met the presiding elder and preacher in charge.

The hearts of Visitor and the fathers yearn over the Quarterly Conferences. Very well; let them help us restore the exhorters of our grandfathers, and again make that calling honorable, to the end that those who may be sometimes compromise the doctrines of the church may cultivate the gift which in reality they have. Let us in the Quarterly Conference have supervision over the church records, that we may see how these church conferences are cultivating their beneficence and charity, how taking care of their children and teaching, etc. Then let the recording steward, as a member of the district meeting, take up his books and compare them with all the others, under the supervision of a committee, and we will all learn something.

Now for the live question—finance. Our grandfathers had perhaps the best plans and nearest the scriptural (like all Wesley's) that have ever been devised, to wit: weekly class collections. But our fathers suffered them to turn to a "squirrel-track." Now let our stewards meet, elect a president and secretary, and make allowance and distribution; let the local stewards make individual assessment, and report to the church for verification; let this be recorded by the church conference, and a copy be placed in the hands of the secretary of the board of stewards for permanent record; let the weekly, monthly or quarterly payments be recorded in the same way, and at the end of the year let all the payments be spread upon the secretary's books (or peradventure a better plan may be found;) let it, with its results, be spread upon the secretary's books, to the end that when the president or secretary shall, as a member, take up this record to the District Conference, to the end that we may not only learn each other's methods, but that, each seeing what the other one has done, we will by this means provoke each other to good works.

J. V. ENOCHS.

Reasons Why I Cannot Join the Baptist Church.

1. The Roman Catholic and Baptist churches claim to be the only true Christian church on this earth. Both agree in esteeming all others pretending to be churches of Christ simply as "sects," "heretics," "disorderly walkers." Both claim the sole right to properly celebrate the sacraments—the Lord's Supper and baptism—and are but null and void when administered by others. Both claim descent, in an unbroken chain, from the apostles. Both recognize the right, in the United States, for a company of persons to be incorporated as a temperance society, a life insurance company, a Methodist society, a Presbyterian society, and as such are to be respected accordingly. Both claim infallibility in interpreting the meaning of such Scriptures as are needful to defend their conduct.

Now, having descended in an unbroken line from the Protestant Huguenots, and by choice being a Protestant from all such arrogant claims all my life, it is beyond my conception how I am to indorse one without the other, and at the same time claim a share of intelligence or common sense.

2. I am unable to assume the necessary effrontery to believe, or profess to believe, that because some of the soldiers of Christ fight under a blue-colored banner, it becomes my bounden duty to treat them as the enemies of Jesus, because I think the divine order is "that every banner must be red." I fail to read in the Bible that Jesus Christ gave the Baptist or any other branch of the church unlimited control over the ordinances, and infallibility of judgment respecting commands, so that, going down into a pond or stream of water, and letting none other but a "true-blue" Baptist minister put my head and shoulders under water, in the name of the Trinity, is only the true Christian baptism, and, when done, this is the only cross to be taken up, the only command to be obeyed, and ever after it is impossible to fall from grace, unless I should fall away to the Methodists. Immersion is a mode, a way, to do a Christian act of consecration to Christ; so is pouring or sprinkling. Virtue lies not in the mode, but in the thing done.

No specific way is revealed. Inference, and only inference, from times, places and acts of the apostles is the only guide. Unless infallible, inferences may be wrong. Therefore to think and let others think, in all love, about these minor matters, I cannot do if I become a Baptist.

3. The Baptist Church has a strong tendency toward the spirit of Pharisaism—the thing Christ cursed. It crops out in a failure to give "a hearty godspeed" to the friends of Jesus toiling in true labor to save souls.

Many Baptists have become so self-conceited that "they only are the people of God." To give five cents toward aiding the "sects" would be a matter like sin. The animus, as a whole, is: "Our faith and order." Now Jesus commands us "to love one another;" and "by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another."

4. I was consecrated to God by baptism, when an infant, by a Methodist minister. All Baptists would require me to be baptized over again by immersion. I would by this act deliberately repudiate my former baptism as null and void, as much so as if done by a heathen Chinee. It would consider the Methodist Church not a church of Christ, and all my kindred and friends in the Methodist Church as not the true friends of Jesus. Some that are in heaven (at least they said they had the witness—"all was well") that they were deceivers. From all this my common sense, not to say Christian spirit, revolts.

5. With the history of Roger Williams and E. Hoffman before me, I would have to believe the Baptist dogma of an apostolic succession; so that none but a regular Baptist minister can properly administer the Lord's Supper and rite of baptism. I must tell my old Methodist brethren: "I have at last found the true church. I would like to have the privilege of accepting your invitation to partake of the Lord's Supper. My conscience says: Surely there could be no harm. But then, you remember, I sold my right, my liberty of conscience to think and act for myself when I joined the true church. She positively will not suffer me to stay in her folds if I in this manner confess that your Supper is the true Lord's Supper. I don't want to be tried as a disorderly member, so I must look upon you as not in the faith." I cannot sell my liberty of conscience to the church of Rome or the Baptist Church. I must protest against such demands, and therefore cannot be a Baptist.

6. I have yet to learn the time and place where the Bible justifies a professed disciple of Christ in branding the consecration of our infant children as "a pernicious practice," "the root of all evil," a horrible thing. This is the principal business of the Baptist Church. See Howell's Evils of Infant Baptism. Strange no mention is made in the Bible of the annulling of the Abrahamic covenant forbidding the bringing of little children (Brephos, infants) to Jesus. Singular indeed that the Jew accepts the new faith, which ostracises his children, without one murmur. Strange that whole families were baptized, and not one little child or baby in the lot. Is it not stranger still, in this late day, that a people should rise up—origin well ascertained—who unblushingly say: "We only are the gospel church, and wisdom will die with us?"

All so astonishing it hinders my being a Baptist.

TREMOR.

Of the Martyrs.

MR. EDITOR: Our late and lamentable brother and "yoke-fellow," Rev. J. D. Adams, who doubtless is enjoying the "reward of the righteous," is also undoubtedly enjoying the reward of the martyr to the cause of Christ. I probably knew him and his circumstances better than any other member of our Conference. He was humble, leading to timidity, yet bold, leading to death, in the great work to which the Master had called him. His heroism led him to brave poverty, toil, suffering—all intense. His humility led him to poverty, without accusing those who should have given the wages to the laborer; to toil almost superhuman, with unflagging zeal; to suffering, excruciating and protracted, without a murmur. He was genial, without levity; companionable, without intrusiveness; instructive, without dogmatism; wise, without egotism; thoughtful, without moroseness; pure, without Pharisaism; and an earnest Methodist, without bigotry. Eloquent in thought, earnest in delivery, instructive in symbols, his preaching was owned of the Father and sanctified of the Spirit; and doubtless, though he went forth weeping, sowing truth's blessed seed, he has gone rejoicing, bearing his sheaves with him. I cannot doubt but that Bro. Adams was a martyr to the work on the Opelousas district, where for years he toiled almost without remuneration, his receipts sometimes being so small that he would not disgrace his district by reporting them. For years he toiled at the plow five days of the week, and rode from ten to thirty miles and held his quarterly meetings, preaching three and four times at each. I have often seen him almost reel with fatigue from his horse to the pulpit on Saturday, and then with candor and spirit preach God's truth. No doubt, Mr. Editor, that if his back wages, now justly due, from the Opelousas district were summed up, it would amount to such a number of thousands of dollars as would raise his widow and her fatherless children above dependence. Individuals did nobly, as far as paying their own portions went; but what steward or member in the whole district did full work in influencing others to pay? And how many hundreds of our members have spent more for tobacco, wine and fancy notions—hard as the times are—than they paid to Bro. Adams and his colaborers together? Brethren, we have martyred him. His now the reward. His family the suffering—ours the shame. The deep, unuttered and unutterable anxiety written on his face, for years before his death, told that disease had already laid its fingers of steel upon his once straight and stalwart body. The keen anxiety ever peered through the genial smile, and the fast-bending form told more of toil than of years. Brethren of the Methodist ministry, he is gone!

Jesus call'd where the sun ever shineth:
Day's bright star there ne'er declineth;
A sunset golden cast its light upon the river;
Death threw his lance, his armor bright, to shiver.
And Jesus, his Captain, was there to deliver.
Mourn not, brethren, though he's gone, gone forever,
Since he's housed in a home where sin cometh never.

May the Good Shepherd care for his bereaved! May we follow his footprints, and at last join his triumph on the hills of God's eternal city.

B. F. WHITE.

Marrying with a Ring.

With this ring I thee wed, and with all my worldly goods I thee endow, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

This portion of the marriage ceremony, as it now stands in the Methodist Discipline, seems ill-adapted both to the fortunes and to the tastes of those who are expected to use it. We need not now inquire into its historical origin, or its force and fitness in other lands and in other days. The times have changed, and we are not precisely what our English ancestors were half a millennium of years ago. The use of the ring in the consummation of the matrimonial vow is an ancient custom, and to many so beautiful that they would regret its discontinuance. But the phrase, "all my worldly goods," is often suggestive of possessions so pitifully small in amount, or so ridiculously unsuitable to constitute a dowry for a wife, as to mortify the parties being married, while it amuses their listening acquaintances. Even if the bridegroom be possessed of fortune, he could scarcely be expected to transfer it all to his bride. That he will freely share with her whatever of worldly goods he may possess is implied in the promise to "love, comfort, honor and keep" her, which he has already made. But even supposing it were his intention actually to convey to his bride a title to all his earthly possessions, would it be either legal, customary or becomingly reverential to make such conveyance in the name of the "Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost?" In religious sacraments, prayers and vows these awful names of the Triune One may be fitly employed; but a formal transfer of "worldly goods" in this sacramental style seems highly inappropriate. Would not the expression of some tender and earnest sentiment be a more seemly accompaniment for the adjustment of the ring? Some like the following: "With this ring I thee wed. As it is one, so be our hearts united; as it is pure, so be our wedded life; as it is endless, so be our plighted love, till death shall part."

Others would perhaps prefer the sentiment in rhyme:

With this ring I thee wed; 'tis the pledge of my love;
Let its pureness be type of our wedded lives prove;
Be its roundness an emblem of the hearts we unite;
And its circle unending of the faith we now plight.

H.

THE BISHOP AND THE COLLIERS. The Birmingham Morning News says that a story, in which the Bishop of Lichfield is the prominent figure, is just now circulating in Wolverhampton. It is to the effect that while walking in the Black country, a short time ago, his lordship saw a number of miners seated on the ground, and went toward them with the object of saying a "word in season." He asked them what they were doing, and was told by one of the men that they had been "loyin'." The Bishop evinced some astonishment, and asked for an explanation. "Why, yer, see," said one of the men, "one of us fun' (found) a kettle, and we been a trying who can tell the biggest lie to ha' it." His lordship was shocked, and proceeded to read the men a lecture, telling them, among other things, that he had always been taught that lying was an awful offense, and that, in fact, so strongly had this been impressed upon him that he had never told a lie in the whole course of his life. His lordship had barely finished when one of the men, who had previously remained silent, exclaimed: "Gie the governor the kettle; gie the governor the kettle."

A MAN of the world will bear to hear me read in the desk that awful passage: "Wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Nay, he will approve it: "The minister is in the desk; he is reading the lesson of the day." But this very man—were I to go home with him, and tell him in his parlor that most of those whom he knows and loves are going on in that road to eternal destruction—this very man would brand the sentiment as harsh and uncharitable. Though uttered by Christ himself, it is a declaration as fanatical and meandful, in the judgment of the world, as could be put together in language.

WHEN your temptations let you alone, let not you God alone; but lay up prayers and the blessings of a constant devotion against the day of trial.—Jeremy Taylor.

Obituaries.

DIED, in Mansfield, Louisiana, July 31, 1873, MORRIS TAYLOR, infant son of William and Martha Beynon.

DEPARTED THIS LIFE, on the fourteenth of August, 1873, in Blenville parish, Louisiana, after an illness of a few days, of congestion, FLORENCE SOPHINA, infant daughter of Bro. Thomas A. and Nancy C. Pullig—the youngest child of the family and the only daughter of the mother.

A FRIEND.

"BLESSED are the dead who die in the Lord." The subject of this memoir, Mrs. SARAH N. HINES, daughter of Thomas S. and Mary Baskin, was born in Abbeville district, South Carolina, June 22, 1811; was married to William H. Hines January 22, 1834, and died March 10, 1873, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Courtland Smith, in Caldwell parish, Louisiana, after an illness of ten days. She survived her husband eight years and one month. Sister Hines was a worthy member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and in my acquaintance with her as her pastor I found her to be a consistent Christian lady—one whose faith in God was firmly fixed. Notwithstanding she suffered much, she was conscious of her approaching dissolution. No clouds of moral darkness bedimmed her sky. She had no fears of launching into the turbid waters of death; but, after leaving a message to each of her absent sons to meet her in heaven, with Christian calmness and resignation she passed away. Thus have her children and friends lost one golden link that bound them together here; but we trust their loss is her gain. May this dispensation of God's providence bring all her unconverted children to Christ, and may they all meet her in heaven.

J. S. DAVIS.

MR. P. MATTHEWS was born on Sicily Island, May 8, 1823, and died of pneumonia, February 27, 1873.

Words are powerless to speak his worth, but the memory of their benefactor will long be cherished in the grateful hearts of those whose paths were brightened by his kind and generous deeds. As a neighbor and friend there was none kinder and more accommodating. He was a quiet, useful citizen, and a faithful and generous friend. Mr. Matthews was possessed of a vigorous intellect and a well-cultivated mind, and in his decease society has lost one of its brightest ornaments and most useful members; and, although he lived for many years out of the pale of the church, he was ever an admirer of the truly pious, and a constant and cheerful supporter of the gospel. In his last illness he prayed much and fervently, and asked his wife to pray for him, thus leaving a hope that he has entered the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem.

To the wife who has been so suddenly bereaved we know not what consolation to offer. Into her dark and companionless grief no heart can enter but one which has felt a similar loss. We are powerless to offer any comfort; and can only point to that Friend who sticketh closer than a brother—he who has promised to be a father to the fatherless and the widow's God.

ORA.

JAMES JULIUS ALFORD, eldest son of Rev. E. M. Alford, was born in Madison county, Mississippi, October 9, 1854, and died July 8, 1873, aged eighteen years, eight months and twenty-nine days.

Blessed with pious parents, who dedicated him to God by baptism in infancy, and gave him the inestimable benefits of a godly example and wholesome religious instruction, the deceased at the early age of seven years, under the ministry of Rev. H. H. Montgomery, took upon himself the vows of church-membership, and made a public profession of faith in Christ as his Savior. From this time until his death he maintained the character of a consistent disciple of the Lord Jesus, bating an interval of a few weeks, during which time the influence of ungodly associates gained a partial mastery over his religious principles. And even during this temporary defection it is believed that he never neglected his accustomed private devotions. From the date of his connection with the church he ever held himself in readiness to "ask a blessing" at table, or to lead in family prayer.

Possessed of a gentleness of disposition and a suavity of manner that endeared him alike to young and old, he was also endowed with a courage which no perils could intimidate, no menaces terrify from the post of duty or of honor.

His death was that of the righteous. During his last illness he spoke of his approaching dissolution not only without dismay, but with calmness and complacency; and even after the "king of terrors" had set his signet on him he gave to the weeping watchers around his couch godly admonitions and words of cheer. Just before his exit from the scenes of earth the veil that separates the visible from the invisible world seemed removed as if by a ministering spirit, and scenes of glory burst upon his enraptured vision—he saw and recognized the faces of loved ones gone before, and caught the melody of their heavenly harps. How true it is that "the chamber where the good man meets his fate is privileged beyond the common walks of virtuous life, quite in the verge of heaven."

W. C. BLACK.

MADISON STATION, Miss., August 26, 1873.

DIED, at the residence of his brother-in-law, Bro. E. R. Moore, in Newton county, Mississippi, of chronic diarrhea, August 16, 1873, the Rev. JOHN D. WILLIS, of the Mississippi Conference.

Bro. Willis was appointed to the Covington circuit, St. Tammany parish, Louisiana, at the sitting of our last Conference. He proceeded immediately after Conference to his work, and remained on it but a short time in consequence of failing health, and came to the above-named county to recuperate; but he grew rapidly worse until his death.

O that we may be permitted to enjoy in our last moments on earth such peace as he enjoyed! May we henceforth be permitted to behold God as he spoke of seeing him for weeks previous to his death. I was with Bro. Willis on the Sabbath before his death. On Saturday he was very happy. He addressed myself and wife, Bro. Moore and family, Bro. Jesse Willis (his brother) and others. He spoke of the view he had of heaven and God. He said he had, the night previous, such a view of God's mercy, love and justice as he never had before. His soul was happy all the time, though he was very weak; so much so that he had to be raised by the help of two strong men. He clapped his hands and shouted: "Glory! hallelujah!" This was a daily occurrence with him. He spoke of heaven as his eternal home, and God as his only portion and delight. He said there was not a cloud intervening between him and his God. He said he would not give his hope of heaven for all the world contained. I was with him on Tuesday and Wednesday. His mind was still active and clear. He had many to visit him, and as they gathered around his bed he would exhort them to prepare to meet God in peace, never forgetting to warn parents to train their children for God. This was a favorite theme of his.

Bro. Willis was born in Monroe county, Georgia, December 31, 1824, and married Miss Elizabeth Parks, daughter of Gabriel Parks, of the same county, in 1844, and moved to Alabama in 1847; thence to Newton county, Mississippi, in 1852. He professed religion and joined the church in the year 1854, under the administration of Bro. Edwin Mortimer, of the Mississippi Conference, and was licensed to preach and joined the Conference in 1855. He has been in the regular work ever since. He leaves three sons, the youngest of whom is fourteen years of age. Bro. Willis now sleeps within fifty yards of the spot where he made a public profession of religion.

J. A. VANCE.

JAMES ESSEX ELAM was born near the town of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, December 7, 1829; joined the Methodist Church December 25, 1848; graduated at Centenary College in 1850, and studied law with his father, with whom he continued in the practice of his profession for a few years. He was then chosen mayor of Baton Rouge, which position he occupied for a number of years, and to within a few months of his death. He died July 31, 1873.

Bro. Elam was the son of Christian parents, was reared religiously, and was religiously disposed from his early childhood. When a young man he was an active worker in the Sabbath school and in other departments of the church. But when he became engrossed with the business of his office, and oppressed by a slowly-growing disease, he became less efficient in the work of the church, though he never lost his strong friendship for the church and his desire to see it prosper. He regretted this seriously and continually during the last months of his life; said he might have been a more useful man, and in that case a much happier one. And so he might, for he was a popular and successful public officer, and might have exerted a much greater influence for good than he did. I write this of him because it is just what he said himself, and just what I believe he would desire written if he could be consulted. He desired that others should be admonished by his case to be more devoted to the word of God and doing good; to use their health and strength and influence for the glory of God and the highest good of mankind. His disease was consumption. It was several years doing its work. During the last two years of his life he manifested much concern upon the subject of religion, for he had never professed conversion. It was only a month or two before his death that he could confidently trust all to Jesus and say: "I know that my Redeemer liveth." From this time on his peace was full. He greatly enjoyed the prayers and singing of his friends—loved to have them repeat passages of Scripture and hymns in his hearing. A short while before his death his speech failed. By signs he indicated his desire to have some hymns repeated to him. Bro. Fuqua, who was with him, read a number of appropriate selections from the hymn-book, and when he had finished Bro. Elam turned his eyes upon him with a look which seemed to express thanks and farewell, and in a moment the spirit was gone. Bro. Elam leaves a wife and four children, who have the sincere prayers and sympathy of the church, as well as the sympathy of the entire community.

A. E. GOODWYN.

A RECENT TRAVELER says: "What always impresses me more than anything else, in Egypt and Palestine, has been the entire absence of cheerful and exhilarating music, especially from children. You never hear them singing in the huts. I never heard a song that deserves the name in the streets or houses of Jerusalem. One heavy burden of voiceless sadness rests upon that forsaken land. The daughters of music have been brought low. The mirth of the tabret ceaseth, the noise of them that rejoice endeth; the joy of the harp ceaseth."

A COLORED MAN, while digging on the Vale Royal plantation, near Savannah, a few days ago, unearthed $17,000, which had been buried by a miser some eight years ago.

A JAPANESE paper states that three hundred and eighty-two Japanese students are studying in Europe, America and China. Only five women figure in this enumeration.

WE HEAR a great deal about labor reform, but there seems to be a greater need of reforming some of those fellows who don't labor.

DRUNKENNESS is a pair of spectacles to see the devil and all his works.

THE TWO ARMIES.

BY O. W. HOLMES.

As life's unending column pours,
Two marshaled hosts are seen—
Two armies on the trampled shores
That death flows back between.

One marches to the drum-beat's roll,
The wide-mouthed clarion's bray,
And bears upon a crimson scroll:
"Our glory is to slay."

One moves in silence by the stream,
With sad yet watchful eyes,
Calm as the patient planet's gleam
That walks the cloudless skies.

Along its front no sabers shine,
No blood-red pennons wave;
Its banner bears the single line:
"Our duty is to save."

For those no death-bed's lingering shade;
At Honor's trumpet-call,
With knitted brow and lifted blade,
To Glory's arms they fall.

For these no flashing falchions bright,
No stirring battle-cry;
The bloodless stabber calls by night—
Each answers: "Here am I!"

For those the sculptor's laureled bust,
The builder's marble piles,
The anthems pealing o'er their dust,
Through long cathedral aisles.

For these the blossom-sprinkled turf
That floods the lowly graves,
When spring rolls in her sea-green surf
Its flowery, foaming waves.

Two paths lead upward from below,
And angels wait above,
Who count each burning life-drop's flow,
Each falling tear of Love.

Though from the Hero's bleeding breast
Her pulses Freedom drew,
Though the white lilies in her crest
Sprang from that scarlet dew—

While Valor's haughty champions wait
Till all their scars are shown,
Love walks unchallenged through the gate
To sit beside the throne!

Works That Follow Every One.

BY THE REV. NEWMAN HALL.

What is said of those who die in the Lord is true of everybody: "Their works do follow them." Every action remains. The deed survives the doing. This is obvious as regards other people. We may forget the kindness or the injury we did, but the effect remains. A small loan preserved a neighbor from bankruptcy, or the refusal caused his ruin. Timely succor saved the sick; neglect resulted in death. The calumny hastily uttered was as quickly forgotten by the speaker; but it went on doing its evil work. Our words and conduct have an indirect influence on those around us which is permanent, though the words and acts pass into oblivion. A preacher of the gospel does not cease to work when he ceases to live. The teacher of truth and of error alike, being dead, yet speaketh.

Our works follow in their effect on ourselves. A man's character is the result of his actions. The totality of his thoughts, words, deeds makes him what he is. Every individual work does its part in making him. You see a man laying down first one brick, then another. Is it only a brick laid down? No; those works follow in the permanent form of the house.

You see a sculptor striking his chisel. Does each blow end when delivered? No; those works follow in the statue that remains. The diligence or indolence of youth follows in the degree of mental culture obtained.

Generally speaking, a man is intellectually what he made himself during the period of education. The works of the youth pursue the man. A retribution is even now going on. Every good work does good to our moral nature, and every evil work does harm to it. Thus virtue is its own reward, and vice in the very indulgence exacts its penalty. Every sin is a suicidal blow.

This is also true in relation to God. Moffatt mentions a sanguinary African prince, who, when told of the resurrection, struck his spear violently in the ground and exclaimed: "What! And will all the men I have killed live again?" Yes, and all our actions. God will bring every secret thing into judgment. How little some think what they do as they go along life's highway. They fancy they are scattering mere dead things right and left. They are scattering eggs—eggs which are hatched. Hatched, they follow, perhaps, first as butterflies, bright and beautiful in the sun; but—oh, horrors!—those butterflies have turned into wasps, into hornets, and they follow, buzzing and stinging, up to the margin of the river and across into the presence of the Judge. I shall never forget a sermon I heard from a negro clergyman in Chicago, in the course of which he said: "You who are wicked mind what you are about. How would you like to have your sins as your companions, to live with them forever and ever?" A man's wealth does not follow him; but the fraud, severity, parsimony, arrogance, associated with the getting, the spending or the hoarding—this follows him. So also the conscientiousness and generosity of the acquiring and the using lay up a good foundation for the world to come, when the money itself has perished.

If this be so—if by a natural law, as well as by a special divine judgment, "for every idle word which men speak they shall give account;" if every neglect of duty and every commission of sin abides and follows the doer, clamoring for judgment—may we not in despair ask: "Who, then, can be saved?" The gospel presents the only solution: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ." His good works are substituted for our bad ones. He can both remove the guilt of our sins, and, by his Spirit mysteriously working within us, he can neutralize the evil effect of sin on our own character. Old things pass away and all things become new. Then the words are fulfilled: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." It is an authoritative decree: "I heard a voice from heaven." It is fixed and permanent: "Write!" They "die in the Lord," trusting the Lord, loving the Lord, obeying the Lord, waiting for the Lord. They "rest from their labors." Not from holy activity, but from fatigue, anxiety, weariness; from conflict, pain, grief; from the burden of doubts, from the yoke of trial, from the discipline of sorrow. "And their works do follow them." They do not precede, blowing a trumpet, and claiming admission to glory as a reward. No man's works are sufficient for this. Christ's works alone go before us. They are accepted on our behalf. He goes first, and pleads for us and opens the door for us. We follow him; but then it is also true our works follow us. They follow in their influence on our own moral nature, rendering us more or less meet for the inheritance and capable of enjoying it. They follow in relation to the special award of the great day. The doctrine of reward is as true as that of punishment. "God is not unrighteous, to forget your work and labor of love in that ye ministered to the saints." There is a rewarding with ten talents and with five. A cup of cold water will not lose its reward. Christians will not themselves plead their good works. They have an Advocate who will do this for them, and will make the best of every case committed to him, for whatever good works we do are the result of his own work in us. We shall enter heaven as unprofitable servants, exclaiming: "God be merciful to me, a sinner;" but our Advocate and Judge will graciously commend and reward whatever was done from love and likeness to himself. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. They rest from their labors and their works do follow them."—Independent.

A Pilgrimage of Grace.

In the year 1536, in the reign of King Henry the Eighth, of England, some forty thousand men of the northern countries were gathered together under the standard of "a gentleman" named Aske, who "possessed the art of governing the populace." In other words, he was a demagogue and a rebel against the crown; and in those troublous times when the papacy had lost its hold upon the throne, and sedition was everywhere at work among nobles and peasants, it was an easy thing to combine Roman superstition with defiant treason. Henry was a rough, bad man, and an unscrupulous tyrant, and there were many good reasons for the turbulence of his reign. We are not his apologists; but, as history repeats itself, we recur to this single event of his stormy times for a lesson to our own age. It is thus described by the historian Hume:

"Their enterprise they called 'the pilgrimage of grace;' some priests marched before in the habits of their order, carrying crosses in their hands; in their banners was woven a crucifix, with the representation of a chalice, and of the five wounds of Christ; they wore on their sleeve an emblem of the five wounds, with the name of Jesus wrought in the middle; they all took an oath that they had entered into the pilgrimage of grace from no other motive than their love to God, their care of the King's person and issue, their desire of purifying the nobility, and of driving base-born persons from about the King, of restoring the church, and of suppressing heresy."

The end of this apparently formidable crusade came very soon. The thronged camps were dispersed by want of provisions, by a great storm, and by the folly of their leaders, some of whom were pardoned, and others imprisoned, condemned and executed. And so Henry triumphed over "the pilgrimage of grace," which he treated as an insurrection of people whom he called in his manifesto "but brutes and inexpert folk."

And now, in this year of our Lord 1873, Archbishop Manning has issued his benediction upon all English lords and ladies and people who shall go upon the proposed pilgrimage to Paray-le-Monial in France, "as a testimony to the faith," and to represent English Romanism in the very remarkable revival of the pilgrim spirit upon the continent. According to the Roman Catholic papers, twenty thousand pilgrims from France and Belgium have visited the shrine of "the Sacred Heart of Jesus" in a single day. "Citizens, towns, villages and parishes send deputations with banners to offer prayers for France and the church." Bishops and priests preach in mingled strains of "the fate of France and of the church." Masses and prayers, confessions and absolutions are in progress by day and at midnight. French patriotism and papal zeal are stimulated at the altar, from the desk and in the chorus of the most popular hymn: "Save Rome and France in the name of the Sacred Heart." And thus the empire and the papacy, which tumbled down together at Sedan, are struggling anew, after the manner of the middle ages, to recover what they have lost in the last decade.

It is a natural question, which may soon be solved: What have these "pilgrimages of grace" to do with the overthrow of Thiers, the presidency of MacMahon, and the late demonstrations of the monarchists for Henry the Fifth, and even with the recent assemblage at Chiselhurst, in England, at the tomb of Napoleon the Third, where his only son put forth his feeble young hand, feeling after the broken scepter of his father?

Will Pio Nono and the Monarchists or the Imperialists regain their power in France? Or will the republic bring them to a new and lasting grief by its victory?

Rome would not be Rome did it not seize upon the impending crisis in France to re-establish itself by the intermingling of the patriotic and religious elements. We are not by any means convinced that the pilgrimages are merely an outburst of Romish superstition. They are originated and conducted by more cunning demagogues and zealots than those who made trouble in England three hundred and forty years ago. The iron hand that rules France is not like the English Henry against the Pope, but it sways the republic in the interest of the aged pontiff. It is reported without contradiction that in six months MacMahon is to retire from the presidency to take command of the army. And what then? Who then will "save Rome and France in the name of the Sacred Heart?" And how will it be done?—Christian Intelligencer.

Faith in God.

Two men were neighbors, and each of them had a wife with several little children, and his work alone to support them. Now one of these men was all the time miserable, saying to himself: "If I die, or if I fall sick, what will become of my wife and my children?"

And this thought would not leave him, but gnawed at his heart as a worm gnaws the fruit in which it is concealed.

The same thought had come to the other father, but he did not dwell upon it; "for," said he, "God, who knows all his creatures, and who watches over them, will watch over me, my wife and my children."

The latter lived quietly, while the first did not taste one moment of rest or of inward joy.

One day, while working in the field, sad and cast down on account of his fear, he saw some birds enter a bush, go out, and then soon return again. On approaching nearer he saw two nests placed side by side, and in each one several little birds newly hatched and still without feathers.

Now when he returned to his work from time to time, he raised his eyes and watched the birds, who came and went, carrying food to their little ones. Just at the moment when one of the mothers returned with her beak full, a vulture seized it, flew off with it, and the poor bird, struggling vainly in its grasp, uttered the most piercing cries.

At this sight the man, who was working near, felt more troubled than ever; "for," said he, "the death of the mother is the death of her little ones. Mine have only me. What will become of them if I fall them?" And the whole day he was gloomy and sad, and that night he could not sleep.

The following day, on his return to the fields, he said to himself: "I want to see the little ones of that poor unfortunate bird; several, no doubt, have already perished;" and he hastened toward the bush. On looking in he saw the little ones all well; not one of them seemed to have suffered. Being astonished to see this, he concealed himself in order to watch them.

After a little while he heard a slight cry, and perceived the second mother-bird bringing back in haste the food which she had gathered, and which she distributed to each of the little ones impartially, and there was enough for all; thus the orphans were not deserted in their distress.

The father who had doubted Providence related that evening to the other father what he had seen; and the latter replied: "Why should you doubt? God never abandons his children. His love has secrets which we cannot fathom. Let us believe, let us hope, let us love one another, and pursue our way in peace. If I die before you, you will be a father to my children; and, if you die before me, I will be a father to yours. And if both of us die before our children are of an age to provide for their wants, they have for their father 'our Father who art in heaven.'"—From the French.

THE SONS OF SUCCESSFUL MEN.—Next to the inquiry, What becomes of the plus? an interesting question would be, What becomes of the sons of successful men? A few names and a few firms are in the hands of the founders; but these are exceptions.

The old name and the old trade generally pass into the hands of others. "Do you see that man shoveling in coal? Well, his children, and children like his, will jostle your pampered sons and rule this land," said an old New Yorker, the other day. The old names have ceased in the pulpit. The famed men of the bar seldom have a successor. The eminent jurists carry their honors with them to the grave. Merchant princes are obliterated. The reason is clear. The fathers laid the basis of business one way and the sons built another. Men who earned their fortunes by hard work, by diligence; that knew sixteen hours' toil by personal attention; that were their own book-keepers, salesmen, cashiers and porters, are followed by sons who do as little as possible; who delegate to others all the work they can, and who know more of the road than the ledger. Famous hotel men were gentlemen, men of intelligence, men who were the equals of the best in the land, and who never sunk the gentleman in their trade. Young men who fling the example of their sires to the winds find it easy to squander a valuable name, run through a fortune quicker than it was earned, and find themselves, while young, at the point from which their fathers started. One thing is quite marked in New York. It is the fact that the heavy business is getting into the hands of foreigners. The heavy importers, the great bankers, and much of the trade of value is slipping out of the hands of Americans, as the trade of England got into the power of Lombards.—New York letter to Boston Journal.

AN OLD LADY was admiring the beautiful picture called "Saved." "It's no wonder," said she, "that the poor child fainted after pulling that great dog out of the water."

THE MARRIED LADIES of a Western city have formed a "Come-home-husband Club." It is about four feet long, and has a brush at the end of it.

A JUSTICE at Vernon, Iowa, wound up a marriage by saying: "And now I send you to the county jail for thirty days." He was thinking of another case.

WHY is your shadow like a false friend? Because it follows you only in sunshine.

A Flower Sermon.

Every year at St. Katharine Cree, in London, there is preached a flower sermon by the Rev. Dr. Meynell Whittemore to the lads and lasses of the great city who may choose to come and listen to the unique discourse. It is nineteen years since the first flower sermon was preached by this clergyman, who originated the beautiful ceremony, and on each succeeding twelvemonth he has officiated anew, taking the artistic hues and grateful fragrance of nature which surrounded him and his congregation for his texts. This place of meeting is in the thickest of the city, where the rush of business is the maddest, and going into the cool church, crowded with floral bloom, is like smiting the mountains with a magician's wand, and stepping from earth to fairy land. To be a participator in this pleasantest of all religious festivals a condition is attached. Each one must bring an offering, not costly or elaborate, but such as nature offers in abundance—the flowers from her fields. Some humble folk buy a penny bunch of the flower-girls at the doors; many are prepared with a pretty nosegay artfully arranged; the old folks mix up their wallflowers and May-bloom with the prayer-book in their hands, and the younger generation content themselves with some roses or narcissus in their coats. The beadle and the church wardens are decorated, and on the pulpit is placed a charming nosegay for the parson. Of course all these folks do not come from the parish of St. Katharine Cree. All London has by this time heard of the flower sermon, and every district sends a flower offering to Dr. Whittemore. The charity girls, with clean gowns and white caps, ornamented with flowers, stand up, followed by the blue-coated boys with sprigs of geraniums and lilies of the valley, and the harmony of sound unites with the harmony of colors as some of the melodious old hymns are sung. This year the doctor preached from the appropriate text, "Instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle-tree," and gave pleasant lessons throughout his discourse in moral botany and arboriculture. In his last discourse he mentioned that nineteen years ago a little child gave him his first pulpit nosegay, and she had continued her pretty gift ever since, though she had been for some time a young lady. Flowers are natural missionaries, and the doctor has been shrewdly laying nature under contribution to help him in his work during all these years.

EXPANDING THE CHEST.—Take a strong rope, and fasten it to a beam overhead; to the lower end of the rope attach a stick three feet long, convenient to grasp with the hands. The rope should be fastened to the center of the stick, which should hang six or eight inches above the head. Let a person grasp this stick with the hands two or three feet apart, and swing very moderately at first—perhaps only bear the weight, if very weak—and gradually increase, as the muscles gain strength from the exercise, until it may be used from three to five times daily. The connection of the arms with the body, with the exception of the clavicle with the breast-bone, being a muscular attachment to the ribs, the effect of this exercise is to elevate the ribs and enlarge the chest; and as nature allows no vacuum, the lungs expand to fill the cavity, increasing the volume of air, the natural purifier of blood, and preventing the congestion or the deposit of tuberculous matter. We have prescribed the above for all cases of hemorrhage of the lungs, and threatened consumption, for thirty-five years, and have been able to increase the measure of the chest from two to four inches within a few months, and with good results. But especially as a preventive we would recommend this exercise. Let those who love to live cultivate a well-formed, capacious chest. The student, the merchant, the sedentary, the young of both sexes—aye, all—should have a swing on which to stretch themselves daily. We are certain that if this were to be practiced by the rising generation, in a dress allowing a free and full development of the body, many would be saved from consumption. Independently of its beneficial results, the exercise is an exceedingly pleasant one, and, as the apparatus costs very little, there need be no difficulty about any one enjoying it who wishes to.—Dio Lewis.

BATAVIA, THE CAPITAL OF JAVA. An oriental traveler thus describes the capital of the Javanese kingdom: "There are no actual streets in the city; there are only majestic alleys, shaded by beautiful tufted trees, framed in long, vast arbors, known to us only as operatic decorations. The rays of the pitiless sun can but penetrate their shade at intervals, while they gild with wonderful reflections the countless plumes of the cocoa-trees; the upright branches of the flame-trees, which are all scarlet flowers; the bananas, with green leaves the size of a man; the cotton-trees, laden with snow-white puffs; the traveler's palm, colossal fans of unsurpassable elegance, which yield streams of milk to the summons of a cane pushed into the bark; finally the immense banyans, whence fall thousands of vertical tendrils, which touch the earth, take rapid root and spring up to the summit of the tree, there to bind themselves into intricate garlands, and again to fling themselves down. One of these trees alone forms an entire wood, surrounded with a curtain, a net-work of intertwining leaves and flowers, through which children, in the costume of the angels, pushing back the tendrils with their dark, little hands, watch the boats and the swimmers as they glide over the waters of the canal.

"IS PAT FLANNIGAN on board this ship?" roared Nelson, during a lull in the firing at the battle of the Nile. "I'm here, my lord," said Erin's son, showing himself on the deck. "Then," said the gallant Nelson, looking satisfied, "let the battle proceed." That story is Pat's.

Religious Intelligence.

THE Established Church of Scotland has 1,500,000 members, the Free Church 750,000 and the United Presbyterian 470,000.

ONE HUNDRED deputies to the French National Assembly have sent a letter to the Pope assuring him of their devotion to his holiness.

JUDGE JONES, of the Circuit Court of St. Louis, has decided that a man cannot bequeath money to have masses said for the repose of his soul.

DR. PRESSENSE proposes to found a school of religious science in Paris, which he regards as one of the advanced posts of the grand conflict of Christianity against infidelity.

MR. CORCORAN, the wealthy banker of Washington, donates thirty-six thousand acres of land in Texas and ten thousand in Mississippi for the uses of the Episcopal Church in those States.

THERE is a body of Christians in Maine, calling themselves "Repository Baptists," an offshoot from the Free-Will Baptists. Their distinctive principle is opposition to an educated ministry.

THE British and Foreign Bible Society has just ordered editions of the Scriptures, as follows: 10,000 Chinese New Testaments, 16,000 Bohemian Bibles, 8vo., and 16,000 Bohemian Bibles, small 8vo.

BY THE will of Anna S. Gerard, of Philadelphia, lately deceased, the sum of $3,000 is bequeathed to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, and $2,000 to the Board of Home Missions.

THE Reformed Dutch Church China mission held its annual meeting at Amoy, in April. Fourteen churches were represented, with a membership of 1,035. A new church was organized during the past year, and 100 adults had been baptized.

IRISH Presbyterianism still stands out against the use of instrumental music in public worship—the General Assembly, at Belfast, recently agreeing not to prohibit, but substantially going against it. Out of 500 congregations, only eight allow "harmoniums."

OPEN-AIR services are held on Boston Common, under the auspices of Pleasant Street Methodist Episcopal church, every Sabbath night, at six o'clock, and are attended by congregations varying from 600 to 1,000. Clergymen of various denominations officiate.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Advance gives a very interesting account of the annual meeting of the Dakota mission, held at the Yankton agency, June 13. The missionaries have access to about 25,000 of the tribes, and they are having no small degree of success in their work.

BURMAH.—The mission work in Burmah presents the following statistics for the year 1872: Churches, 365; members, 18,700; baptized in 1872, 777; ordained preachers, 82; unordained, 339; schools, 85; pupils, 5,033. These statistics embrace the Burmah, Karen and Shan work.

THE Congregational Association of Oregon and Washington admits women as delegates from its churches. This year the delegation of women was larger than ever before. One committee, composed wholly of women, reported in favor of sustaining the Woman's Board of Missions, and recommended every church to form auxiliary societies.

THE statistical tables show that a very large proportion in many cases from sixty to eighty per cent.—of the convicts in prison, patients in the hospitals, inmates of almshouses and children in houses of refuge are Roman Catholics, and the children of the Roman Church. Of foreigners the Irish furnish about six times as many convicts as the Germans.

MADAGASCAR.—The mission in Madagascar has received a large share of attention from the directors during the past year. Additional contributions have been received from many friends for that enlargement of the mission which was so heartily approved a year ago; six new missionaries have proceeded to the island during the year; three others will follow in a few weeks; and it is desirable that three or four more shall join them early in the next civil year.

IT LOOKS a little like the progress of American ideas in heathendom to read that "the proprietor of the Hindoo temples at Bindrabund, Agra, advertises their attractions, with the names of the officiating gooroos (priests,) the rates of conveyance to and from Agra, and intimations that fountains will play and wonderful fireworks be exhibited." The fireworks are an Eastern addition. They take the place, perhaps, of the operatic musical displays which figure in some of the American church advertisements.

MISSIONS IN SOUTH AFRICA.—At present the staff of missionaries, constituting the Bechuana district committee, South Africa, consists of twelve brethren occupying eight stations. The Moffat institution has been commenced under the Rev. J. Mackenzie, at Shoshong, with a view to train native evangelists and pastors, of which the mission is in much need. And both the directors and the missionary brethren are anxious that the efforts now making for the enlightenment of these tribes—in some respects so noble, in others so degraded—may be earnest, efficient and well sustained.

FROM the annual report of the English Baptist mission in India we learn that the number of secret inquirers and borderers in India is very much on the increase. Rev. George Kerry writes of a kind of religious awakening spreading all over Bengal, among both Hindoos and Mohammedans; while Rev. H. Bion, of the Dacca mission, avows his conviction, with regard to the wide region over which his journeys extend, that "the number of those who secretly believe in Christ is as great if not greater than the number of baptized believers in all our stations put together."

THE oldest churches of the Unitarian name now in existence are in Transylvania, in Hungary. This sect has existed for more than 300 years; and, although the 55,000 people belonging to it are very poor and sorely persecuted under the Austrian rule, they have done much for culture and freedom in their native land. There are about 100 churches, situated in a picturesque and beautiful mountain region. A meeting was lately held at Pesth between a delegation from these Magyar Unitarians and a few of their English and American brethren. The Rev. E. E. Hale was present and addressed the meeting in German; and a statement was made by Prof. Kovnes, of Koloszvar, concerning the history and work of the Unitarians of Hungary. These Magyar Liberals are fortunate in having made the acquaintance of the author of "Ten Times One is Ten."

MR. BEVERIDGE, of the Northern Mexico mission, stationed at Monterey, has been making a tour in the region around, preaching and receiving converts into the church. At Montemorelos six were thus received, and the interest manifested was such that Mr. Beveridge began to feel quite ashamed of his Monterey congregation when he saw the activity of the workers at that place. A fine Sunday school had been organized by a man who copied from a description he found of Sunday schools in the States. This same Sunday school superintendent supported himself by his trade as a tinner, and besides taught a day school. Mr. Beveridge finds himself unequal to the task of making tours outside of the Monterey work, and calls for an assistant in his field to do this work. The kind of man required, as described by Mr. Beveridge, is one "who can ride on horseback all day in the sun, sleep on the ground, and live on sour milk, cheese and red pepper." Any such candidate for missionary fame will doubtless be gladly sent by the American Board to the aid of Mr. Beveridge.

TWENTY-NINE years ago, in June, 1834, five missionaries met together for the first time in China. They were young men then, and the year 1873 finds them gray-haired and far on in life, though all are still alive and not yet out of harness. These men were the two medical doctors, McCartee and Hepburn, the printer, S. Wells Williams, and the ministers, Rev. S. R. Brown and J. C. Legge. Now they are all either D. Ds. or LL. Ds., and the work actually done by these men would have filled twenty ordinary scholars. Dr. McCartee, after twenty-nine years of continual study, translation, hospital and dispensary work, and evangelizing labors among the Chinese at Ningpo, is now professor of natural history in the Imperial College in Tokei, Japan. His original composition in Chinese and translations, consisting of religious books, manuals of devotion, tracts, critiques, etc., number about fifty volumes. Dr. Hepburn, after many years of hospital and dispensary work in China, came to Japan, carried on the same healing work for the bodies and souls of the Japanese, and, after eleven years of unremitting labor, has produced the master-work of his life and has chiseled the monument that will keep his name green for generations to come—the Japanese and English Dictionary. Dr. Hepburn has also spent several years, in company with Dr. Brown, in translating the gospels into Japanese. He is now engaged in carrying through the press a pocket edition of his dictionary in San Francisco. Dr. S. Wells Williams, besides being the soul of the mission printing press in Shanghai for years, acting as interpreter for Commodore Perry, in his expedition to Japan, writing that classic among the books on China, "The Middle Kingdom," and doing all kinds of personal missionary work, has crowned the labors of his life by issuing, through the press at Shanghai, his Chinese-English Dictionary, the fruit of thirty years of mental toil. Dr. Williams is now the secretary of the United States legation in Peking. Rev. S. R. Brown, after laboring for many years in China, was one of the first pioneers in Japan, and besides his ordinary missionary labors has composed a valuable grammar of the Japanese language, has been the chief translator of the Scriptures into Japanese, and will end his days at that work. The Rev. Dr. Legge, the last on the list, is the world-known translator of Confucius. For thirty years as teacher, translator, pastor, preacher and student Dr. Legge has lived in Hong Kong, averaging in his earlier years fifteen hours of study a day, and now, at sixty-five, ruddy and stalwart, seems ready to spend thirty years more either at the anvil or the study-desk, with pen or sledge-hammer. What labor it has been to master the Chinese language, the text and hosts of commentaries on Confucius' writings, only they who attempt it can fully understand; and when it is remembered that his work has been done amid the routine of ordinary work, often amid pestilence and political commotion, the capacity for work in this man can be imagined. Dr. Legge, before he left China, visited Peking and the tomb of Confucius. He now goes home to England to visit his large family, including ten grandchildren. In the long roll of missionary names and honors we can point to no greater names than these, to no greater monuments of labor, to no greater missionary success, at least within the present century. All have won long life, honor, fame and earthly comfort, showing that they have realized the promise of the life that now is, as well as that which is to come. Let no young man about to become a missionary think that the days of great triumphs are over. There is work to be done, honor in this life, and more in the world to come. All these men have numbered their converts by scores, and Dr. Legge has baptized with his own hands about seven hundred souls. In the harvest of souls Dr. McCartee doubtless comes next; while all will doubtless find that many a forgotten seed dropped long ago has borne fruit and will appear as fruit in the harvest above. We shall not yet believe that the day of missionary triumphs are over when our own generation furnishes us with such noble examples of work, devotion and substantial results.—Independent.

Missionary Matters.

Not to say any new thing, but to keep the subject before our readers, we frequently head an article as above. For what is going on in the world our columns of Religious Intelligence, and other fragments here and there, contain about all we find in the line of missionary work. This week we publish a communication from our secretary, Dr. McFerrin, where those who wish may see what we are doing for foreign missions. Just now there is some discussion about the machinery. Bishop Marvin's advocacy of a modification of the present system we have published. Dr. Whitfield, of Arkansas, and others also, oppose the Bishop's plan, preferring the present arrangement.

At present forty per cent. of the collections go to the Board of Foreign Missions at Nashville, and is disbursed by that board for the support of the foreign missions of the church. The balance—that is, sixty per cent. of the collections of each Conference—is, by the Conference Board and the Bishop presiding, appropriated to the domestic missions within its bounds. Bishop Marvin's plan is that all the money shall be paid over to the Central Board at Nashville, and that this board shall make the annual appropriations to the Conferences and to the foreign missions. The functions of the Conference boards under this arrangement would be to apportion the amounts to be raised to the several districts, and to distribute the money appropriated to the Conference to its mission appointments. The most serious objection we have noticed to this plan is that some of the Conferences might fail, for want of proper representation in the board at Nashville, to receive full justice in the appropriations, as the members of the board from the remote Conferences would not be likely to attend. Their condition and wants, however, might be represented by the Bishops, who are strictly connectional officers, and should be well acquainted with the whole work, and their claims could also be stated by communications from the Conference boards in writing.

The Northern Church, with a vastly larger field than ours, operates on Bishop Marvin's plan, and we believe with general satisfaction to the church. Our impression is that the Presbyterian and Baptist churches are similarly organized for their mission work. The present plan assumes that evey Annual Conference requires sixty per cent. of its collections for the home work, and that the measure of its due to foreign missions is invariable. This is manifestly a wrong assumption, as some of the Conferences might justly require nearly all they can raise, while others could spare not merely forty, but eighty or one hundred per cent. for the weaker Conferences and the foreign appropriations. We suppose that any Annual Conference Board is at liberty to send more than the forty per cent. to the Foreign Board; but, however able, will it ever be done? However well to do an Annual Conference may be, it will always find occasion for all the money the letter of the law allows. It is therefore possible that a Central Board, composed of the Bishops and representatives from the different sections of the church, might make a more equitable and effective distribution than can be reached by our present organization.

The hearings of a plan upon the raising of the money are, however, as important, and perhaps more important, than upon its distribution. It may be something of a leverage in taking a collection to be able to tell the people that only a certain part, and that much the smaller, goes abroad; and to be able to assure them that the most of what they give will be expended and traded out at home. The home missionary is known, and his wants and sufferings are known, and the destitute fields are readily pointed out, and these objects close at hand have a gravitating power which more distant bodies do not possess. On this score our present plan seemingly has some advantage over the one proposed by Bishop Marvin; but it is more in appearance than reality, and whatever objections might at first arise would probably be overcome in a short time. It is certain that any system to be successful must have the approval and confidence of our people. They must be assured that the funds will be wisely administered for legitimate missionary ends, that missions abroad will be planted in the right places, and that the domestic appropriations shall be so ordered as to bring the largest possible return.

In our appeals to the people we are as yet far behind the English Wesleyans and the Methodist Episcopal Church. We have no missionary meetings to speak of, in which every section is gathered and addressed, and an opinion, much less an enthusiasm, awakened in every part of the church. Neither have we a missionary paper specially devoted to the spread of intelligence on this subject. Perhaps the time is not yet come for these extraordinary methods and efforts, but it is not far off. Much allowance must be made for the peculiar circumstances which have surrounded us of late years, but it is still true that we are fearfully behind in missionary matters. If we have a good system, we surely need more of the spirit of missions, an awakening to prayer on the subject, and an enlarged and generous zeal in contributing to the spread of the gospel. We are not yet able to form a correct estimate of the collections for the current year, but nothing very encouraging has been brought to our notice. Something has been reported for Mexico, but less than we had hoped. For our other missions, and for all, we fear the results thus far are meager. The Conferences are now at hand, and what remains to be done must be done quickly.

The Conflict of the Hour.

Spain occupies a large space in the news of the day, and her condition and prospects are subjects of universal observation and comment. The Republican government of Spain is now dealing with two distinct organized foes—the Communists and the Carlists. The Communists are at present holding Carthagena and bidding defiance to the government, while the Carlists are apparently growing stronger and threaten to put an end to republicanism. The Communists, we suppose, represent the spirit of license and anarchy; the Carlists are the champions of monarchy and popery. The Catholic Church and Jesuitism are the backbone of this movement, and their success would be fatal to the best interests of the country. Castellar, in his last speech, speaks despondingly of the situation, and avers that "the troubles, difficulties and perils of the nation are increasing."

The prospect in France is anything but hopeful for tranquillity. President MacMahon is for a monarchy, and is besides an Ultramontane Catholic, working with all his might for the re-establishment of the papal influence. The great trouble in Spain and France are Jesuitism and popery, and while they may not succeed in restoring the monarchies and in regaining their former dominion over the people and governments, they will keep up an agitation and an internal strife indefinitely.

Italy is apparently on intimate terms with Prussia, and, with strong Protestant alliances abroad, she is going forward hopefully in reforming and correcting the evils and abuses of popery at home. Affairs in Austria are outwardly quiet, but there is an undertone of conflict between the Roman Church and the government, and Hungary is leading off boldly in the direction of reform, and of deliverance from the Catholic hierarchy. The German empire is maintaining its position against the claims of the Pope and the bishops, and Switzerland is doing the same thing.

In England and the United States Catholicism is working as never before to gain political and social influence, and especially to break up every system of popular education. In Central and South America the same conflict is going on, and in Mexico. This is the great battle which is now raging openly or in disguise over the whole earth. It is popery against civil and religious liberty, popery against public education, popery against the Bible and against the most vital interests of society. Of the final result we entertain no misgivings. But it will take time to correct and overcome the effects of centuries of ignorance and false teachings in the countries heretofore under papal dominion. There will be strife and trouble, wars and anarchy, and here and there the right may temporarily be under a cloud, but we believe that nothing can stop the general world-wide movement, and the almost universal reaction against popery which now prevails among the nations. It is a struggle of giant proportions, and perhaps the last great battle against a system of religious error and corruption which has well-nigh shipwrecked the world.

A Model Sunday School.

Meet early, have one short formal prayer, go through your lessons as quick as possible; then sing, sing, sing until every little fellow in the house is yawning and gaping and stretching for liberty, but sing on, sing, sing. Make the concern as popular as possible. Invite all the young people in from the country to sing, no matter if they don't join the Sunday school; let them come in and sing. Bring along with you all your do-re-mi books, and your Dew-drops, etc. Don't confine yourselves to Haygood's singing-books. They are not the thing; they are sectarian. Use a few lesson papers, but at the same time you must not discard the literature of other people. If you do you will break up the school. This is a Methodist institution, but then one must be liberal—let all use such books as they please. This must be a popular school and we must not show ourselves sectarians.

No matter if it is quarterly meeting, the presiding elder must sit back and wait on the Sunday school until they sing do, re, mi awhile on Sunday morning. Or perhaps the class-leader may propose a prayer or class meeting. No time for that; we must sing and make the occasion popular. It won't do to bother with that fellow Richardson's idea—who is known to be an old superintendent and teacher in Atlanta—when he says: "The standard by which a Sunday school shall be measured is the number of accessions to the church from it." He must be an old fogy to talk about "a revival in a Sunday school" and "religious teachers," etc. Sing and make the occasion popular, and be sure that you don't make it sectarian. Be liberal. Our own books fixed up by Haygood are right good things, but they are too hard to study, especially for those boys and girls who don't care whether they study their lesson or not, but only have a place in the Sunday school, so that they can get to sing. This is our Sunday school. The preacher has no business with us. True, he will have to report the school at the Quarterly Conference, but he can report it as a Methodist school, with a large number of students and teachers—quite a large number of volumes. But then he need not say that a large majority of these books are purchased somewhere else than at our own Publishing House; nor need he tell that we have barely enough of Haygood's books to claim the school as Methodistic. Why, the school is taught in a Methodist church, and managed by a Methodist superintendent, and a majority of the teachers are Methodists (some are not;) why not report it as a Methodist school. It is a Methodist school on liberal principles. We don't hold to denominational Sunday schools. If we can't live together in this world, how can we expect to live together in heaven? Be liberal. We must not run our Sunday school upon any other than union principles. Be liberal, and sing. Sing, all ye young people, and let your hearts be glad that ours is not a sectarian but a liberal school.

God save the Sunday schools and pity the children! Let us all sing.—Atlanta, in Southern Christian Advocate.

The British Wesleyan Conference.

On Thursday, July 31, the president of the Conference announced: "I beg to intimate to the Conference that Dr. Punshon has returned to the jurisdiction of the British Conference. We give him a very cordial welcome." (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

Dr. Punshon—I am exceedingly obliged to you, sir, for the kindness with which you have mentioned my return, and I am exceedingly obliged to my friends for the way in which they have received me home. I am here at the disposal of the Conference for anything that they may call upon me to do. So long as the Lord gives me strength I hope to employ it in the service of what I consider to be the purest and most needed form of Christianity in the world. (Applause.)

In answer to the inquiry, Who are now to be received on trial? one hundred and five names were presented, and the recommendation of the London committee in each case announced by Mr. Chilow. In some cases special inquiry was made. Ultimately ninety-five were accepted, most of them for the Theological Institution, eight declined, and two were referred to a special committee.

The same evening the secretary said: "You are all aware that Dr. Punshon has returned to this country, and is about to take a circuit. I feel that I must not say much about it. I have no doubt that the Conference will agree with me that for the next year we should give to him the assistance of a young man. I move that." (Hear, hear.)

Dr. Scott—I second it. (Agreed.)

The Conference unanimously resolved to set apart Rev. J. B. Stephenson, B. A., to the Children's Home, on condition that that institution will provide for his support without making any claim upon any of the connectional funds.

The president stated that he had received a letter from a Presbyterian minister, Rev. Mr. Skerry, respectfully asking the Conference to receive a deputation from the Nonconformist ministers of Newcastle to express fraternal sympathy with the Wesleyan body as a large section of the Christian church. (Hear, hear.) Agreed.

August 2.—Dr. Punshon gave notice of motion to the effect that, considering that the causes which prevented intercourse with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, United States, were now removed, the Conference renew such intercourse by a message of fraternal greeting to the General Conference of that church in 1874.

Rev. John Lomas retired to the supernumerary list. Mr. Arthur moved a resolution to the effect that the Conference, in acceding to the request of Rev. John Lomas that he should now, after an active ministry of fifty-three years, be allowed to retire, desires to record its deep sense of the value of his lengthened and varied services rendered to the connection as head master of Kingswood School, as a circuit minister, and of late years as tutor of theology at Richmond and Headingley. In every sphere the services of Mr. Lomas have been not only faithful and loving, but eminent, and marked by gifts and accomplishments which have commanded the admiration of the educated, coupled with a simplicity and transparency of character by which high and low have been won and warmly attached. "The Conference assures this honored minister that in his retirement he will be followed with the love of all his brethren, the respect and admiration of our people generally, and the grateful affection of those who were privileged as students or as hearers to receive his instructions; and prays that his remaining days may be largely crowned with the blessing of that Lord and Master in whose vineyard from his youth up he has faithfully labored."

Rev. W. W. Stamp, D. D., also retired to the supernumerary list, and a hearty appreciative resolution was adopted.

The numerical returns gave the total number of members as 315,580, a net increase on the year of 1,730; and the number on trial in March last as 20,844.

The election of chairmen of districts resulted as follows: First London, the president of the Conference; Second London, Dr. Punshon; for the other districts, Rev. H. Jones, J. Hall, R. M. Wilcox, F. Greeves, J. Lawton, T. M. Rodham, W. Hurt, T. Llewellyn, B. Browne, W. D. Radcliffe, G. Blanchflower, E. J. Robinson, J. Harvard, M. Johnson, A. McAulay, J. Bedford, H. Hasting, J. Hartley, J. Farrar, Dr. Lyth, J. Hargreaves, W. Andrews, H. W. Williams, J. Sugden, H. Young, J. Bush, Joshua Mason, H. Kirkland, G. Scott and T. H. Horrell.

The Pope and the Free Masons.

The Pope is the Don Quixote of our age. Wherever he sees a windmill, with lance in rest, he rushes at it; when beaten, he consoles himself by excommunicating the objects of his wrath. When he lately appointed twenty-two new bishops, and gave them, as was proper, his fatherly counsel, he specially exhorted them to show no quarter to Free Masonry. Referring to the conflict between the bishops and the Masons in Brazil he said:

"In these days a conflict is raging between some bishops and a Catholic government in America. The Free Masons are there; they penetrate everywhere; and, not contented with sitting among the counselors of the sovereign, they even introduce and insinuate themselves into the membership of pious associations, such as confraternities, and they blow their trumpet, saying that the Masons of that part of America are not condemned, because they are not like those of Europe, but are a charitable society. The assertion is false; they are excommunicated and anathematized like all the rest. Nevertheless, they go to the lengths I have stated; and now that the bishops are saying with St. John the Baptist, Non licet, they raise a cry, they threaten public hostilities, and they imperil the church and the throne. If it had been said from the beginning, Non licet, better effects would have been seen; now, however, the republicans of the streets, the wicked, and even the ministers themselves fiercely oppose the bishops, in order to support those sectaries condemned by the church, and thus to produce those grave scandals and those ruinous mischiefs which are feared. Wherefore, dearly beloved brethren, cry aloud in time in all cases of unjust pretensions—cry, Non licet."

To what lengths will this foolish old man, who persuades himself that he is infallible, go? He has cursed the King of Italy, and all who have taken part in the promotion of Italian unity; he has denounced the Old Catholics as schismatics; he has poured his wrath upon the Protestants who are honestly trying to do good in Rome; he curses the Masons—whom will he not curse? He has flung himself against modern civilization, determined to arrest it by the force of his infallibility. The spectacle is an amazing one. Men are puzzled to determine whether they should feel grieved or laugh.

The Masons are a charitable association. Whether to unite with them or not is a question of common prudence; by many good men that question is decided in one way, and by many equally good men in quite another. But the consignment of them to eternal perdition, as enemies of God and his people, is an outrage which only a Pope could commit. The truth is, the Roman priesthood will tolerate no secrecy which they cannot control; they will have all human hearts laid bare to their inspection, and will be assured that they hold in their hands the springs of all human action. By this power they would, if they could, control the world, and Masonry, just as Protestantism, is in their way. The priesthood is itself a secret organization, and will endure no rival.—New York Methodist.

Rev. Dr. Spring.

The funeral of the late Rev. Gardiner Spring, D. D., says the Christian Intelligencer, whose death was announced in our last issue, took place on Friday at eleven A. M., at the Presbyterian church, corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, in this city. The relatives and friends of the venerable deceased, together with the clergy, met at his late residence half an hour earlier, and escorted his remains to the church, which was draped in mourning. After singing by the choir, an address was delivered by Rev. Dr. Paxton, who gave an outline of Dr. Spring's life, services and character. He said that during Dr. Spring's ministry in this city he had labored for its highest good. He occupied one of the most important pulpit positions in New York, and it was impossible to estimate all the influences of such a ministry. His position gave him great influence, and what he said had a controlling power over many in this center of business activity. He had aided in founding many useful institutions and to maintain numerous enlarged charities. He lived as a man who was in communion with Heaven, and as one who was ever ready to obey the final summons. While he labored for the advancement of the church on earth, his constant thought was of the church above. He had enjoyed uninterrupted health up to the last fifteen days, and when it was evident that his time had come he said: "I am lying here waiting my Master's summons to come home. He has been good to me these many years. I do not desire to live, for God's time is my time." When he was dying he said: "I am ready. O come, O come!" and sometimes he would repeat the child's prayer: "Now I lay me down to sleep." It was a sublime thing to see this aged saint entering heaven like a little child. His death was the beautiful close of a good life.

Missionary Collections.

A contributor to the St. Louis Christian Advocate makes the following suggestions about the method of collections for missions:

1. Hold a missionary anniversary in all the circuits and stations. For this purpose let two or three contiguous churches or "classes" on circuits meet together. If a circuit is composed of ten or twelve "appointments," hold three or four such anniversaries.

2. Take pains to make these annual meetings special occasions.

3. Let the preacher in charge thoroughly post himself in missionary matters. Develop the best speaking talent among the laity. Give every member, as far as practicable, something to do. Reach all the members of the church or churches represented in the meeting through a well-selected committee.

It occurs to me that the following would be among the advantages of such a plan:

1. Such a meeting would attract great numbers, as at quarterly meetings, dedications, etc.

2. It would give the missionary cause an importance that it does not now possess.

3. Preachers and people would be brought to a more intimate acquaintance with missionary operations.

4. More money would be raised in this way than in any other.

THE Northwestern Advocate speaks thus emphatically about "Conference transfers:"

"Methodism is a unit. If any given Conference is in temporary need of workmen, it should welcome transfers. Our Bishops are general superintendents, and should have constant and universal jurisdiction in every Annual Conference in the church. As such they know the whole work, and should ever be at fullest liberty to transfer troops from the strong to the weak points in God's line of battle. Let Annual Conferences cease to deprecate such transfers, and, by implication, to trammel such by even the usual resolution asking occasional transfers. Leave that matter with the Bishops. By and by, if calamity comes in the shape of a modified diocesan episcopacy, it will be impossible to relieve weakened Conferences in the absence of an episcopal board, whose general itineracy consists in constant, universal and uncompetitive jurisdiction."

WE CALL special attention to the following note from Bro. Ahrens, and would urge our friends to help to extend the circulation of the German paper.

A Note.—The sixth volume of the Familienfreund commences on the fifteenth instant. The subscription list is constantly though slowly increasing. My American brethren could and should render me valuable assistance by inducing all Germans of their acquaintance to subscribe for the paper. It costs but $1 per annum. The Familienfreund tells of Jesus and his love—is, in fact, a religious tract—and ought to be in the hands of every German in the country.

J. B. A. AHRENS,
112 Camp street, New Orleans.

BISHOP KAVANAUGH, says the Nashville Christian Advocate, is expected to be present at the Kentucky Conference, now in session at Lexington. He joined that Conference fifty years ago, and has been requested to preach a semi-centennial sermon. We understand that the Bishop has kindly consented to do so. O that we could be there to hear it! Only one minister who was a member of the Conference when the Bishop joined it is a member of it now. What changes have taken place during these ten lustrums!

ON ACCOUNT of the prevalence of cholera at Princeton, the Louisville Conference is announced to be held at Russelville, Kentucky, the session opening October 1, Bishop Keener presiding.

Mount Vernon Place Church, Washington City.

The Rev. Dr. Wilson, the pastor of Mount Veruon place church, in Washington city, in referring to the debt resting upon the church, in a letter to us, says:

"I can only say that your proposition concerning the publication and sale of the photographs of the Bishops for the benefit of Mount Vernon place church is thankfully accepted. The debt is the one obstacle to progress with us. It created and has maintained a sense of depression that is fatal to energy, and at war with every impulse to enterprise. May it speedily be lifted."

The proposition we made, to which Dr. Wilson refers, was that we have published and sell for the benefit of our church in Washington city the several sizes of the photographs of our Bishops, including the four by four, the medium and card sizes. We propose to purchase these photographs ourselves, and to pay over to the pastor of Mount Vernon place church the entire amount realized from the sales after deducting the actual cost. We also propose to sell the elegant photograph four by four size of the Publishing House for the same purpose and on the same terms. The debt on this church ought to be paid at once. Our brethren need help, and deserve it; and feeling assured that the church throughout our connection would be glad to aid in so noble an enterprise, we take this method of affording them an opportunity to do so.

These photographs are of superior style, and would richly adorn the homes of our friends, and are offered at an exceedingly low price, that every one may have an opportunity of assisting.

A. H. REDFORD, Agent.

FROM the twelfth annual report of the Presbyterian Church, as furnished by the Missionary, we learn, says the Galveston Christian Advocate, that it has in the mission-field eighteen ordained missionaries (four of whom are natives of the country where they labor,) three male assistant missionaries, fourteen female assistants and ten native assistants, making a force of forty-five laborers in the foreign field.

It is well understood that in numbers and in wealth the Methodist Episcopal Church South is much stronger than our Southern Presbyterian brethren. Yet it appears that in the field of missions they are far in advance of us. The more we consider this fact the more it startles us. We are doing well for ourselves. We are occupying this goodly Southern land; we are building churches, establishing colleges and universities where our children shall be educated; but what response are we making to the Macedonian cry that comes up from the nations without the gospel?

"Shall we whose souls are lighted
With wisdom from on high,
Shall we to men benighted
The lamp of life deny?"

It is high time that we get out of this rut in which our sloth or our selfishness has been so long dragging the church. If we longer neglect the commission given by Christ, amid those solemn moments which measured the period between his resurrection and ascension, we may have reason to fear that our candlestick will be removed, and another people who will answer the Master's commission may take our inheritance and wear our crown.

CHRISTIAN ROSELIUS, the distinguished lawyer and jurist of this city, died on Friday, September 5, aged seventy years. Mr. Rosellus was a native of Germany, but came to New Orleans when quite young, where, from a condition of poverty and obscurity, he rose to eminence and wealth. Mr. Roselius was a man of great purity of character, of generous benevolence, and a wise and public-spirited citizen. He was a devoted friend of education, and for a long time he was identified with the University of Louisiana as dean of the faculty, and as lecturer in the law school. He also took a deep interest in all of our educational institutions. The last address we heard him make was in behalf of our Centenary College. In his religious convictions we believe Mr. Roselius was a Protestant, and probably a member of the Lutheran Church.

THE HEALTH OF THE CITY.—The dengue has been and still is very prevalent, few escaping an attack; but it is usually mild and almost never fatal. It is a disputed point whether there are even sporadic cases of yellow fever. We believe there are some scattering cases, but they are few and mostly confined to the laborers on the levee. At present there is no apprehension of an epidemic.

OUR FRIENDS, Dr. J. J. Lyons and wife, of this city, have met with a severe bereavement in the death of their infant boy, Walter Harp, who died September 2, aged one year and ten months. It is the first time that death has entered this Christian household, and the first called was the youngest.

BY A CARD in this week's paper it will be seen that Readyville Seminary, Baton Rouge, reopens on Monday, October 2. Mrs. Read's school is one of the oldest Protestant institutions in the State, and is widely known and appreciated. For further information see card and send for circulars.

REV. J. T. DAVES, presiding elder of the Delhi district, wishes us to announce that his address is changed from Delhi to Bastrop, Louisiana.

Conference Register.

ALLYN HOUSE, HARTFORD, CONN.—This old and popular hotel is justly celebrated not only for the beauty of its buildings, but as regards its accommodations. The hotel is capable of entertaining nearly two hundred guests with ease and comfort. The rooms are large and very airy, and are handsomely furnished throughout. Mr. Allyn, the courteous proprietor, spares neither pains nor expense in making it a first-class house in every respect, it being the only one in Hartford. From the hotel, situated in an elevated position, a fine view of the city and park is afforded. Our readers will find this to be altogether the most desirable stopping place in Hartford.

SMITH, ENGLISH & Co., booksellers and importers (especially of theological books), No. 710 Arch street, Philadelphia, invite the attention of clergymen especially, and all purchasers of religious books, to their large assortment of works in this department, being by far the best and most complete collection in the country. A classified catalogue, with alphabetical index, and supplements to September 1, will be sent to any address upon receipt of thirty cents. This catalogue has been prepared with great care, is corrected to date, and is invaluable to purchasers.

BY REFERENCE to an advertisement in another column it will be noticed that the twentieth year of the Polytechnic College of the State of Pennsylvania begins September 15. For full information address Alfred L. Kennedy, M. D., president of the faculty, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

WE CALL ATTENTION to the advertisement of the Weed sewing machine. They claim the highest award at the late Vienna Exposition. The office in this city is at No. 207 Canal street, where the machines are always on exhibition and information may be obtained.

THE BINGHAM HOUSE, Philadelphia, will be conducted in the same liberal manner as heretofore, it being the intention of the proprietor to maintain the reputation it has always enjoyed, of being in all respects a first-class hotel. Terms, $3 a day.

SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS.—Mr. T. Belknap, of Hartford, Connecticut, advertises, in this issue, a list of books of his publication, to be obtained only by subscription. Agents wanted. Circulars and all necessary information furnished on application.

MESSRS. JAMES W. QUEEN & Co., opticians, New York and Philadelphia, offer to mail to any address, on the receipt of ten cents, a profusely illustrated manual of mathematical instruments, microscopes, magic lanterns, etc.

THE AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION offers special terms to Sunday schools in the selection of new and the replenishing of old libraries. See advertisement.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

THE TILTON WASHER.—We call special attention to the generous advertisement in our columns, this week, of Tilton's Steam Washer. The Methodist Recorder, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, says of it:

"Our readers will be grateful for the room given to the advertisement, this week, of the famous Steam Washer of Mr. Tilton. We are prepared to recommend this invention as all the advertiser and manufacturer claim for it, and every family should order one at once. It saves woman's toils, and thus saves her life. I assure that to many for it can in a very short time by the saving of fabrics that by the old process of washing are worn out more than by actual service. The washing has been hitherto a greater wear and tear upon garments than the wearing itself. The new Steam Washer secures a clear gain to all who use it. The advertiser, Mr. Tilton, is a thoroughly reliable gentleman, and will perform all he promises."

SALVISA, KY., May 4, 1873.

J. C. TILTON—Dear Sir: Your washer was received and found to be a perfect success. I fully indorse your recommendation of it. It is certainly the grand desideratum of the age, truly the woman's friend. Please send deeds for Mercer and Anderson counties, Kentucky. You will find $10 for deeds. Send me balance of bill P. O. D., instructing the agent to hold thirty days, if not paid sooner. Please state whether Woodford, Boyle and Washington counties, of this State (Kentucky), are yet disposed of. I can find you agents for them soon. sell tt ROBERT A. NELSON.

THE greatest pain reliever in the world is Dr. Tobias' Venetian Liniment, established over twenty-six years. Every bottle sold has been warranted to give satisfaction, and not one returned; so the term lumbing cannot be applied to it. It is perfectly innocent to take internally (see oath on the pamphlet). It is warranted to cure, when first taken, cholera, diarrhea, dysentery, cramp, colic and sea-sickness; and externally, chronic rheumatism, sore throat, mumps, old sores, sprains, bruises, etc. Depot, 10 Park Place, New York. au24 3t

THOMAS ROUGHTON, of Cincinnati, says: "R. G. Hamilton & Co.—I had the acne for two long years, and had tried several remedies of acknowledged or pretended merit without any good result; I finally tried your preparation—Kriss Fever Tonic. One bottle completely broke up the malady, and I am now perfectly well. I can testify that your medicine does all you claim for it; and it is only due to you that this acknowledgment should be made, especially as so many worthless chill medicines are now offered." This medicine you will find at Fredericksen & Hurte's and E. J. Hart & Co.'s, New Orleans. jy31 2m

THIS UNRIVALED SOUTHERN REMedy is warranted not to contain a single particle of MERCURY, or any injurious mineral substance, but is containing those Southern Roots and Herbs which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver Diseases most prevail. It will cure all diseases caused by Derangement of the Liver.

THE SYMPTOMS of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth; pain in the back, sides or joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism; sour stomach; loss of appetite; bowels alternately costive and lax; headache; loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; debility; low spirits; a thick, yellow appearance of the skin and eyes; a dry cough, often mistaken for Consumption. Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the Liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and, if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue. This

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS,

J. C. TILTON

PITTSBURGH

WOMAN'S 100,000 SOLD FRIEND

AND STEAM PA. WASHER

WILL CLEANSE YOUR CLOTHES WITHOUT RUBBING!

EVERY ONE SOLD IS FULLY WARRANTED.

It Saves Labor, Wear and Tear, and the Annoyance of Wash-Day.

IT WILL DO THE WASHING OF THE FAMILY

WHILE YOU ARE

EATING BREAKFAST AND DOING UP DISHES.

STEAM HAS LONG BEEN KNOWN AS THE MOST POWERFUL AGENT IN removing dirt, grease and stains from clothing, and bleaching them white. Papermakers have for many years used steam in cleansing and bleaching their rags, and they succeed in making, by its agency, the filthiest pickings from the gutter perfectly pure and white. Until the invention of the STEAM WASHER or WOMAN'S FRIEND, although often attempted, no method had been discovered of applying steam directly to the clothing which could be used in a portable manner for domestic purposes. The WOMAN'S FRIEND washes without labor. It will do the washing of an ordinary family in thirty minutes to an hour. The STEAM WASHER is superior to all other devices for the following reasons:

1. It does its own work, thereby saving a large portion of the time usually taken in a family.
2. It uses much less soap than is required by any other method.
3. It requires no attention whatever while the process of cleansing is going on. A lady can do her own washing while she is eating her breakfast and doing up the breakfast dishes.
4. Clothing wears double the time, washed in this Washer, that it will washed by a machine, or by hand-labor or a washboard.
5. Lace curtains and all fine fabrics are washed in a superior manner. For flannels this Washer is most desirable, as it will not full them, as a machine or hand-rubbing does. All fabrics, from the finest lace to a bed-blanket, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the rubbing-board.

It is Truly a Labor and Clothes-Saving Invention,

READ THE FOLLOWING

CIRCULAR AND TESTIMONIALS.

I respectfully ask you to read this circular carefully, and candidly consider what I now propose to you as a matter of business. Before making known to you my confidential terms, permit me to state that the matter of washing clothes is one of no small consideration. It is something which concerns every family and every individual. It is but recently since Hand-washing was in common use. Latterly, however, the inventive genius of the country has been directed to the invention and construction of various devices or machinery by which much of the labor, drudgery, loss of time and wear of material might be obviated. Ponderous as well as intricate Washing-Machines have been constructed, many of which are decided improvements over the old method of washing, and these machines have been very saleable with all. People will continue to have the Washing Machines; but, let me ask you, if the STEAM WASHER can be constructed for a few dollars much less than an ordinary Washing Machine, and enable all to wash by steam, without labor, loss of time, without wearing of clothes, etc., is it not reasonable to suppose that it will supersede, in a great measure, all Washing Machines now in common use? The sale of this Washer is unparalleled, and must be so. There is nothing like it in use. It is new, and every family needs it and will have it. I wish to secure a few good men to sell rights for me, and in order to secure as many as I must immediately offer two extra inducements. My price for territory is $50 for 3,000 inhabitants; but if you will buy a single county, and agree to sell rights for me, I will allow you to deduct sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. as your commission; consequently your county will cost you but $75, instead of $225, should it contain but 25,000 inhabitants; more or less in the same proportion.

And to those buying rights I will sell Washers at nearly cost; and to those not buying rights I will furnish Washers at $60 per dozen; and, bear in mind, I will sell to no one, except a single dozen, until he first buys the right to a county. Any timer can make the Washer as well as it can be made here, and save the cost of transportation. Remember that by purchasing the right of a single county you shall have the privilege of selling any county or State for me, and upon application I will forward the sheet to you by express for any territory which you have sold for me; provided that the same territory is not already disposed of when I receive your order. I will make all the deeds, so there can be no confusion or mistake. The amount you have to pay is simply $3 per 1,000 inhabitants in any county or State, I shall make these very liberal offers for a short time only, after which I shall sell at my regular price—$5 per 1,000.

Many of my patrons have requested me to suggest to them the best method of selling the WOMAN'S FRIEND in order to make the most money in the shortest time practicable. In reply I would say that there are many methods which might be suggested, all of which seem to work well, but the most prominent of which I will suggest. In the first place, send for a sample and carefully test it. You will learn by a single trial how to wash with it most successfully. All you have to do now is to exhibit to others. I will suggest that you make arrangements to wash at a certain place at an appointed hour; manage to have as many present as possible. You will be astonished at the intense excitement it will produce in the water and steam have rushed through the clothes and foamed over the clothing, rushing back through the clothing to the lower bottom, to be suddenly returned again in the same manner—say for thirty minutes; you take out the clothing, rinse and wring out, and find the clothing perfectly clean. You will want all delighted with it.

You can take orders from nine to ten present, to be filled afterward, at $10 each. A single trial in this manner will satisfy you that the WOMAN'S FRIEND is a success, and will sell. Still another way, which is safe to succeed nine times in ten: After you have secured a sample, and know just what it will do, go on approach almost any one who has any inclination at all to engage in any business of this kind, and readily stipulate with him to take a Washer, or even buy a county, if it will perform all claimed for it. You will succeed ninety-nine times in a hundred in making the Washer perform to his satisfaction. You should in that case lose no time in ordering a new deed for your county, to be sent by express C. O. D. Do not conveniently to advance the money. You should meantime continue to take orders, and by the time your deed would come to hand you might have a gross sold. You should likewise arrange with a responsible tinner to make the Washer. The price will vary, according to style and finish. I have known some agents to sell as high as twenty Washers in a day. After you have established it more or less in your county, you can take another county, and rest assured that wherever you can get a single Washer in the neighborhood it will sell many more. Consequently, after you have sold a few hundred in a county, you can sell the right of your county for much more than at the start. You can calculate what your gains will be by buying a single county; but this is not a tenth part of what you ought to make, for while you are traveling you will meet with many men who want to make money, to whom you can sell rights. There is no business you can engage in which offers such splendid inducements. Besides, it is a safe business—no loss—and pleasant, because it renders perfect satisfaction. I cannot see how I can propose better terms. Should I allow my patrons to make their own terms, I scarcely believe they could make better terms for themselves and make more money.

On the receipt of FIVE DOLLARS I will ship you a complete Washer, as a sample, together with a Circular of Agency, with full instructions how to conduct the business; and upon the receipt of the Washer you may have time to test it, and if you find it not as represented I will refund your money. The Washer retails at $10. After I send you a sample I will build your county a reasonable time for you to decide whether you wish to purchase or not. I will furnish blank deeds, also blanks for taking orders, as it will do all I can to enable you to succeed in the business. Let me hear from you soon, or your chance may perhaps may be taken by some one else.

1. Soak the clothes over night in warm suds—in the usual manner.
2. Put in the bottom of the washer a quarter bar of good soap, or enough to make a good suds, sliced up thin; then fasten down the false bottom—see that the center valve is in proper position; put in water enough to cover the cap over the valve, say about an inch; lay the clothes down smoothly, with the soiled parts well soaped, in the washer—not rolled up, but spread out, so the water circulate freely—and carefully pack the clothes down; see that the fire is sufficiently hot to generate the steam; when the water boils it will begin to flow up the tubes on the outside, at the ends of the washer, and through the holes into the Washer again; after a steady circulation has been going on in this manner for about thirty or forty minutes the washing will be completed. Rinse well and wring same as in usual way. Colored clothes must not be mixed with white. Use soft water for boiling always. If hard, use soda, lye, or ammonia it soft in any other way.

If it is desired to bleach with the Washer, this may be done by adding a tablespoonful of borax or cream of tartar to a washer full of clothing.

ST. MARY'S, Anglaize Co., Ohio.

DEAR SIR: Having used your Steam Washer for over four months, we are prepared to recommend it to the public as far the cheapest and easiest method of washing that we have ever met with. We have tested it thoroughly, washing very dirty clothing in it, and know that it will do all that you claim for it. We have never had to rub a single article on the wash-board that has been washed in the Steam Washer since we have had it; hence there is a great expense saved in the wearing of clothing. We could not do without it.

REV. JACKSON AND WIFE.

COMFORT, Kendall Co., Tex., Feb. 10, 1872.

J. C. TILTON, Esq.—Dear Sir: The sample Washer which I ordered arrived in due time. All who have seen it in operation are well pleased with it. It will do all that you claim for it. You will please send C. O. D. deeds for the additional counties ordered, and oblige, very respectfully,

JOSEPH B. RAYBEN.

FEBRUARY 12, 1872.

MR. J. C. TILTON—Dear Sir: The Washer came duly to hand; accept my thanks for your promptitude. I am glad to acknowledge it all you recommend. Several have come to see it used; all acknowledge it a perfect success. I write to order a deed to Sampson county, North Carolina. Please send C. O. D. Direct to HENDERSON, Kentucky.

DEAR SIR: The Washer came duly to hand. Accept my thanks for your promptitude. I am glad to acknowledge it all you recommend. I have spoken of it to numbers who desire me to order one for them. Several have come to see it tried; all acknowledge it a perfect success. I write to order a deed to Henderson county, Kentucky. It would send the money now, but fear some one else has the right by this time. Send C. O. D.

REV. B. T. TAYLOR.

SHAMOKIN, Northumberland Co., Pa., May 21, 1872.

MR. J. C. TILTON—Sir: I received the Steam Washer on the tenth instant. Thanks to you for your promptness. My wife has tried it, and it gives full satisfaction. I make haste to order a deed for my county, Northumberland, as my first choice; next Montour; third, Columbia. I send $40, and balance C. O. D. in thirty days. Please send me a list of any other adjoining counties not sold.

Respectfully yours, MOORE FURMAN.

FRENCH CAMP, Choctaw, Miss., May 14, 1873.

MR. J. C. TILTON—Dear Sir: Please find $120, P. O. money order, $90 of which take in payment for twenty-four Steam Washers, twelve copper bottoms. For the remainder send me the deed to Choctaw and Winston counties. Balance C. O. D. Order express agent to hold deed thirty days. I live out in the country, thirty-four miles from any express office. S. W. ASTON.

WALTON, KY., May 13, 1873.

J. C. TILTON, Esq.—Dear Sir: I sent you this day, per Adams' Express, money to pay for one dozen Steam Washers—$51 for Washers and $9 to pay part on the deed to Boone and Gallatin counties. I expect to order largely from you, and also expect to sell many county rights. The Washers are taking well here. I did not get to do much after receiving the sample until this week, but I am pushing ahead now, and I think I will meet with good success. Hurrah for the Steam Washer! You will hear from me again shortly. J. W. CONNER.

The above are a few extracts from letters received. I can publish hundreds of letters from parties who have used the STEAM WASHER and speak in its praise. I have thus far declined doing so. I know full well how certificates are looked upon. I have sold the STEAM WASHER upon its own merits. Thousands have used it, and it has given universal satisfaction throughout the country. I ask none to rely on what I say, or the commendations of others, but let the Washer stand on its merits. I would not ask or advise any one to engage in the business of selling Washers or rights unless he has thoroughly tested its work; and to enable all to do so, I send a sample Washer upon the receipt of $5 (half the retail price) and guarantee that, if found not as represented, I will refund the money. So there is little risk to begin with. Heretofore I have made but little effort to sell the STEAM WASHER, but hereafter I shall make an effort to popularize it. I shall advertise liberally in first-class papers. I refer you to the American Agriculturist, May, 1874, and the New York Weekly Tribune. I shall continue to advertise liberally in other first-class agricultural papers, as well as the leading religious papers throughout the country. Of course my former patrons who have bought territory, as well as those who may hereafter engage in the business, will be benefited proportionately. I am convinced that the STEAM WASHER is a success, and will be used in every family. ☞ Address all orders and letters to

ABINGDON, VIRGINIA.

The next session begins SEPTEMBER 18, and continues forty weeks consecutively. Comfortable accommodations for ONE HUNDRED boarding pupils. The location is in the midst of the most charming mountain scenery. The grounds comprise eleven acres, elegantly shaded, ornamented and provided with extensive walks.

The record of the health of pupils for thirteen years past demonstrates the fact that

NO LOCALITY IS MORE HEALTHFUL.

The Faculty is composed of six gentlemen and four ladies, besides matrons, etc.

The standard of scholarship is high, and the course embraces Ancient and Modern Languages, the Sciences, Mathematics, Literature, History, Instrumental and Vocal Music, Oil Painting, Drawing and Embroidery.

Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars,

per session of forty weeks, will meet expense of board, fuel, washing, lights, servants' attendance, and tuition in all branches necessary to full graduation.

PROF. F. H. SMITH, A. M., LL. D., University of Virginia, who has had daughters in the institution as pupils for two years, says: "Martha Washington College possesses a rare combination of excellencies. From experience, as well as opportunities, I cordially and confidently recommend it to parents who are seeking the best advantages for their daughters."

We refer by authority to the Faculty of the University of Virginia, of Emory and Henry College, Prof. L. C. Garland, LL. D., University of Mississippi, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and many others.

The Child's Corner.

DEEDS OF KINDNESS.

Suppose the little cowslip
Should hang its golden cup
And say: "I'm such a tiny flower,
I'd better not grow up."
How many a weary traveler
Would miss its fragrant smell,
How many a little child would grieve
To lose it from the dell.

Suppose the glistening dewdrop
Upon the grass should say
"What can a little dewdrop do?
I'd better roll away."
The blade on which it rested,
Before the day was done,
Without a drop to moisten it,
Would wither in the sun.

Suppose the little breezes,
Upon a summer's day,
Should think themselves too small to cool
The traveler on his way;
Who would not miss the smallest
And softest ones that blow,
And think they made a great mistake
That heard them talking so?

How many deeds of kindness
A little child may do,
Although it has so little strength,
And little wisdom too.
It wants a loving spirit,
Much more than strength, to prove
How many things a child may do
For others by its love.

Queer Things About Babies.

A great many queer things happen to babies in this round world of ours. One thing is, planting them. This is done by the dark-skinned women of Guinea, and it isn't half so dreadful as it sounds. The mother digs a hole in the ground, stands baby in it, and then packs the warm sand around him to keep him in place, as you would set out a rose-bush. It keeps him out of mischief, and he can play in the sand while his mother works. All day long he stays in his odd crib, and at night, when she is done with her work, he is dug out. When this agricultural mother wants to carry baby about, she ties him into a little chair, which she straps to her back. If it is some very grand occasion he is dressed neatly in stripes of white paint, and ornamented with dozens of brass bracelets and rings on arms and legs. A funny-looking baby he must be! If you don't fancy a crib of sand for a baby, what do you think of a big shoe, stuffed with moss to make it comfortable? The dirty little Laps cradle their babies in that way. The shoe is large, of course, and made of reindeer-skin. It comes up high at the back, like the slippers we wear nowadays, and is turned up at the toes.

The moss with which it is stuffed is the famous reindeer moss, soft and white; and the odd little black-eyed baby looks very comfortable hanging from the tree, or slung across its mother's back. Perhaps this baby who lives in a shoe is no more comical than the baby who lives in a fur bag, another sober little black-eyed baby, away off in the shivering Esquimaux huts. Besides being cuddled up in a fur bag at his mother's back, the round-faced little fellow wears a fur hood, and looks like some strange kind of animal peeping out in the world. You may have seen the Indian baby or pappoose bound flat to a board—poor little creature! One tribe, the Flatheads, make a rude sort of box of bark or willow-work, and wrap the baby—"little man," they call him—in a piece of blanket, strap him tightly to the box, and hang it across two sticks. Besides this, the unfortunate little fellow has a board bound over his forehead to make him a Flathead. Even the Russian peasant mother cradles her baby on a square board, hung from the wall by strings from each corner, like the pan in a balance. In India the funny little black babies either sit on their mother's hips and hold on by clasping their hands over her shoulder, or they take airy rides in a basket on her head.

The babies are elegantly dressed in armlets, anklets, bracelets and leglets (if one might make a word), finger-rings, ear-rings and nose-rings. As to clothes, they don't need many when they wear so much jewelry. China babies—not dolls, but babies that live in China—are sadly in the way among the poor. Sometimes they are cradled in a bag on their mother's back, and sometimes they are tied to the backs of older children, who go about as if they had no such load. Many poor Chinese live in boats on the river, and the baby that comes to such a family is tied by a long rope to the mast. It is long enough to let the child creep around, but not long enough to let him fall overboard. There is another curious custom regarding babies which prevails in some parts of China. If one dies it is not buried like older people are; it is thrown out carelessly, and crackers fired off at the door. Here and there, at the corners of streets, charitable people build small houses with openings to drop the neglected bodies in, and that is all the burial they get.—Young Folks.

JENNIE, aged twelve, is required by her teacher to write compositions. She comes to the editor to get him to help her out. Here is what she says:

"I asked Faith White, our girl, what I should write on. She said housekeeping was a good subject. Stupid thing! as if I knew anything about it! Then I asked papa. He said: 'Write anything simple, without any fine words.' But that did not help me any. When Kate said she'd written her composition, and told me the subject, I tried to write about my grandmother, but she didn't sit in an arm-chair, like Kate's, and wear lace caps over her silver hair, nor knit, nor have sweet cookies in an old dresser with her silver. No, Grandma is old and sick, and lies in bed, and is cross. I next tried writing about 'babies;' but, when I said they cried and slept and ate, I remembered that we do that too. So I gave that up. Then I tried 'garrets.' But we haven't any, and I don't know any more about them than what I read about in books. 'Dogs' was my next subject. That, too, was a failure. Ours never saved a baby from drowning, but is lazy, and does nothing but eat and sleep. Once I pulled his tail to see if he could bark, but he was too lazy to do even that. At last I began to cry. As I sat there my eye fell on a history of Hortense, and I thought I would write an abstract of it. But I got Louis Napoleon and Napoleon Louis all mixed up. O dear me! What shall I do?"

Well, we think, Jennie, you have done first-rate already. That is about as good a composition as we have seen lately.—Interior.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Fall Crops.

OATS.

Oats sown last autumn were badly winter-killed. In the first place it was too dry for them to make much growth before cold weather, and the first cold was sudden and very severe. The winter also was one of the coldest known. It would not, therefore, be fair to judge of the certainty of fall oats by last winter's experience. Our own observation is that, properly managed, it is as sure as any crop we raise. Some uncertainty attaches to all. Corn is eminently uncertain, cotton often fails, and spring oats are very unreliable. We urge our readers to sow full crops of oats, and to do it during this month. Every day of delay after the middle of September increases the uncertainty of the crop. At the risk of being tiresome we repeat the conditions of success: Prepare the land well; if not already rich, make it so; it is useless to sow fall oats on poor land; on such land they are almost sure to be winter-killed; manure will carry them safely through; select a variety not liable to rust; sow in drills, and fill the drills in part only when covering the seed; this protects the plants from cold and from being lifted out of the ground by frost; during dry weather graze moderately with sheep or calves until cold weather sets in, and in the spring give a moderate top-dressing of some ammoniated fertilizer. If they should fall it will be known in time to sow the same land in spring oats, which can then fall heir to all the preparation and manure applied.

CLOVER AND GRASS.

We have discussed these crops at such length recently that it is unnecessary to do more than remind the reader that this is the month to sow both clover and grass—about the middle, if the weather is not too hot and dry.

FALL PLOWING.

Whenever the ground is damp enough two-horse turn-plows should be kept constantly going, burying the weeds before they have matured their seeds. If hands cannot be spared from the cotton-field hire extra hands enough for this purpose. No work on the farm pays better than fall plowing. It is a luxury to work in the spring-land well turned in the fall—it is so loose and mellow.—Southern Cultivator.

Honey-Comb.

There are two kinds of comb required in a hive—worker and drone; the former small and the latter large cells. It takes a great deal of time and expense to construct it. There are about two and a half pounds in a common hive, which is made of honey, on the same principle that if we feed hogs on corn a certain portion of it will produce oil or fat; the same with the bees when gorged with honey for a certain length of time—a portion of it will secrete into wax, which extends from them in the form of small white scales (extends from wax pouches in the end of the abdomen,) which they use in constructing comb.

It is universally considered that it will require twenty pounds of honey to make one pound of comb; if so, it will require fifty pounds of honey to furnish one hive with comb, and honey at twenty-five cents per pound would be $12.50.

From this true statement, dear readers, we may judge whether it would be prudent to save and buy all the nice worker comb we can get, and fill our empty hives with it, instead of rendering it into wax and selling it at thirty cents per pound, the usual price, when it is worth $5 per pound to save it from the bees. No wonder the honey-extractor is coming into general use by those who know the value of comb.—National Bee Journal.

A DISH FOR BREAKFAST.—Take half a dozen, or as many as necessary, of good cooking-apples, cut them in slices of about a quarter of an inch thick; have ready a pan of fresh hot lard. Drop the slices in and fry brown. A little hot sugar sprinkled over improves them. Serve hot.

THE DUBOIS FLANGE COTTON GIN.

By the Flange the Cotton is kept in contact with the teeth on each side, until the fiber is taken from the seed, without allowing them to be taken up by the return motion of the roll, as in other Gins.

The Flange prevents hulls, stems, sticks and hard substances from being cut, consequently causing a better sample out of roughly-picked cotton than other Gins.

We have sold more from this point than any agency of any other Gin for the crop of 1872-73; consequently we can furnish more and better references, and they are warranted to come up to all that is said of them.

We keep constantly on hand all sizes, from 4 to 60-SAW STANDS, left or right. Price $5 per saw.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

EAST MISSISSIPPI

FEMALE COLLEGE,

A Chartered Literary Institution under the Auspices of the M. E. Church South,

Located at Meridian, Mississippi.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The annual term of 1873-4 will open on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873. It will be divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. Comfortable convenience for boarders in the college-building will be furnished and supervised by the president. The Board of Trustees claim to have made ample arrangements for the Literary, Scientific, Ornamental and Musical departments of the college, by the election of competent and experienced teachers for the various departments, and that facilities for thorough and liberal education in the East Mississippi Female College may no more than be equaled by the best of other similar institutions. Our college is recommended to public consideration with candor and with confidence of a successful career. We hope to see its interests and influence widen and deepen, under continued and steady prosperity, and it is apprehended that young ladies who now place their names upon the roll of this institution will be pleased in coming years by recognizing in their Alma Mater a living and honored success of educational enterprise.

Boarders engaged for the whole term will be charged $160, of which must be paid at the opening of each session.

Those engaged for one session will be charged $90, $50 of which must be paid at the beginning of the session. Those engaged for a shorter or an indefinite time will be charged $20 per month, to be paid quarterly in advance.

Extra charges will be made for washing and lights. Each boarder must furnish two sheets, one blanket and two towels. Especial printed regulations will be given each boarder, giving her directions and restrictions respecting their family and social relations and practices.

In all cases of sickness, resulting in the removal of boarders from the college, advance payments will be promptly refunded. No pains will be spared to render each boarder comfortable and happy. Their treatment will be parental, and influences of strict propriety and refinement will be constantly brought to bear upon all their habits.

Our college is in its incipiency. The enterprise has been recognized by the Mississippi Conference as meeting a growing demand for educational facilities in east Mississippi. In the judgment of the church and Conference, Meridian is the proper place for the institution. The location is healthy, access is easy, society is of the right type, and almost every consideration strengthens the judgment of the board and Conference in locating the college at this place. Since this institution is under the supervision of the church there is no hesitancy in urging earnest co-operation on the part of the ministry in the surrounding country. Our appeal is earnest. We propose to place the standard of instruction high, that they who graduate here may prove themselves worthy of honors conferred, and thereby honor themselves, the college and the world. Address J. W. ADKISSON, au14 3m President.

With a full Corps of Assistants.

Session Begins September 15, 1873, AND ENDS JUNE 17, 1874.

To Southern Methodist Parents I would call attention to this institution. Convinced that here the Southern people would find every inducement in the way of climate, comfort, health and economy in the education of their daughters, my wife and myself readily consented, at the solicitation of the proprietors, to assume its control. We are Southern people, and had been teaching in Alabama and Mississippi eighteen years previous to our removal to Kentucky. We have over a thousand pupils in the South. Desiring a favorable location and opportunities for doing good, we readily consented to removal. Send your daughters to Crab Orchard Springs. Our college building is the finest south of the Ohio river. Our equipments excel those of any other in the Gulf States. It is lighted with gas, will be warmed by steam, with water pipes running through the entire building, has numerous bath-rooms, and every other convenience of a modern city hotel. The building has been newly equipped—every room elegantly carpeted and furnished. Only two pupils in a room.

Full board and tuition, only $250 per scholastic year, without any extra charges.

We challenge the strictest inquiry. Send for pamphlets, containing every information. We are Methodists, and wish to obtain the patronage of our Methodist brethren. Address

AUGUSTA FEMALE SEMINARY,

STAUNTON, VIRGINIA.

Miss Mary J. Baldwin, Principal.

The academic term of this institution begins on the third Wednesday in SEPTEMBER, and closes the middle of the following June.

This is the largest first-class institution in Virginia, and has a corps of upward of thirty officers and teachers. The English course is as thorough as it is extensive.

Advantages for Music and Languages cannot be surpassed. Seven music teachers—four instrumental and three vocal—are constantly employed, whose reputation has extended as far as the school is known.

A native French gentleman and resident French governess teach pupils to speak the language, as well as to read and write it. Both French and German are spoken at table by pupils studying these languages.

The buildings are convenient, comfortable and elegant, furnished with complete apparatus and Pianos and Organs from the best factories in New York and Baltimore.

For further particulars apply to the Principal for catalogue. au21 1t

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE

OF THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Summerfield, Alabama.

The Thirty-second session of this institution will commence on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873.

The special advantages embrace a healthy locality, pure water, good community, faithful, efficient teaching, economy, ample accommodations, spacious buildings, elegant grounds, large rooms well ventilated and thoroughly warmed. Pupils here will not be permitted to suffer for anything which will promote their health and comfort. At all times they will be the recipients of the most unremitted kindness and attention, and will be guarded with parental solicitude. It is an institution where pupils will find a safe and pleasant home, surrounded with the purest influences and a religious atmosphere.

The expenses have been reduced as low as they can be made to sustain the institution. Board, $10 per month, and tuition, $20 per year. For catalogues, giving full particulars, address

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

THE NEXT TERM OF THIS VENERABLE INSTITUTION OPENS ON FIRST MONDAY IN OCTOBER, 1873.

FACULTY.

REV. C. G. ANDREWS, A. M., President, and Professor of Mental and Moral Science, Political Economy and International Law.
REV. A. R. HOLCOMBE, A. M., Professor of Mathematics and Adjunct Professor of Natural Science.
G. H. WILEY, A. M., Professor of Ancient and Modern Languages.
T. S. JONES, M. D., Professor of Natural Science.
REV. R. C. NORSWORTHY, A. M., Principal of the Preparatory Department.

CHARGES.

Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in College.....
Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in Preparatory Department.....
Contingent expenses.....

A matriculation fee of $5 must be paid on entering any regular college class. One-half the tuition must be paid when the student enters; the other half on the beginning of the second term, March 1st.

BOARD.

Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel, can be had in the best families for $12 per month. Day-boarding with the same families, $10 per month. Rooms provided in the dormitories free. Board to be paid in advance at least one month.

LOCATION.

This institution is located in the lovely village of Jackson, about twelve miles from Bayou Sara, with which it communicates by railroad. The location is remarkable for its beautiful scenery, magnificent oaks and magnolias, its refined and delightful social circle, pure water, its universal healthfulness, and its cultured and hospitable atmosphere.

WHEN FOUNDED.

The college was established by the state of Louisiana in 1825, and ceded to the Methodists in 1845.

ALUMNI.

The Alumni now number one hundred and three, and they are to be found in the most honorable and useful stations in the land.

APPARATUS AND CABINET.

The college possesses a valuable set of Philosophical, Astronomical and Chemical Apparatus, also a well-selected Mineralogical and Geological Cabinet. The apparatus includes a Theodolite, Compass, Chronometer, Atwood's Machine, Whirling Tables, Electrical Machine, Air Pump, various combinations of the Mechanical Powers, Batteries, Chemical Tests, etc., sufficient for a full and extended course of observations and experiments. Steps have been taken by the Board of Trustees to put these in thorough repair.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

There are two regular Literary Societies connected with the institution. These are of great value to young men acquiring a liberal education—improving them in the art of public speaking, training them in some degree familiar with the proceedings of deliberative bodies, and in cultivating systematic business habits. Each Society has a convenient hall and a well-selected library—about one thousand six hundred volumes each, which, added to the College Library of two thousand volumes, make about five thousand volumes in the college.

BUILDINGS.

The Trustees are determined to continue the repairs on the buildings till completed. The Main Building is a noble specimen of architectural beauty and adaptation to the purposes of education. The wings, built of solid brick, present each a front of two hundred feet, with upper and lower galleries the entire length, supported by Tuscan columns, and with the center making in the rear a continuous front of seven hundred feet.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

In the Preparatory Department students are fitted for regular college classes, or may obtain a thorough English or commercial education.

ITS FACULTY are men of experience and success in teaching.

WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE

BROOKHAVEN, MISSISSIPPI,

ON THE NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON AND GREAT NORTHERN RAILROAD, one hundred and twenty-eight miles from New Orleans, will reopen on the TWENTY-FIRST OF SEPTEMBER NEXT.

The health is good, discipline firm but parental, instruction thorough, and economy in all things is observed. The expenses are as low as the advantages given will allow.

The Director of the Music Department, Prof. ECKHARDT, is unexcelled. Madame JULIEN, a most accomplished Parisian lady, has charge of French and the ornamental branches.

During the past term there were Thirteen in the Faculty, and Two Hundred and One pupils in attendance, over one hundred of whom boarded in the college.

All the branches of a thorough education are taught, including the Languages, ancient and modern, also the higher mathematics.

Particular attention is paid to spelling, Writing, Reading and Composition; also to the manners and morals of the pupils.

EMORY AND HENRY COLLEGE,

WASHINGTON COUNTY, VA.

On the Eleventh of September

our scholastic year begins, and continues forty consecutive weeks. It is divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. The Spring session begins January 29, 1874. Students can enter at any time, though they should if possible begin with the session. The entire expenses for the first session, including board, tuition, fuel, room-rent, servants and contingent fees, need not exceed $160. Other rates, so remarkably low considering the educational advantages here offered, must commend this institution to the favor of those seeking thorough intellectual training. Before selecting your school, consult any of those knowing the college, or address one of our Alumni and old students, prominent among whom are the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the Professors of the University of Virginia, who have authorized this reference, or send directly to the President, designed for a catalogue or for any information desired.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

REMARKABLE BOOK.

THE LIFE OF TRUST.

A Narrative of the Lord's Dealings with GEORGE MULLER, written by himself, with an Introduction by FRANCIS WAYLAND, D. D.

New Edition, revised, enlarged and improved, the History brought down to the present time, five full-page pictures of the several Orphan Houses added.

12mo. Cloth, $1.75.

The wonderful history of Mr. Muller and his work in Bristol, England, furnish an emphatic reply to Bro. Tyndall's demand for proof of the efficacy of prayer in common life. Since the commencement of Mr. Muller's amazing "work of faith and labor of love" he has received, and from every quarter of the globe, as he affirms, in ANSWER TO PRAYER (an one having ever been asked to contribute a dollar,) over $2,500,000, and the means of which five buildings for the accommodation of 2,050 Orphans have been erected; these have been taught in the various schools and have been supported. Bibles, Tracts, etc., in immense numbers and in various languages have been distributed; 150 missionaries are employed in part or in part from contributions received; and, as Mr. Muller states in his last report, "we want nothing; the work goes steadily on. Faith is above circumstances—no war, no fire, no winter, no monetary panic, no loss of friends, no death is permitted to touch it. It triumphs over all difficulties."

Every Christian read and ponder the facts of this wonderful history, and they cannot fail to find them which is so fresh, as remarkable for stirring incidents, for all-absorbing interest as any novel, while the incentives to a life of holy exertion, and the most unwonted and powerful motive to the prayer and believing prayer of filial trust in the living GOD. FROM A RECENT ANALYSIS BY

Prof. W. O. Atwater, of Yale College, the following table will show the chemical composition of YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Albuminoids | 12.45 | Sugar | 13.06 |
| Fat | 3.21 | Starch | 55.62 |
| Fiber | 8.59 | Cellulose | 2.95 |
| Ash | 2.12 | | |

It will be seen that the Albuminoids (albumen, gluten, casein, etc.) constitute nearly thirteen per cent. "These," says Yeomans, "are the flesh-forming principles—the true elements of nutrition."

It is particularly valuable to all requiring a highly nutritious meal at the same time easily assimilated diet, and hence is used as an article of daily consumption in climates which occasion rapid waste of the system. "Almost all Sandies, Africans and aboriginal Americans use it as their chief nourishment."—Lewis Figuier, in his work on the Vegetable World.

In Hermetically-sealed YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN all the nutritive qualities of the grain are preserved. The grain is cut from the ear and placed in tin canisters with the rich juices (or milk) which exude from it, and is then sealed air-tight and the canister subjected to steam heat, which coagulates the albumen. In this condition it will keep for years. It will be seen by this that all the nutritive properties of the grain are preserved, and the most nourishing article of food in the domain of nature placed within the reach of all.

New Orleans Markets.

From the New Orleans Price Current.

The river is 12 feet 10 inches below high-water mark.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the fifth instant:

|---|---|
| Louisiana and Mississippi | bales 1,116 |
| Mobile | 253 |
| Texas | 74 |
| Total | 1,133 |

On Saturday the movement commenced with a moderate demand, and, notwithstanding a scant supply, the indications were that the business would be of average extent, but, buyers being unable to find the kinds wanted, the sales were confined to 275 bales, at full prices, without any quotable improvement. A pretty fair style of ordinary sold at 12¾c., and other grades within the range of previous quotations. On Monday the demand was more general, but operations were restricted not only by scant supplies, the receipts continuing limited, but also by the advanced pretensions of factors. The sales embraced 350 bales, at prices requiring a partial advance in quotations of ⅛c. Low middling, new crop, good style, sold at 13c., strict low middling at 13¼c. for both old and new, strict low middling to middling at 13¾c., and middling, new crop, good style, at 13¾c. Confidence was increased by discouraging crop reports, the prospects of light receipts and an active Liverpool market at advancing prices. On Tuesday the market opened with a good inquiry, and although operations were restricted by scant supplies and factors being more stringent in their pretensions, yet a fair business was done during the morning at very full prices, after which the advantage was, if anything, still more in favor of sellers, and the business summed up 625 bales, at figures in accordance with our advanced quotations below, showing a further improvement, compared with Monday's transactions, of ⅛@¼c. Strict ordinary sold at 14⅜c., good ordinary at 16c., strict do. at 17c., low middling at 17¾c., and strict middling at 19¼c.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 1,000 bales, against 1,100 for the corresponding time last week and 1,150 the week before. We quote:

|---|---|
| Ordinary | 13¾ @ 14¼ |
| Good ordinary | 15⅞ @ 17 |
| Low middling | 17¾ @ 18¾ |
| Middling | 18¾ @ 19¼ |
| Strict middling | 19 @ 19¼ |

SUGAR.—The receipts are trifling, and the stock on hand is small. The demand is only in a job way. On Saturday 160 hhds. were sold, purchased by dealers for shipment to Texas, at 9¼c. for low fair, 10c. for fair, and 10¾c. for seconds, and 30 hhds. on Monday at 9¾c. for common, 10c. for fair, 10¾c. for fully fair, and 11c. for prime.

MOLASSES.—There is none coming in from plantation, and no demand for the stock in the sheds.

CORN.—The supplies have been light, and the demand being fair, prices have advanced 2@3c. ₱ bushel. On Saturday 5,047 sacks sold at 65c. for yellow mixed, 66c. for white mixed, 67c. for white, and 68@69c. for yellow. On Monday 3,950 sacks sold at 68c. for white mixed, 67@68c. for yellow mixed, and 70c. for yellow and white. On Tuesday prices for white were higher, and 1,600 sacks sold at 69c. for mixed, 70c. for yellow, and 72c. for white.

OATS.—Are in light supply and good demand, and prices have advanced. On Saturday 700 sacks sold at 46@47c. for choice Galena, and on Monday the sales embraced 900 sacks at 46@47c. for choice Galena. On Tuesday 1,050 sacks sold at 46@47c. ₱ bushel.

BRAN—Is in good supply and fair demand. There were sales on Saturday and Monday of 500 sacks at 85c. ₱ 100 lbs. On Tuesday 650 sacks sold at 85c. ₱ 100 lbs.

PORK.—The market is dull and depressed, with a good stock on hand. There is no demand, and mess is quoted nominally at $17.25@17.50 ₱ bbl. It is retailing at $17.75@18 ₱ lb.

BACON—Has been very dull. Holders, however, are firmer in their views, and the stock is held strongly, but buyers do not show any disposition to purchase. The sales on Saturday and Monday were confined to 175 casks, in lots, at 9¼c. for shoulders, 10¼c. for clear rib sides, and 10¾c. for clear sides; and 114 boxes at 9¼c. for shoulders, 10¾c. for clear rib sides, and 11c. ₱ lb. for clear sides.

HAMS—Are quiet but firm. There has been scarcely any movement since our last review. Favorite brands of choice sugar-cured are quoted at 15@15¾c., choice 14½@15c., ordinary brands 13@14c. ₱ lb.

DRY SALT MEAT.—Shoulders continue scarce and in demand. They command 9¼c. ₱ lb. in round lots, 9½c. job, and are retailing at 9¾c. ₱ lb. On Tuesday 5 casks sold at 9¼c. ₱ lb.

MONETARY.

Gold opened on Tuesday entirely unsettled (against 01¾ at New York,) and closed at 112¼@112⅝ (against 111¾ at New.)

We have not heard of a sale of silver. Notwithstanding the decline in gold, American half dollars are still quoted at 100. Mexican dollars are quoted at 99¼ gold for new and par for old.

Special Notices.

A CAMP MEETING will be held on the Pontiling circuit, Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, twelve miles west of Enterprise, near the Enterprise and Mount Rose road, beginning on Thursday night before and embracing the first Sabbath in October. It will be on the same plan as last year—self-sustaining. All within ten or fifteen miles of the camp ground must come prepared to take care of themselves. All ministers are invited to attend. There will be conveyance for ministers at Enterprise on Friday.

J. H. HOLLAND, P. C.

THERE will be a camp meeting at Choctaw camp ground, on the Bladon Springs road, ten miles below Butler, on the Butler circuit, Demopolis district, Alabama Conference, commencing on Friday night before the fourth Sunday in September. Preachers are earnestly solicited to attend, and will be provided for. Others will please come prepared to provide for themselves. We most earnestly ask the prayers of the church for a gracious outpouring of God's Spirit.

D. J. WRIGHT, P. C.

A CAMP MEETING will commence at Salem, Greene county, Alabama, nine miles above Eutaw, on Thursday night before the second Sabbath in October. Ministers and their families are respectfully invited. It is expected that others will come with their covered wagons or cloth tents, to take care of themselves and stock.

J. W. MCCANN, P. C.

NOTICE.—There will be a camp meeting on the Farmerville circuit, at Alabamo church, half way between Homer and Farmerville, commencing on the nineteenth of September. The people are invited to come, bringing their tents and provisions with them. The ministers will be provided for.

R. PARVIN, Pastor.

MIDWAY CAMP MEETING, Floyd and Delhi circuit, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday, October 1, 1873. Arrangements have been made to establish a public restaurant for the accommodation of those who may prefer it to tenting on the ground. Meals will be furnished at fifty cents. Horses will be fed and taken care of at reasonable rates. In case families desire board they should write and make arrangements with P. W. DeFrance or James A. Leggett, Midway, previous to the commencement, so as to avoid inconveniences that otherwise might occur. All ministers of the gospel are invited, and will be cared for free of charge. Ministers should report to Joel T. Daves, presiding elder, or G. M. Liverman, preacher in charge, as soon as they arrive, who will see that they are provided with comfortable lodging. Brethren, remember in whom you trust, and that nothing good has ever been accomplished without great effort. Heaven is to be gained only by overcoming.

G.

THE New Hope and Pleasant Ridge camp meeting, for DeKalb circuit, Mississippi Conference, will begin on Friday night before the second Sunday in October next. Ministerial help is solicited from the adjoining works. Conveyance to the camp ground from Lauderdale station, Meridian and Ohio railroad, will be furnished on Friday to ministers coming by railroad.

D. G. W. ELLIS, Pastor.

CAMP MEETING.—The camp meeting on Big Creek, fifteen miles north of Alexandria, begins on Wednesday, October 1. Preachers are invited, and will be provided for. Others must come prepared to take care of themselves. Corn will be on hand at a moderate price.

F. WHITE, P. E.
J. F. WYNN.

CAMP MEETING.—Change of Time. The time of holding the camp meeting at China Grove, Dale county, Alabama, has been changed from Friday night before the second Sabbath in September to Friday night before the first Sabbath in October next. The friends of the camp meeting and ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church are cordially and earnestly invited to attend.

A. DOWLING, P. C.

THERE will be a camp meeting on the Sparta and Ringgold [illegible] and a half miles east of Sparta, on the Vernon road, commencing on Thursday before the first Sunday in October next. We expect a good many tents, and hope to entertain the people well. We invite both preachers and people to attend.

DAVID A. BODDIE, P. C.

CAMP MEETING.—A camp meeting will commence at Smith's camp ground, Gaston circuit, Alabama Conference, near DeSotoville, Choctaw county, Alabama, on Friday, the third of October next. A cordial invitation is extended to ministerial brethren.

C. B. DUBOSE, P. C.

CAMP MEETING.—There will be a camp meeting at the Line Wood camp ground, Spring Hill circuit, Meridian district, commencing on the twenty-sixth of September, 1873, which is Friday before the fourth Sunday in September. We invite all ministers who can do so to assist us. Line Wood is about twenty-two miles from Lauderdale station, Mississippi. Brethren wishing to attend will please address me at Daleville, Lauderdale county, Mississippi.

J. D. HAY, P. C.

ANDREW J. BRIGGS, P. E.

Appointments for Quarterly Meetings.

NOTICE.—The Publishing Committee of the ADVOCATE gave it as their opinion that the insertion of the notices of Quarterly Conferences once or twice was sufficient, and, as the space of the paper is valuable, they passed a resolution recommending that they "be not inserted more than once or twice." Our friends who are interested in these appointments will take due notice of the rule, as we propose to be governed by the resolution in future.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The Secretary of the Navy received the following to-day:

"U. S. STEAMER JUNIATA,
"St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 10, 1873.

To Hon. George M. Robeson, Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C.:

"The Juniata arrived here to-day. She met the Tigress at Upper Navik and supplied her with coal. She sailed August 11 for Littleton island. The Tigress met the Juniata's steam launch, Lieutenant Delong, who had been to Cape York in the launch, off Teslnsk. At Disco the Juniata met the Tigress again and coaled her on August 25.

"Commander Greer reports that the camp of the Polaris was found August 14, off Littleton island, latitude seventy-eight degrees twenty-three minutes north, longitude seventy-three degrees forty-six minutes west.

"The crew of the Polaris had all gone south two months before in two whale-boats taken from the ship. The Polaris sunk one month before. We kept a careful lookout going north and coming south and saw no signs; stopped at all the settlements, but heard no news of the Polaris. They are probably on board a whaler from Cape York.

"The Tigress left Disco August 25 for the Labrador coast, to continue the search as long as her coal and the season permit."

The above dispatch was received from Commander Braine, commanding the Juniata. Littleton island, referred to, is about sixty miles north of Northumberland island. It is a little south of the life-boat depot of Dr. Kane in 1853. The probability is that the Tyson party were mistaken as to the locality of their separation from the Polaris, and that it was really Littleton island, instead of Northumberland. It is hardly possible that the Polaris, in her disabled condition, succeeded in any way in reaching a point sixty miles further north. It is understood that orders were sent by telegraph to Commander Braine to continue the search for the crew of the Polaris.

WORCESTER, Sept. 10.—Ex-Governor Loring called the convention to order. Ex-Governor Bullock permanent chairman. Honr and Butler were loudly cheered.

Butler was withdrawn and Washburne was unanimously nominated.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 10.—The yellow fever prevails here as an epidemic, and business of all kinds is prostrated. There is much suffering for want of attention, the nurses and doctors being worn out. The interments yesterday from yellow fever ten and to-day twelve. At least four hundred are down, though not all with the fever. The sickness is fearful to contemplate.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 10.—The Holliday Street theater, St. Nicholas hotel, and a four-story building, used as the high school, were burned at five o'clock this morning. The guests at the St. Nicholas, among whom were many actors, escaped with most of their wardrobe.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Princeton College opened to-day, President McCosh delivering the address. Some two hundred students have entered, many of whom are from the Southern States.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 11.—Twelve hundred dollars were raised in a few minutes on 'Change this morning for the sick and suffering people at Shreveport, Louisiana, and a committee appointed to solicit subscriptions for the same purpose. It is expected that a handsome sum will be raised.

SIOUX CITY, Sept. 12.—General E. S. McCook, secretary of Dakota Territory, was shot through the breast last night, at Yankton, by P. P. Wintermute, and died at seven o'clock this morning.

McCook attempted to enter the court-room where a railroad meeting was held. He was met at the door by Wintermute, who, after some high words, drew a pistol and shot McCook, the ball entering near the left shoulder and severing an artery. The latter then seized Wintermute, who fired two more shots without effect. In the struggle both fell to the floor and were separated by friends.

McCook was carried to his room at the St. Charles hotel, bleeding profusely. A consultation of physicians pronounced the wound fatal. He gradually sank till the hour mentioned.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 12.—The fever is on the increase. Whole families are down with it. The nurses are worn out. There were thirty deaths yesterday and eighteen to-day up to four P. M.

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 12.—Several parties who left Shreveport yesterday arrived here to-night. They report the yellow fever on the increase. Every stage leaving that city for this is crowded with terror-stricken people.

A son of Mr. Brooks, proprietor of the Southern hotel at Shreveport, who arrived here yesterday, received a telegram to-night, announcing the death of his father from the fever.

It is thought the removal of the Red river raft has had considerable to do with the epidemic.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 13.—The deaths by yellow fever so far are in the northwest part of the city. Only one death up to date south of Poplar street.

MOBILE, Sept. 13.—The Board of Health has instructed the mayor to issue a proclamation quarantining New Orleans so far as local travel is concerned. Through passengers will not be affected by this order.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 14.—There was considerable excitement here to-day in consequence of the address published this morning by the Board of Health in regard to the prevalence of yellow fever. A great many persons left the city.

Several new cases are reported in the southern part of the city this afternoon.

The number of interments reported by the board to-day was fourteen, eleven of whom died of yellow fever.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 14.—To Dr. C. B. White: The fever is raging terribly. It is of a very malignant type. Impossible to ascertain as yet the origin of the fever. Will write you in a couple of days.

Thirty deaths yesterday.

J. F. FINNEY, M. D.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 15.—Fever is still raging. The weather is very unfavorable. Sixty per cent. of those attacked die. There is great suffering in all classes of society for want of nurses. The surviving citizens are doing all in their power to check the disease. Interments yesterday, twenty-two. There were many deaths last night.

The Howard Association is greatly in need of assistance.

The Southwestern Telegram is suspended. The Times still makes its appearance.

George J. Rae, manager of the Western telegraph office here, died to-day at half-past three P. M. Mr. Rae was about twenty-seven years old.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 15.—The wildest rumors prevailed to-day in regard to the yellow fever, and the trains leaving on the various roads were crowded with persons fleeing from the scourge. It is difficult to obtain reliable data in regard to the spread of the disease, but it is quite certain it has made its appearance in various portions of the city and is no longer confined to "Pinch." The Board of Health to-night has returns from only two undertakers, who report twelve interments to-day, nine being from yellow fever.

GRAND HAVEN, Sept. 15.—The propeller Ironsides, of the Engelmann line, connecting with the Detroit and Milwaukee railroad, and one of the largest steamers on the lakes, foundered and sunk seven miles off this port at noon to-day.

There were five boats filled with the crew and passengers. One boat containing five men and four women capsized, and only one man of the party reached shore. Four boats have reached the shore up to this time. One boat containing Captain Sweetman and wife and five passengers has not been heard from. It is feared they are among the lost. Thirty-two persons are known to have been saved, and fourteen bodies have been recovered.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 16.—The number of new cases of yellow fever today is less than for the several preceding days, and the number of interments fell from thirty-three yesterday to twenty-five to-day.

It is not thought, however, that there is any abatement, but that the material for the fever to work on is measurably diminished.

The number of interments since the first of September sums up two hundred and twenty-six; the number of sick is variously estimated from five to eight hundred.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 16.—There is no abatement in the yellow fever, although its ravages are almost exclusively confined to "Pinch," or the northwestern portion of the city adjacent to the mouth of Wolf river, where it first appeared. It is impossible to obtain reliable data in regard to the mortality, but it is evident there is no decrease in the death rate.

BROWNSVILLE, Sept. 16.—The Rio Grande has overflowed its banks for the first time since 1869.

The upper country is inundated.

There is three feet of water in the main plaza in the city of Camargo, and an almost unbroken sheet of water from Brownsville to the gulf.

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 16.—Yellow fever is reported at Fulton, the terminus of the Cairo and Fulton railroad; also at several of the smaller towns in northern Louisiana.

Ten circus men died with it at Vernon on Wednesday.

No trace of fever here yet, though considerable fears are entertained that it will reach here.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Reports from the British consuls in various sections of France, Russia, Italy and Germany show that the cholera is on the increase in those countries.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Verdun was evacuated by the German troops this morning. Immediately after they had left the town the streets were filled with rejoicing persons, and numberless French flags were displayed from the buildings.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—A number of emigrants to Brazil have returned. They complain of great hardships and unfaithfulness of emigration agents.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—Addresses signed by large numbers of the Roman Catholic clergy in the United States have been received by German priests, approving of their attitude in opposition to the Prussian government.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—The evacuation of French territory by the German army of occupation was completed at half-past nine this morning.

A petition numerously signed by members of the Protestant churches of France has been sent to the Protestant deputies in the Assembly, urging them to use all their influence and throw their votes against a monarchy.

NEVER defend an error because you once thought it to be truth.

From the Work.

BELLEVILLE, ALA.—Mr. Editor: The church has been abundantly revived and built up at several points on my circuit. Souls have been converted and new recruits have been mustered into service. I have just closed a meeting at Belleville, and I trust much good was done. At this place we had six conversions.

ROBERT SMILIE, Pastor.

SEPTEMBER 12, 1873.

UNION CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The Lord has been with us in very great power at Mount Hilliard. The church is revived, and is rejoicing on account of the great blessing which has been poured out upon it. Many souls have tasted pardoning love, and sixty-six have joined the church. Bro. B. F. Blow was with us in the spirit of his Master. Bros. James W. Hightower and J. E. D. Broswell, local preacher, gave us their earnest labor and did valuable preaching. In an experience of ten years I never saw such a revival. C. W. CALHOUN.

MOUNT HILLIARD, ALA., Sept. 5, 1873.

CLARKE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The ninth and tenth of August being the time of our third quarterly meeting, to be held at DeSoto, previous arrangements were made by the presiding elder to protract services from the quarterly meeting. The church agreed and all things were ready. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. William B. Hines, was at his post, as usual, and preached with power and in demonstration of the Spirit. The Spirit of the Lord was present with us from beginning to end. Truly it was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The meeting continued for nine days, with very little variation except an increased interest. Having secured the services of the presiding elder, we were assisted by James M. Gunn, of Simbuta station, and J. H. Holland, of Pantding circuit. We also had efficient labor from Bros. N. S. Gun and P. Brasier, local. The church was greatly blessed, sinners convicted, mourners converted and backsliders reclaimed. We had forty-two conversions, ranging from ten to seventy-two years of age. O what a touching thing to see a father of seventy-two winters leaning on his staff, making his way to the altar of prayer! We had twenty-five added to the church. When the meeting closed on Sunday night it was truly good to be there, for it did seem that God's holy Spirit came down in such power as was never witnessed in DeSoto before, and rested upon all.

G. M. GILMORE, P. C.

P. S.—Since writing the above I have been engaged in a meeting at Soule chapel, another church on my work, where we had a gracious time. Many sinners were convicted and the church greatly revived. We had twenty-five conversions and twenty-four additions to the church. We were assisted by Bros. H. Dubose, A. Trotter and H. S. Gilmore, local brethren. God bless the local preachers and help them to be more useful. G. M. G., P. C.

SEPTEMBER 4, 1873.

FROM the following papers it will be seen that our esteemed brother, Rev. B. J. Baldwin, has resigned his charge on account of his own and the health of his family. Dr. Baldwin, we believe, goes to the Northwest Texas Conference.

To the Quarterly Conference of Opelousas Station, M. E. Church South:

DEAR BRETHREN—

The continued feeble health of myself and family urges me to the performance of a duty that I owe alike to you as a charge and to myself—to ask you for a leave of absence from the pastorate of this appointment from the first of October for the remainder of the Conference year, that I may be transferred to a higher latitude, where I can be relieved from the enervating effects of a climate not congenial to our temperaments, and labor more efficiently for our beloved Zion. Our relations during the year have been altogether of the most pleasant character. That, together with the many acts of kindness received, will ever endear me to you.

Most respectfully and fraternally submitted. B. J. BALDWIN.

OPELOUSAS, LA., Sept. 6, 1873.

Resolved, By the Quarterly Conference of the Opelousas station, Methodist Episcopal Church South, at its third session for the year 1873, That we sincerely regret that the health of Dr. B. J. Baldwin and family is such as to induce him to ask leave of absence from his station for the balance of the year.

Resolved, That we hold Dr. Baldwin in very high esteem as a gentleman, pastor and minister, and that we do most heartily recommend him to the confidence of the church and its friends in whatever station he may be assigned.

Resolved, That a copy of the above resolutions be furnished Dr. Baldwin, and a copy forwarded to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and Opelousas Journal for publication.

H. T. BLACKSHEAR, Sec.

OPELOUSAS, LA., Sept. 6, 1873.

REVIVAL AT PITTSBURG.—Bro. Thompson, says the Home Advocate, Jefferson, Texas, assisted by other ministers, traveling and local, has during two or three weeks past been conducting a revival meeting at Pittsburg. Many have been converted and have united with the church.

Delhi Dist., Louisiana Conference.

MR. EDITOR: "We do you to write" of the Delhi district meeting. It was a time of grace, of ointment as on Aaron, and dew as on Hermon. Assembled on Wednesday, the third instant, we did not dissolve until Monday noon following. All the charges were represented. Brethren went into an exhaustive inquiry as to all the interests of the district, temporal and spiritual. For a full report, let the inquisitive and interested send to Rev. Charles F. Evans, our expert secretary, and get a copy of the minutes, equal to anything of the sort in these days of improvement. We but sketch, by request, currente calamo.

One by one brethren reported under an unabated fire of questions, so that it was much like running the Indian gauntlet. Each was glad to get through. The net result was, as appeared from various reports, that hundreds have been converted on the district since its last annual convention; thousands have been contributed to the cause of education, to church-building and other enterprises; thousands have attended on the ministry of the word; many have been baptized and welcomed into the pales of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; very creditable allowances have been made by boards of stewards for the support of the ministry, which, it is hoped, will be fully met in every charge; periodical literature has been circulated; the General Rules have been insisted upon, and a purpose inspired to be still more diligent in future in their enforcement, especially as regards the use and sale of intoxicating drinks; Sunday schools have been encouraged; and the church at all points improved, increased and invigorated with a new life. May I be permitted to say that the presiding eldership on this district has not been a superfluous element in the economy of Methodism? Ministry and membership have rejoiced under its genial influence during the past district year. But our joy, in one sense, has been turned into mourning. The president of our district has been called suddenly from us into a distant and very responsible field of labor. Only the thought that he goes to such a work, so fraught with results to the whole church of God, as that of the superintendency of the Mexican missions, can philosophically reconcile us to his abrupt removal by the inexorable hands of Methodist episcopacy. He goes with the warm love and hearty prayers and faith of the Delhi district.

Does he go with aught else? you may inquire. Yes, sir. The Delhi district is, we humbly think, awake to its privilege in the premises. We have resolved to raise $2,000 this year as our benison on the Mexican mission. And we have begun at Winnsboro, the seat of our conference.

A word on Winnsboro, if you please, before we announce that contribution for Mexico. It is not out of the world, nor buried in the swamp, nor the home of those who can get no further. Twenty-eight miles from the railroad, to be sure, but then it is but a mile or so from Bayou Mason, on an elevated plateau of tertiary, I think, and not of alluvial. Popular phrase calls the locality a ridge. At a depth of nearly forty feet below the surface, as Dr. Rapp informs me, a cypress log has been bored into by the well-borer's augur, bringing up portions of bark, showing the log to be in a good state of preservation. Nevertheless, without challenging a geological discussion, I venture to say that the Bayou Mason hills are tertiary or drift in their structure and formation. Let this be said as a significant and noteworthy fact. But to return to this beautiful ridge, this pleistocene (?) level stretching down Bayou Mason, and occupied by the nice village of Winnsboro. Bro. McKee holds charge here, and has labored faithfully, assisted by young Timothy, Bro. Billingsly. A pretty new church adorns the village, and speaks of his enterprise. His people love him; and they are a lovely people. How graciously they cared for the preachers and the brethren—that is, the laity, so called. Six of us will never forget the home at the house of an Episcopalian sister—so saith the secretary, who talks most religiously elated about his acquaintanceship there. What a center of attraction Jesus is—in him is unity for all! But how the people did pour into Winnsboro from the moss-hung groves and the grass-carpeted fields and cotton farms around our little borough. Sunday was a great day for the Lord. Love-feast was held with such continuous speaking that we had time but for one song at the close. Howbeit, they should have wedged in a stanza or two, coercively, if need be, to impart the animation which singing gives to the love-feast. Let us improve on this next time. The eleven o'clock service was conducted by Bro. Trippett. In his discourse he demonstrated to the congregation—it was a dedication sermon—that money invested in houses of worship, aside from spiritual result, which is incalculable, always remunerates its contributors in direct temporal profits. At the close of that able discourse a call was made for $800 to cancel the debt remaining on the house, so that it might be duly dedicated, and the people promptly pledged the desired amount. In the afternoon Bro. Jackson entertained the good people with a hearty English gospel, after his own style, which is just the style for every true minister of Christ. At night was held our missionary anniversary, mention of which brings me back to that contribution for Mexico.

Bros. Trippett, Daves and Evans were the speakers of the occasion. The first talked eloquently of the missionary enterprise generally; the second gave us the deeply interesting and touching providential history of his connection with the Mexican mission, and Bishop Keener's negotiations for a rallying point for this great enterprise; and the last a telling exposition of the deep spiritual philosophy of giving for God's cause. All this was a feast of things so pleasant that the audience listened with deepening interest until a late hour in the night, and then unanimously, I think, waited for the dessert, which was the collection. Bro. Evans started it at $10 bids; but it didn't stay there. Somehow it changed to $25 dollars, and the $10 pioneers, then demanded that, in all fairness, they might be allowed to transform their tens to twenty-fives, to which Bro. Evans most genially assented. And so it went on, and then alternated to tens and fives, and back to twenty-fives, and finally to a universal response to a call for memberships at $1 each, in which the youngsters took their share; and so Miss Cobb and Master Evans and Miss Evans, and all the Misses Wright, and the rest of them, joined the District Missionary Society. One good, precious mother came up to the secretary's table leading a little son in one hand and a daughter in the other, to give and join; and so they kept on and on until the Sabbath was well-nigh spent. And now the net result, at nearly twelve o'clock, in cash and subscriptions, was $650 for the Mexican mission. That will do for Winnsboro, will it not?

The Lord was with us; the Spirit time and again baptized preachers and people. There were many penitents, and several conversions and accessions to the church. There is prospect of greater increase; for on the night of our leave-taking many gave their hands to Bro. Evans in token and promise of seeking peace with our Father in heaven. Perhaps hardly one in the house failed to do so. May God bless Winnsboro.

I could write more about our meeting and the beautiful champaign country, rich and productive and inviting to immigrants, with a refined society there already, and improving religiously and otherwise, and about the sayings and doings of this really remarkable and blessed district meeting, only I know that newspaper chases are made of iron, and not of India-rubber, so that even an editor cannot put in what he pleases.

A word of sad news, however. Just after the close of our meeting, on Monday evening, a terrible tragedy was enacted, which has shocked the whole community far and wide. I allude to the horrible murder of Judge Crawford and District Attorney Harris, about twelve miles southwest of Winnsboro, while on their return to town, to resume the session of court on Tuesday, the day following. I can only say that, as far as I could see, the whole people were in quiet and orderly attendance upon the sessions of the court and District Conference, and that the whole of this dreadful affair can only be attributed to private and personal motives. Two other murders in the surrounding region of country have also occurred. But these dismal events are not indexes of the condition and character of our community. Our people are depressed in spirit, it is true, because they feel that they are oppressed in their civil relations. But in face of all this they are patiently waiting and laboring for that relief which, under a good Providence, intelligent and legitimate action may secure. Louisiana bleeds and suffers; but she struggles and hopes. Her church and ministry of every denomination are laboring for truth and justice and mercy, and we trust that God will hearken and do.

Yours in Christ, J. E. CONN.

From China.

The following letters to the superintendent of the Felicity Street Sunday school, of this city, will be read with interest. We must by no means slacken our zeal for China. Let us keep this mission before the church and the Sundny schools, and increase our efforts to sustain and strengthen it.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, July 22, 1873.

Hon. W. H. Foster, Superintendent Felicity Street Sunday School:

MY DEAR BROTHER—I have long delayed writing you, hoping to find time to do so at more length, but the favorable opportunity has not arrived. I write now, however, of necessity, to acquaint you of some changes we have found it necessary to introduce into our school arrangements.

Hitherto both Bro. Lambuth and myself had boarding schools, which were supported in a large part by contributions from Felicity and Morean, and we had hoped to continue them permanently; but circumstances have determined us to unite all our efforts and funds on one boarding school, to be located in Soochow, instead of Shanghai.

I have not time to enter fully into details, or I would like very much to set before you all our reasons for that step. I may say, however, that the chief reason was want of funds for two schools. These schools are certainly among our most hopeful agencies, but are at the same time difficult to manage and sustain. The boys are taken away by their parents, often against their will, after having been in school a year or two, and that we cannot prevent unless we enter into an agreement, which we have never been able to do, as we never had any security for the continuance of the schools. Several of my boys remained in the school for periods ranging from two to four years, and in nearly every instance they did well, and were admitted into the church on their own application. But their parents were constantly applying for them to leave school, and seek some employment to help support their families, and in several instances they were forbidden to return after the Chinese new year vacation. In that way I found that I was losing them all gradually; and being powerless to help myself in that particular, I the more readily consented to give up my school and give the funds to unite with those of Bro. Lambuth, that there might be enough, and also furnish some encouragement to bind the boys by an agreement of at least five years, if necessary, to enable us to train them properly. One of my best boys, perhaps the very best, who has long been supported by your school, would not consent to leave, and last Chinese new year refused to go home at all, lest his father would not permit him to return. He is still in school at Soochow, and says he wishes to become a preacher. He is a promising lad about sixteen years old, and I have no doubt you will be pleased to consider him as a special pupil, still prayed for and supported by your noble school.

You will no doubt regret the change we have been necessitated to make, but under the circumstances we thought it just to you, to ourselves and the mission, to make such changes as would economize the funds and give us better opportunities of harvesting our labors. With ten thousand thanks to you and the schools for past favors, and hoping still to hear from you regularly in behalf of the one school, believe me ever

Your brother in Christ,
YOUNG J. ALLEN.

P. S.—Bro. Lambuth will have special oversight of the school, and will give you reports of same. I still continue my day school, the expense of which is about $100 United States currency per annum.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, June 11, 1873.

DEAR BRO. FOSTER: By this I send another letter to the dear children of the two Sabbath schools, who have for so long a time manifested an interest in the conversion of the heathen, and who have so kindly sent of their funds to aid the young of China to learn something of Jesus. I closed my school in Shanghai, sold the premises in December last, and erected buildings at once in the city of Soochow. I had not sufficient funds to carry on the school, and so handed the boys over to the Episcopal mission of Shanghai. After selling the premises here I had sufficient funds to carry on the school at Soochow for some time, and more funds should come. The boys' parents or guardians were unwilling for them to go away from Shanghai, lest they might never see them, or lest they might secretly be conveyed away to some foreign country. It would not do to compel them to go. But they are well cared for, and I am happy to tell you that seven of the number have already professed the name of Jesus, and have been baptized and received into the Episcopal church. You cannot imagine the joy it gave me when they came and told me they had professed faith in the Lord Jesus. I am sure you and all dear Christian friends will rejoice with me to hear these glad tidings. The school in Soochow is increasing, and new boys are coming in as boarders. Bro. Marshall will have the school in connection with our church at that place. I shall go, in a few days, to see them, and visit our out-stations. Bro. Allen has closed his school as a boarders' school. He will simply have a day school. All the funds coming after this will be thrown into one school at Soochow, for the money we get is not sufficient to support two schools. He wanted his boys to go to Soochow; but one gave his consent, and he has yet to get his father's consent before he can go. If I can get sufficient funds I would like to place about twenty boys in the school. I think it can be done. Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain

Your brother in Christ our Lord.
J. W. LAMBUTH.

DURING the session of the late Wesleyan Conference, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, a deputation of the Evangelical Non-conformist ministers was received by the Conference. It was the first occasion of the kind in the history of British Wesleyanism, and created great interest. The deputation was introduced to the Conference by the secretary, and Rev. G. Bell, their spokesman, having said a few words, the Rev. Mr. Morrell read a short but well-worded address, and it was followed by a speech from Rev. Henry Robjohns that was full of nervous thought and energy. The president of the Conference and Mr. Arthur responded in excellent style. We trust this may be taken as an indication that the Non-conformists and Wesleyans are beginning to realize that Providence intends they should join hands in defense of the faith once delivered to the saints. As a matter of course the clergymen of the Church of England had no part in these Christian congratulations.

AS FAITH is the evidence of things not seen, so things that are seen are the perfecting of faith. I believe a tree will be green when we see him fearless in winter; I know he is green when I see him flourishing in summer.—Warwick.

BEAUTIFUL CHILD.

BY JULIA V. TOLIVER.

Beautiful child, with thy waxen face,
Still and pure in its infant grace,
What do thy closed eyes now behold
In the wondrous city of pearl and gold?
Do they look on the palm-trees waving free,
And the river that floweth noiselessly?
Have they caught a light from the eyes that smiled,
But now, in heaven, my beautiful child?

Beautiful child, I have dreamed for thee
What thy future, that hovereth near, should be;
I have placed thee on heights that were high and grand,
By all Fame's summery breezes fanned,
Where the worshiping nations that knelt around
Should grace thy brows with their fairest crown.
But the angels know that my dreams were wild,
For God hath crowned thee, my beautiful child.

Beautiful child, how my hopes for thee
Rose on eagle wings, bright and free,
Till I saw thee, my pet, with prophet eyes
That pierced the vail of the vaulted skies,
And heard thy voice with its under-chime,
Sing the mystic songs of a future time;
But God hath taken thee, undecided—
Thou art singing in heaven, my beautiful child.

Beautiful child, how my love for thee
Encircled thy young life, full and free,
Thy vanished past, with its bright, brief years,
Sunbright with smiles that were gemmed with tears;
Thy beautiful Present, the great To Be,
When thy bark should sail o'er the boundless sea—
Lo! the anchor is dropped while the waves are mild,
For thy God hath loved thee, my beautiful child!

Beautiful child, I have questioned thee
What thy mystic future should be;
Whether thy feet on the heights should climb,
Or walk 'mid the valley's dust and grime;
Or if thou shouldst quaff the draught divine,
Or thy lips grow pale with the lees of the wine.
And I sit here alone, and reconciled,
For God hath answered, my beautiful child.

"Ye are the Light of the World."

MR. EDITOR: Organizations, granges and rings are the order of the day, and to many serious thinking persons forbode trouble for the future. Yet perhaps the most serious combination of all is the attempt to monopolize the privilege of bearing the "glad tidings of salvation to the sinner" under patent right, according to an act of the court of Heaven, signed, sealed and delivered by Jesus Christ when he said: "Ye are the light of the world." They would have us understand that "unto them only the right is given to preach the gospel, baptize and administer the Lord's Supper." They only are God's people; with them only Jesus abides.

There are three rival companies, making the "patent right claim," operating in the United States, No. 1 is hoary with age. A bloody record she has laid up in her efforts to punish infringers. The sturdy blows dealt by Luther, Knox, Wesley and others have made this company somewhat wary about using force. Vain protests, with petitions for sympathy, are weapons now mainly used. Company No. 2 is somewhat younger, though very pretentious. Her garments are not altogether free from the blood of martyrs who dared to ignore the pretended patent right in the old country. Over in the Western States this company seek to gather the wise, the honorable and wealthy of the land, and is content to feel a supreme contempt for all "the sects." No. 3 once had but little to say about a claim to antiquity, but of late years makes great boast that "they only are the true gospel church, in direct, unbroken succession from the apostles." (Did you ever hear about Roger Williams and Ezekiel Holloman?)

These three patent righted, soul-saving companies are writing many books, preaching many sermons, scattering many tracts, all to convince mankind in general, and the "sects in particular," that when Jesus said, "Ye are the light of the world," he meant that he was tired of the thankless task of personal search and care for souls. He had accumulated considerable honor, and laid up a large capital, but intended for the future to farm out to the highest bidder the whole business of lightening the world; and accordingly, when he ascended on high, he left behind a sealed contract for the whole business. These three companies each profess to possess that contract. At present they are busy in obtaining a large number of adherents, trusting doubtless, some day in the future, by means of a ballot-box, to force the government of the United States to protect said patent right pretensions.

In some places it is claimed by leading men of Company 3 that there are strong indications that all of the honorable, intelligent and wealthy of the "Methodist sect" are preparing to go down into the "liquid grave," then up out of the water into the bosom of No. 3, while the refuse will fall away to No. 1. What a glorious event, to be sure (when it comes to pass,) judging from the joy, parade and noise made over some poor, weak-minded man, woman or child proselyted from some one of the "sects," specially the Methodist. But what a sad day that will be for the world, dead in trespass and sin.

It seems strange, since God makes rain and sunshine free to all, and sends them direct from heaven's storehouse, that salvation must be peddled out by a patent right company. No, sinner, be not deceived; there is no patent right on Jesus' care and love for your soul. "Ye" means every soul that professes love and discipleship to Jesus. It is your prerogative to look direct to him for help, without intervention of priest or church. It is the business of every Christian to go out upon the battle-field of life and death, prepared with bandages, lint, cordials, restoratives and a canteen of the "water of life," with a bright, shining lamp buckled to the front of the cap, and to the best of his ability help the unfortunate ones found there, always calling for help when he needs it. Jesus sits upon the throne in heaven, somewhat like the electrician in the City Hall. Though unseen to the outside world, he is in a charmed circle, with communicating, receiving power concentrated in the magnetic wires radiating to every point. He is absent to sight, yet present in the mighty forces at his command, guiding, comforting, saving souls. He could not intrust erring man with the powers of infallibility and omnipotence of action.

When his servants become inflated by success, power and wealth, and are more zealous about the cut and color of a coat than in breaking the bread of life to perishing souls; more engaged about the mode of water baptism than the possession of the Holy Ghost baptism, he has but to call for volunteers, fresh from the plow, anvil, net and loom, and from every quarter they spring up, and from grave-stones, stumps, pavements and mines they preach a pure, unadulterated gospel. To a soul perishing for water a draught from a battered tin-cup will restore as quick as from a golden chalice. Remember, "ye" means every enlightened soul. Let Companies 1, 2 and 3 wrangle about their patent right privileges. Your business is to don work-clothes, then run to and fro among men, shedding rays of pure gospel light.

Don't feel ashamed that your light is but a "penny dip." Souls are perishing because so few "penny dips" are in use. TREMOR.

Pre-Punctuality.

PREACHER AND STEWARD.

Preacher.—How do you do, Bro. Steward? I have had a long ride this morning. Am I in time for my appointment?

Steward.—Yes, sir, I suppose so, or nearly so. The bell was rung some time since, and some persons have been here at the church, and have gone home, thinking you would not come.

Pr.—They need not have been in such a hurry.

St.—No, indeed, they should not have been in such a hurry; but you know watches differ in their count of time; and some of them had fast watches.

Pr.—What made them think I was not coming?

St.—I do not know. Some of them said you might be sick, or your family might be sick, or your horse, or the creek might be up, or some other ill might have befallen you.

Pr.—You all know that I am always at my appointments here when it is possible for me to come.

St.—Yes, I believe you are; but there have been so many disappointments that the people rather look to be disappointed, and some of them seem to like it. They want something about which to complain and find fault.

Pr.—I was about to say: Let them find fault; and yet I suppose it would be better in some laudable way to stop their mouths.

St.—Yes; if I may suggest, would it not be better to start earlier—say the night before—and thus give yourself more time? Then, if your horse fell sick, or a wheel should get broken, you would have time to remedy the evil, and get to your appointment in time to preach, and nobody would be disappointed. And then if you were here before the time your presence and sermon would stop the mouths of these croakers and complainers.

Pr.—But, as it is, I pride myself on my punctuality.

St.—Yes, punctuality is a good word; but there might be such a word as pre-punctuality. Yes, pre-punctuality is better—that is, a little before the time. If the preacher arrives in the vicinity of his appointment some hours before the time he has opportunity to learn the state and wants of his congregation; he has time to rest, to meditate, to pray and prepare himself for his great work; and the people would know that he was on hand, and ready to serve them and his Master.

Pr.—That, indeed, might be better. I will think of that compound word, pre-punctuality.

St.—Yes, brother, I think it is better. Let me tell you of Bishop Keener in this respect. Some years since, before he became a Bishop, when he was presiding elder on the New Orleans district, he was spending the week with us, but was to go to his quarterly meeting, on the following Saturday, at Baton Rouge, some thirty miles away. We tried to persuade him to tarry with us over Friday night, assuring him that we would land him in Baton Rouge before eleven o'clock on the following morning. But nothing could induce him to stay; and so we went down with him on Friday night. The Bishop said: "I wish to be there in time to rest, in time to see 'how the land lies,' and how they are getting along." And, having Friday night to rest, and Saturday morning to look around him, he preached one of his best sermons at eleven o'clock, and assisted in doing up a vast amount of business in the Quarterly Conference, tending to benefit and build up the church.

Pr.—I thank you, brother, for your suggestion, and assure you that hereafter pre-punctuality shall be my motto and rule of action. But all that we can do now is to go to dinner. LOOKER ON.

Texas.

MR. EDITOR: At the request of many Mississippi friends I propose to give them, through the ADVOCATE, the results of my own observations, and the information obtained from other reliable observers, in reference to the soil, climate, health and resources of Texas in a number of serial articles, not transcending, I hope, the limits prescribed by yourself or some other editor in relation to serials. Having come recently to Texas and traveled extensively through its borders, trying to keep my eyes and ears open for my own sake, as well as for others—friends and countrymen—I will endeavor to embody, as well as I may, the result in these papers.

There are two great distinguishing characteristics of the lands of this vast commonwealth—timbered and prairie. Each of these is characterized by great uniformity, both as to surface and quality of land, so far as my observation has extended. The uniformity is greater than your correspondent has witnessed in any other State, South or West. In the vast breadth of acreage of woodland, as you travel north and west through what is called east Texas, the area of first quality of upland is very limited, and the deltas of the branches, creeks and rivers quite inferior in productiveness. While the upland woodlands are uniformly medium in quality and of uniform surface, gently undulating as the lands of Madison and Hinds counties, Mississippi, they produce cotton astonishingly well to their appearance. They are of a light sandy soil, mellow and of easy cultivation, and when fresh are very remunerative to the labor bestowed, one hand cultivating thirty acres, and making about double the quantity raised by the same planter in Mississippi. In passing along the line of the Texas and Pacific railroad, from east to west, you first strike lands very much resembling those of Hinds and Madison counties. Hickory, black-jack, post oak and red oak, with a sprinkling, in spots, of walnut and gum; very open woods in their early settlement, and arable among the green timbers, and producing fine crops from their first cultivation. This portion of the State was in a high state of cultivation previous to the war, and there are all the evidences of an advanced civilization, as indicated in the wealth, intelligence and refinement of its people. Marshall and Jefferson are the leading cities in this portion of the State, the latter having made rapid strides in material development in the years immediately succeeding the war, and the former now bounding forward in the career of progress, within whose corporate limits are located the vast machine shops and other extensive buildings of the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company, built at an estimated cost of $3,000,000. The spirit of enterprise infused by the introduction of so much capital and labor by this wealthy corporation has rejuvenated this once prosperous country, which had experienced the blighting effects of the demoralization of labor with other portions of the South where slave labor greatly predominated. The population of Marshall has nearly doubled in the last year or two, and is now estimated at about seven thousand. It is located at the junction of the Transcontinental and Texas and Pacific railroads, which are being prosecuted to completion with unexampled energy and success. It is estimated that from four to five hundred miles of these roads, which belong to the same company, will have been completed within one year from the opening of the good weather last spring. In subsequent numbers I will speak of the country on the route of these great railways, as they advance west, reserving for the last a description of the far-famed prairies of the west, the most fertile and beautiful uplands, and the greatest breadth of acreage in one unbroken body of rich land, resembling the richest alluvions of the delta of the Mississippi, that my eyes ever beheld. H. M. BOOTH.

That Parsonage.

MR. EDITOR: It is a matter for general Methodist congratulation that at last we have in Louisiana one parsonage worthy of the name. From all accounts the Shreveport brother has built a complete house. Persons who have been in it say "there is nothing deficient in its construction, nothing wanting in its appointments." The writer had a glimpse of it once, and, as you said, Mr. Editor, it looked more "like a nobleman's villa than a Methodist preacher's lodge." I stand to this, though I have to draw on my imagination as to the looks of the "villa." As parsonages generally are old, dilapidated, leaky, smoky concerns, over which the spirit of comfort would not hover long enough to take a look at the premises, it is refreshing to know that one brother and family have a comfortable lodging. "Every rose has its thorn." It is a sad state of things that this brother cannot remain for another term to enjoy the results of the care and anxiety he has endured to build this parsonage. But the "inexorable limit"—how hard it does bear sometimes on both people and preacher! I suppose Bro. W. will do the same thing for some other work. May he live to do the like for every circuit in Louisiana!

Meanwhile I would like to know how many preachers' minds are continually haunted by the picture of Shreveport parsonage? I wonder how many preachers catch themselves saying: "Well, W.'s time is out. Somebody must take his place. May be ——"

One thing I fear. Somebody will be disappointed. In regard to that succession the house itself imposes two conditions which may not be overlooked. It is quite a large house; consequently a preacher with a small family "need not apply." To put a small family in such a mansion would be a positive affliction to the small family. There is attached to this parsonage a "study;" hence the man who spends his time "gadding about the country or lounging around the streets" can have no hope. He may give up in despair at once. These two conditions grow out of the structure of the house itself. Now, looking at the number of parsonages that Louisiana Methodists have not built, and the general characteristics of those they have provided for their preachers, I would not be surprised to see at the next Conference a goodly number of studious men with large families who are "compelled to move!" OUTIS.

Vanderbilt University.

The massive foundations of the main edifice, says the Nashville Christian Advocate, are to be laid at once; this will be done, we presume, by Christmas, and as soon as the winter is over and gone the magnificent superstructure will be erected. An advertisement has been inserted by order of the president of the board, in the Nashville papers, that "sealed proposals will be received until September 9, at noon, for the excavation and stone-work required for the foundation walls; also for the door and window-frames and the cut stone-work, embracing water-table, door and window-sills for the basement story. Plans and specifications can be seen at the office of the architect. The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals." If the main edifice will look as well on the ground as it does on paper it will indeed be magnificent. Here is a truthful description of it from the Banner:

The east and west elevations present a front of 176 feet each in length, with a height of 60 feet from the ground to the top of the cornice.

The north and south elevations show 118 feet 6 inches—i. e., from the face of the greatest projection on the east front to the face of the greatest projection on the west front—the width of each wing or projection being 56 feet.

The central projection on the east front, in which is the main entrance, is flanked by a tower on each side, which affords two additional entrances to the basement story and main floor. The towers also contain the stairways leading to the upper stories.

From the east to the west front there is a continuous corridor 14 feet wide, intersecting a central corridor 20 feet wide and 52 feet long, to the line of the stair-halls, the latter being 15 feet wide.

The area embraced in the plan of basement is partitioned off into lecture-rooms, laboratories, apparatus-rooms, professors' offices and furnace-room, for the departments of chemistry and natural philosophy, together with water-closet apartments and a room for coal and heating apparatus.

The first floor above the basement contains the president's office, faculty-room and cloak-rooms, together with four recitation-rooms and lecture-rooms for the professors of Latin and moral philosophy.

There are offices for the use of the professors on this floor also, and convenient to their respective lecture-rooms.

The second floor above the basement is arranged for a chapel, library, two society-rooms, and an office each for librarian and janitor.

The chapel will seat on its main floor about 450 students comfortably, and the library is of sufficient capacity to contain 10,000 volumes.

The third floor will be used exclusively for the department of mathematics, civil and mechanical engineering, with one room set apart for museum and cabinet—that being immediately over the library. The gallery of the chapel is also entered from this floor.

The corridors, except where cut off by the chapel, library and museum, are the same in every story.

The central corridor in every story is made octagonal at the four corners, in which are niches for statuary.

The heights of the several stories, commencing with the basement, are as follows: Basement, 13 feet; first story, 16 feet; second story, 15 feet; third story, 14 feet.

The basement or foundation-walls are designed to be of stone, and ten feet above the surface of the ground. The class of masonry to be used is hammer-dressed rubble and hammer-dressed coursed work. The superstructure is designed to be of brick, with white stone-dressings, such as window-caps, sill-courses, etc.

The thickness of the walls of the first story will be twenty-six inches, or three brick. The second story twenty-one and a half inches, or two and a half brick. The third story seventeen inches, or two brick. The main coralce is also designed to be of brick and stone.

One of the towers is to be used as an observatory, and one for a clock and bell.

The towers are respectively 150 and 135 feet in height.

A portion of the roof will be covered with slate and the remainder with iron, and will have at the top an ornamental cresting of iron.

The main corners of all projections will be strengthened with buttresses.

The stairways will be six feet in width, with massive balustrades.

Provision is made for two elevators, to be used also for ventilating shafts, to rise from the basement floor to the third story.

Particular attention has been paid to the lighting of the building and its thorough and healthful ventilation.

The design is modeled after the Gothic architecture of the thirteenth century, and is unique in every respect. The drawing of the building presents an elegant and chaste appearance.

It has been the purpose of the architect to make it commodious as well as simple in its general arrangements, that it may be all the more convenient both to professors and students.

AGITATION OF SOUL.—I have seen a lark rising from his bed of grass and soaring upward, singing as he rises, and in hopes to get to heaven and climb above the clouds; but the poor bird was beaten back with the loud sighing of an eastern wind, and his motion made irregular and inconstant, descending more at every breath of the tempest than all the vibrations of his wings served to exalt him, till the little creature was forced to sit down and pant, and stay till the storm was overpast, and then it made a prosperous flight; for then it did rise and sing, as if it had learned music and motion from some angel as he passed some time through the air. So is the prayer of a good man when agitated by any passion. He fain would speak to God, and his words are of this earth earthy; he would look to his Maker, but he could not help seeing also that which distracted him, and a tempest was raised and the man overruled; his prayer was broken, and his thoughts were troubled, and his words ascended to the clouds, and the wandering of his imagination recalled them, and in all the fluctuating varieties of passion they are never like to reach God at all. But he sits down and sighs over his infirmity, and fixes his thoughts upon things above, and forgets all the little vain passages of this life, and his spirit is becalmed, and his soul is even and still; and then it softly and sweetly ascends to heaven on the wings of the Holy Dove, and dwells with God till it returns, like the useful bee, loaded with a blessing and the dew of heaven.—Jeremy Taylor.

A FOSSIL specimen of the extinct dodo, a bird of immense size and peculiar formation, has been found in the gypsum mines at Fort Dodge, Iowa. It has been purchased by an Englishman as a gift to the British Museum.

Obituaries.

ROBERT WESLEY WEATHERBY, son of Septimus and Druellla Weatherby, was born May 18, 1863, was baptized by Rev. T. C. Parish in 1866, and died at Durant, Holmes county, Mississippi, July 31, 1873. These few dates and simple facts—the brief summary of the earthly history of one who has become immortal—though so soon recorded, are linked with household memories that can never die. The death of this bright, promising boy brings home to us with great force the truth that life, in its best estate, is but vanity, and that we have time only to say: "Hail and farewell." "Time, like an ever-rolling stream, bears all its sons away." Little Bob was a punctual attendant at our Sunday school, always with perfect lessons. From perfect health to sickness, in a few days his young life ebbed out and his spirit left for immortality.

GEORGE W. BROWN.

DIED, at his home in Webster parish, Louisiana, September 3, 1873, JAMES SHEA, son of James and Joyce Ford, aged nine years.

The light of the household, the joy and hope of his loving parents, has been taken away by that inscrutable Wisdom whose ways are past finding out. The beautiful bud we so loved to cherish has been transplanted to bloom in the better land above, to dwell in that house not made with hands, the home of the angels. Sad as we may feel at the loss of one so promising, our loss is his eternal gain. But be comforted, father, mother, brothers and sisters. Weep not; it is well with the child. He is not lost, but gone before. Remember who it is that gathers the lambs with his arms and carries them in his bosom. Know you not that Jesus takes our little darlings to himself, that of such he may make a part of the society of heaven, and that where our treasure is there may our hearts be also? W. H. P.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has been the will of an all-wise Providence to take out of our midst our beloved brother, G. W. YARBROUGH, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and a steward; And whereas, we bow with meek submission to the will and dispensation of an all-wise Providence; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we feel with deep regret the heavy loss of our worthy and beloved brother, both in the church and community, for he was a model character in charity, benevolence and piety.

Resolved, That we, the members of the Quarterly Conference, extend our sympathies to the bereaved family and friends.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and that a copy be forwarded to the bereaved family.

SARAH JANE CARSON was born in Madison county, Mississippi, April 15, 1832; was married to W. T. Jones, in Holmes county, Mississippi, December 31, 1852, and died of consumption, in Madison county, Mississippi, September 1, 1873, aged forty-one years, four months and fifteen days. During the whole time of her great suffering she never murmured, but bore it with Christian fortitude, praying that she might die easy. Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ, her prayer was abundantly answered. She died as she had lived, calm and serene, without a struggle or a groan. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and a regular attendant at church. Her seat was rarely vacant. As a Sabbath school teacher she pointed her class to the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world. She always responded when called on to pray in the great congregations. She was a kind and an affectionate wife, a good mother, and one of the few who make a good stepmother. She was a kind neighbor, liberal and generous to all. She leaves a husband and six children and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her loss. May our loss be her eternal gain. W. T. JONES.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased almighty God to remove from our midst and take to himself one of the most worthy and most esteemed ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Bro. J. D. LOFTIN; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Quarterly Conference of Rocky Mount circuit, Alabama Conference, convened at Rehoboth on the thirtieth day of August, 1873, That in the death of Bro. Loftin the conference has lost one of its best ministers, the church one of her most faithful and most devoted members, and his bereaved relatives one whom they ever loved.

Resolved, That we deeply lament the loss of our aged and loved father of the church, whose long life of usefulness, integrity and Christian character won for him the respect and love of hundreds throughout the Southern States, and especially of the people of this circuit, in whose midst that valuable life was mainly spent.

Resolved, That while we feel that no other on earth can jointly supply his place as our friend around the fireside, our minister in the pulpit and his most noble examples to the world, and while we feel, too, resigned to the sovereign will of him who "doeth all things well," we would display particularly to the youth of this land his whole life, without a blemish, as a model worthy of imitation.

Resolved, That the relatives of the deceased have our heartfelt sympathy in this their saddest bereavement.

Resolved, That a copy of the above be sent to the New Orleans and Nashville Christian Advocates for publication, and also a copy to Mrs. S. E. Thomson, his sister.

B. L. SELMAN, P. C.
E. Y. MCMORRIES, Act. Sec.

ABNER MCGEHEE, the subject of this sketch, was born at Pearlington, Mississippi, December 30, 1852. Born of Methodist parentage, he was brought up in the principles and usages of our beloved Methodism. Deprived of his father at an early age, his mother, a true "mother in Israel," made it her especial life-long duty to stamp religion upon the plastic minds of her children. Abner, when in his fourteenth year, made a profession of religion, and joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. Horace Jewell. Ardent and impetuous in his disposition, this young soldier of the cross had to fight many hard battles with himself and the world. While but a boy his earnings for years almost entirely supported his mother and a younger brother and sister. Exposed to the world of business, with such responsibilities upon his shoulders, his heart often failed him. Sometimes he would retrograde, and despair of going onward in religion. Many were the conversations I had with him on religious subjects, for he was as a younger brother to me, and dearly did he love to talk about Jesus. His health became poor about the first of July. On the first Sunday of July he attended Sabbath school, church and class meeting. From the last he went home, sick with a fever, which speedily assumed a most malignant type. On the Friday following, after much suffering, he breathed his last. We are, however, blessed with the assurance, from his words and actions, that he is now with the Savior, whom he loved so well. A "faith-seeker" in Sabbath school, the object of his search has given place to sight, the cross to the crown, and hope to glad fruition.

J. LANE BORDEN.

THE FOLLOWING resolutions were adopted by the third Quarterly Conference of the Centerville circuit, Louisiana Conference, June 14, 1873:

Whereas, Our gracious God has seen proper to remove from this church and conference our beloved brother, ALLEN J. DAVIS, who for many years has given us the benefit of his counsel, and cheerfully assisted us by using his means, time and influence for the welfare of our church, having long officiated as recording steward, and has been the human stay and support of our little vine in her hours of peril; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deeply lament the departure of our long-loved and highly-esteemed brother. His cheerful face no longer do we behold among us; but his influence still lingers with us as the rays of the setting sun, painting the clouds with his parting beams.

Resolved, That we humbly bow beneath the stroke of our heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, and do acknowledge that he hath done wisely in transferring this brother from the church on earth to a more glorious place in the church above, where he views the face of Christ, our risen Lord of lords.

Resolved, That we will earnestly strive to follow the same Lord of glory that he from early life followed, and finally meet him amid that innumerable throng that shall gather at the right hand of the great white throne on the resurrection morn, and there shout the praises of the King of kings.

Resolved, That we hereby tender our sincere sympathy to his wife, sister (M. A. Davis) and his children in their great affliction and bereavement, advising them to look above the cloud of sorrow to the loving Hand that reaches down through the clouds of darkness toward the suffering ones of earth, and hear him gently saying: "I will never leave nor forsake thee;" also, "I will be a husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless."

Resolved, That these resolutions be engrossed in our minutes, and a copy thereof be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

REV. FIELD WHITE, P. E.; J. F. BAKER,

REV. D. L. MITCHEL, L. P.; J. R. ADAMS,
J. M. ADAMS, R. S.; R. M. BRADLEY,
WM. WHATLEY, Stewards.

The subject of the above resolutions was born in this parish and State, where he resided until the twenty-third of April, 1873, when he was called to inhabit a mansion prepared in heaven by his Savior. He entered the Methodist Episcopal Church South before attaining the years of manhood, having had the advantages of pious parents, his father being the Rev. Moses Davis, who for many years prior to his death was a member of this Conference.

Allen J. Davis was well known and highly esteemed by all our citizens, among whom he had grown up. At our late election he received the largest majority of votes polled for many years for a legislator, and in obedience to the request of his friends he went to New Orleans, in December last, to attend the Legislature, although in feeble health. He returned to his home stricken down, and after patiently enduring great physical pain for nearly four months, during which scarcely a murmur escaped his lips, he passed quietly away to his resting-place above. The writer, in speaking to him in regard to the foundation of his hope of entering heaven, heard him reply: "I have no fear nor doubt on that subject, for I trust in Jesus. He is my only hope. All I am anxious about is the condition of my family. Please talk to my children." I feel satisfied he is now happy and at rest. May his sorrowing family be consoled by this thought, and stimulated by his peaceful death to "press with vigor on" and win the heavenly prize, walking worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called, placing their trust in God, who remembereth that we are dust. WE MAY say what we please of the difficulty of repenting, but it would seem to be a thousand-fold more difficult to refrain from repenting.—Edward Payson.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1873.

THE REAPER'S MORNING HYMN.

Unclouded shines the autumn morn,
The lark is singing far on high,
Among the fields of yellow corn
The wind is blowing gently by;
And with a thankful voice we raise
To thee, O God, our hymn of praise!

The sower cast the seed around,
Then followed sunshine, wind and rain,
And from the cultivated ground
Sprung up the graceful, golden grain.
The harvest came, O God, from thee,
And thine the praise shall ever be!

We thank thee for the winter's snow,
We thank thee for the spring-time's showers,
For autumn's winds, that gently blow,
For summer's bright and sunny hours.
Sun, shower and wind were sent by thee,
And thine the praise shall ever be!

The sun has dried the drops of dew,
And gladly to our toil we bend,
With sickles keen and purpose true,
To reap the grain that thou didst send.
What were our labor without thee?
So thine the praise shall ever be!

Soon shall the autumn's withered leaves
Be scattered over field and plain,
Soon shall we bear the harvest sheaves
With gladness home along the lane;
But still our hymn of praise shall be,
Lord of the harvest-time, to thee.

Sing high in heaven, O happy lark!
Shine down, O sun, with ripening beam!
Blow, gentle wind, o'er field and park!
Flow brightly by, O rippling stream!
While with a thankful voice we praise
Our Maker's wondrous works and ways.

The Wesleyan Ministry.

After the relation of their religious experiences by the young ministers, previous to their ordination, at the late session of the Wesleyan Conference, Rev. Mr. Arthur and Rev. Dr. Punshon were called upon to make addresses. The counsels of the latter eloquent minister are so tender and wholesome that we publish them entire, as reported in the Watchman:

Dr. Punshon said that he was very forcibly reminded that twenty-four years ago he stood in a similar position to that of his young brethren—when he girded on the armor which he had very slightly proved, and entered on the great conflict which with very much of unfaithfulness had occupied him ever since. He had derived great encouragement as he had listened to-night how God had not permitted them to be deprived of that bright succession of those who, like themselves, first entered the wicket-gate, and had then gone on to the Interpreter's house—the next stage of their pilgrimage—and then gone on with their burden till they came to the place where stood a cross, and hard by a sepulcher; and as they looked and kept wondering the burden fell from their shoulders, and they went on their way rejoicing, not only in a sense of deliverance, but of power.

For the last five years he had had the privilege of attending similar services three thousand miles away, and without exception he had heard the ring of the same bell—the same glorious gospel melody had come from the hearts of candidates in Canada as he had heard to-night. Methodism and living Christianity—he hoped those were synonyms—were the same in this respect all over the world. Although there were diversities of operations, and differences of administrations, and diversities of gifts—yet there was one Spirit working in them all, to make them partakers of one high hope of their calling.

Two things had struck him in the experiences of to-night. One was a statement made by one of the brethren, how God had honored his own word. He remembered nothing of the sermon—not a solitary division, nor even an illustration. He knew not the texture of the sermon, but the text—the word of God—had made a deep impression. He was reminded of an instance of a similar kind, where God honored his word in the conversion of a local preacher in his first circuit. It was in the wilds of Cumberland, and he heard it from the man's own lips. He lived on the shores of one of those charming lakes. The only teacher he had was an heirloom—his family Bible; and in the shadow of the brown woods, while he was pursuing his daily occupation, the Holy Spirit took the word and fastened it on his heart. He wrestled for pardon and obtained it before he knew there was another man on the face of the earth that enjoyed it, and he became happy in the love of God. Already when Methodism was introduced he had a correct creed and the germs of a systematic theology which only needed to be classified to make a clear exposition of "the truth as it is in Jesus." The more they honored the word and accepted it as the instrumentality of gospel teaching, the more they were in harmony with God's mind and purposes, and the more they were likely to have mature, well-rounded Christians, thoroughly furnished to every good work.

Another thought that occurred to him was the absence of terrifying convictions. They seemed to have been won, rather than frightened. They seemed to have been brought into the divine favor by the influence of the love of the Lord Jesus Christ. A remarkable illustration of this particular method of working occurred to him at this moment. It was in the experience of three men—notably of one of them—the three Japanese embassadors who had been recently sent over to the United States to obtain instruction in commercial matters. While there they were brought to a saving acquaintance with the "truth as it is in Jesus." At the time he spoke of, they had been consciously happy in the love of the Savior, and had been put under instruction that they might be more thoroughly acquainted with Christianity. The minister was taking them through the Apostles' Creed, and was making them understand how the truth had been perpetuated from generation to generation. All went well till he came to the words: "He shall come to judge the quick and the dead." "What is that?" they exclaimed, in a startled manner. The minister thought they stumbled at the word "quick," and he explained that it was an obsolete word. "O," they said, "not that." It was the first entrance into the pagan mind of the idea of judgment. It was the first effect of the thought of the coming again of the Savior to judge the world.

One of them stood as if stunned into catalepsy; another paced up and down in indescribable agony; the third bent down with his elbows on the table. The silence was painful and crushing. The minister let it alone to see what would come of it. After [illegible] the man leaning on the table raised his head and said: "O how alarmed I should have been if I had known that before I loved him." (Hear.) Was there anything finer than that in the whole history of the Spirit's work? The love of Christ had come into his heart first, so as to take away all terror of judgment, and a startling thought like this coming suddenly on the spirit lost all power to terrify it. It showed that the most effective method of preaching was not to thunder the anathemas of vengeance. To make the declaration of unlimited love—love in its disinterestedness—love in its royalty, divested of that selfishness which attaches itself to all earthly relationships—love incarnating itself that it may breathe more freely—love shedding its own blood—that was the master spell which, like the rod of the prophet, would swallow up the enchantments of all opposing forces.

Law's terrors do but harden
Wherever they work alone;
But a sense of blood-bought pardon
Will melt the heart of stone.

In the president's opening remarks we had condensed the great need of the ministry of the present time in these few words: "God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." Power, but not brute power, not unintelligent power, but power that could give a reason of the hope that was in it. O if he could only get that power for himself and his brethren, they would have a large, beautiful, harmonious combination of qualifications. They would have a mighty ministry—not stentorian lungs, but quiet power, that wins its way into the hearts of men whether they will or no, because the Spirit shows the way—that marvelous thing for which they had no better word than "unction"—a word that had been on the lips of many a hypocrite, but a grand word notwithstanding—unction poured out from a man when it came from his lips, making itself felt as holy oil coming on the waves of human passion. Mr. Arthur prayed for the gift of the Holy Spirit. Why might they not have it? It was God's gift which he was waiting to bestow in answer to prayer. Let them keep close to the foot of the cross till they were endued with power from on high. He did not know how it might come; it might come in the thunder—it did sometimes; it might come in the still small voice, and lift up the spirit so that they would not know whether they were in the body or out of the body; it might smite the spirit down into "the speechless awe that dares not move." He knew it would come if asked for with sincere heart and unfeigned lips; and their hearts would know it when it came. They would be able to say: "Thou hast made me full of joy with thy countenance;" "Then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee." Amen.

The Conversion of a Mute.

BY REV. JAMES L. CLARK.

Although the age of miracles has ceased, and wonders of healing are seldom wrought on the bodies of mankind, yet we sometimes witness miracles of grace so astonishing as to extort even from the lips of infidelity the honest confession: "This is the finger of God." One of these wonderful displays of grace which passed under my own notice was the conversion of a mute, at a time and under circumstances which were calculated to silence skepticism and glorify God.

In a settlement about three miles from P., a small town in Western Virginia, among others there was a family of four or five young men and boys, from sixteen up to about twenty-five years of age, who were studying the works of Paine and other infidel writers. They were young men of more than ordinary reading and intelligence for that community, and were exerting a pernicious influence over the minds of the young people in the neighborhood, joined with amiability, and, in other respects, irreproachable moral character, there was a perseverance about them in spreading their opinions which was worthy of a better cause. The leaven of infidelity had its influence through the neighborhood till the pious and God-fearing portion of the community became seriously alarmed. In their anxiety they fled to God for help, and in the fervency of their souls entreated him to stay this tide of destruction, and save their children from being swallowed up in this whirlpool of Satan. Nor was prayer the only means they used. Efforts were made; a meeting was appointed for united and public effort. A crisis had come. It was now to be determined whether Christianity should bless or infidelity curse their families.

The time for holding the meeting arrived. The children of God were there, and the followers of Paine were there also. Both parties seemed to feel that on the result of that meeting depended the success of their cause. Fervent were the prayers of God's people; vigorous were the efforts made by them to sustain the cause of their Savior. And as zealous and as persevering were the infidel party to oppose and blast the work of grace. But strong was the hand of God, and valiant was his right hand, and it triumphed gloriously. At first but little seemed accomplished beyond an increasing seriousness among the people. After awhile a few approached the altar, with streaming eyes, and hearts and lips of prayer, pleading for pardon through the merits of Jesus. Faith prevailed. The witness of the Spirit was given. And while some gave vent to their feelings of joy in shouts of praise, others, with glory beaming from their countenances, went and told their friends what God had done for their souls. This, according to infidelity, was fanaticism, enthusiasm, animal excitement, or something worse; the preachers gave them their lessons and told them what to do; they learned them to shout, and it was all hypocrisy. Thus as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, and Barjesus opposed Paul, so these men endeavored to oppose the truth and power of God. But the hour of their overthrow was at hand; a change was yet to come.

In this same neighborhood there resided a deaf and dumb young lady named Margaret B——n, who was regular in her attendance on the services of the meeting. At the Institute at Staunton she had been taught to read and write. From reading her Bible she had obtained some knowledge of her condition as a sinner and some knowledge of the plan by faith in Jesus Christ. During the progress of the meeting her mind became deeply exercised upon the subject of her personal salvation. Although the exercises of the meeting were to some extent a blank to her, and though the gospel's joyful sound and the voice of prayer and praise could not fall upon her ear, the power of God did reach her heart. And although her lips were sealed in silence, and could pour forth no confession of guilt, and in human language could not implore pardon, yet from the depths of her sin-sick soul, through her streaming eyes, flowed tears of penitence that fell in mercy's sight. At the mercy-seat, with groanings that could not be uttered, she presented the sacrifice of a broken and a contrite heart, which God did not despise. In that hour we felt the insufficiency of man. We could sympathize with her, but could not point her to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world. We could pray for her, but could not pour into her mind the precious promises of eternal truth. Hers was a solitary struggle—a struggle at which infidelity looked with surprise, if not with alarm.

In the hour of extremity there was One who could not only sympathize with her, but who could relieve. That one was the Friend of sinners. He came to her rescue, and the hour of her release had arrived. One evening during the exercises at the altar a strange sound fell upon my ear. Turning round to see from whence it came, I saw Margaret upon her feet. The gloom that had overspread her countenance was gone. Every feature was lighted with an unearthly radiance, and seemed to beam forth with the effulgence of heaven. When I approached her she placed her hand upon her heart, and then, looking upward, pointed toward heaven, and clapped her hands in an ecstasy of joy, while in her efforts to speak her lips gave utterance to those strange sounds which had arrested my attention. If the tongue of the dumb did not then sing, the glad heart did dance for joy.

At this point of time I observed that our infidel friends were all in commotion. They had caught a sight of the converted mute, and, with feelings of the most intense curiosity, were pressing forward to get a nearer view. We promptly opened the way for them, so that they might get near her, and satisfy their curiosity. Foremost in the group stood Andrew H., in whose mind, if you might judge from appearance, a most intense struggle was going on. In the meantime the mute was passing among her female friends, pressing to her bosom those who were now as ready to rejoice with her while rejoicing as they had been to weep with her when weeping. While these things were passing I took my position where I could watch the influence they might exert on the minds of the infidel party. The change in Margaret, with whom they were all well acquainted, was too manifest to be denied. How should they account for it? Would infidel philosophy explain the phenomenon? or would they, like the Jews, attribute the miracles of God to satan? We shall see.

There they stood gazing as if it were the last sight of earth. You could almost hear their hearts beat, while their faces grew white and red alternately. For awhile their lips seemed as dumb as those of the converted girl. At length the leader of the party turned round to his comrades and said: "Boys, this is not animal excitement. There is no deception in this. Margaret B. is no hypocrite. The preacher could not learn her to shout. There must be a divine reality in religion. I never saw anything like this." Tears gushed from many of their eyes, and their hearts were subdued. Infidelity had received its death-blow, "not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

The next night they were found at the altar of prayer, seeking salvation, while the work of the Lord went on gloriously. During the balance of the meeting the form of the mute might be seen passing along among the seekers of religion, looking earnestly upon their features, to catch the first smile of joy that illuminates the countenance when conversion takes place. And hers was generally the first hand extended to welcome them into the family of God. The entire G. family were converted. One of them has since died a most happy and triumphant death. At our last Conference another one took me by the hand, and, after referring to the past, remarked that he was making his arrangements to withdraw from worldly business, and at the next Conference he expected to enter the ministry, and to spend his life in preaching the faith he once tried to destroy. Surely,

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

THE selection of Constance the city where Huss was burned, and the laity were deprived of half of the holy communion—for the great September convention of Old Catholics, is mentioned by Moravian journals as "the Nemesis of history."

CHRISTIAN WORK is more than furnishing food and raiment and shelter. It is also teaching men of God, of Christ, of heaven, of sin, of love, of justice, of brotherhood.

Girls and their Opportunities.

It has been our good fortune to know women of this and the last generation—women who were almost without what are now called "advantages of education," because such advantages did not then exist—who might be models for the young and [illegible] of to-day. They were women who had been taught practically, and had, besides, trained intellectual tastes. They were mistresses in their households, able, and often obliged, to do all the work of a hospitable family. They were not terrified by sickness or appalled by danger, for they had been taught to meet both with calmness and skill. But they were not irritated or demoralized by their petty cares, or the real drudgery of their work; they knew how to keep these subordinate, and their noble intellectual tastes, rather than their petty cares, gave the tone to their lives. A half hour's reading each day of Bacon or Milton or Sir Thomas Browne; a half hour's study of some science or art; a half hour's work at mathematics, has held to its highest uses many a day of many a woman's life that would otherwise have gone to waste and weakness. To be able to get out of the pressure and hurry of life, to stand aside, as it were, and see things in their true lights and true proportions, is one of the best results of education. Such reading or such study lifts a woman out of the daily routine; she stands above it, sees the end and the good of it, sees how small the obstacles are that looked like mountains to her, serenely puts them aside, and does not allow what are considered the special worries of women to ruffle her dignity or cloud her mind.

The trouble to-day is that girls confound acquisition of knowledge with education, pride themselves on a certain number of facts which they have stored in their memories, and which, for a few years, they use with showy effect. They think they know a great deal more than they do; they peep through the windows of science, see a star here and a flower there, trifle a little with acids, alkalies and crucibles, and are persuaded that they are astronomers, botanists and chemists; they undervalue all knowledge which they do not possess, and are inclined to despise all labor, save that of the student. There is no branch of learning which girls may not be taught; there is no height of learning to which girls may not aspire; but they should be taught, most of all, personal dignity, the need and the beauty of adapting themselves to the life in which they are placed; their studies should, so far as possible, have a practical application; they should understand that they cannot know much at any rate, and should learn the graces of intellectual modesty.—Boston Advertiser.

A JAPANESE BRIDGE.—A writer in the People's Magazine describes a Japanese bridge: "When we came in sight of the Fuji-kawa (river) we found we had to cross it by a suspension-bridge built entirely of bamboo. The Japanese are naturally very proud of this work; and they may well be so. It is the only one of the kind in the country, the river being too broad and swift to allow of bridges being built, except at enormous cost. At this place their ingenuity is displayed to perfection, and it is a sight well worth seeing. The surrounding scenery is very pretty, the river running down a lovely valley, the hills covered with trees on each side, of great height, rising abruptly from the banks. One feature connected with the scenery of Japan is worth mentioning, viz., that the foliage does not strike Europeans as strange or tropical; they would generally recognize all the trees, the most notable peculiarity being the bamboo growing among our well-known trees, with occasionally a palm or banana here and there; the chestnut, hazel, lime and beech are plentiful, but the wax-tree is very tropical in appearance. The bridge we had to cross was about a hundred feet above the river, and its width a single span of sixty feet. It is made by the bamboo being twisted into a sort of rope, and a single plank is laid on it to walk over upon. The bridge shakes and sways very much as any one crosses, and, there being no railing of any sort at the side, it looks more unpleasant to cross than it really is. The best method of getting over is to look straight to your front and walk quickly; to double across is perhaps better, though, of course, nothing can prevent its swaying from side to side in rather a disagreeable manner. The bridge is about four feet wide—not a bit too much for any one who may possibly lose his head, as the river rushes below over huge rocks in a very uninviting way."

THE Texas cattle drive of this season to Kansas is now nearly if not quite in. Total receipts about half a million head, of which 260,000 were received at Ellsworth, 150,000 at Washita, 75,000 at Coffeyville and Chetopa, and the remainder at other points. 60,000 have been driven to Colorado, Nebraska and Wyoming. 100,000 will be wintered in Kansas, about 150,000 be taken by packers, 20,000 have been marketed at Kansas City, and 50,000 more will be driven to the Territories, and the remainder wintered in various Western States. Receipts at Kansas City are estimated at 300,000 for the year, against 236,000 last year.

SPEAKING of the friars who are coming to this country after having been expelled from Italy, a secular paper thinks that they will find their opportunities here very poor for pursuing any such aimless, mendicant life as that they have led in Italy, and that "the people of this country generally will set a much higher value on a good frier of clams or griddle-cakes than on any friar who can merely count beads or mumble over church formulas."

TIME may be redeemed as it is passing, but never when it is gone by.

Religious Intelligence.

THE Old Catholic Congress is to be held this year at Constance, September 12, 13 and 14.

THE Lutherans of Wirtemburg complain of the scarcity of ministers. Many congregations are without pastors, and there is no hope of an immediate supply.

THE English Baptists are increasing their mission stations in Africa. Mr. Q. Thompson has been sent from Bell Town to a place called Bonjongo, on the great mountain of Cameroons.

IT IS SAID that the entire Persian mission, with forty missionaries and sixty teachers, now under the care of the Presbyterian Board, costs less annually than the current expenses of some city churches.

THE Wesleyan Church in England raised last year for missions $700,000. One of the secretaries, being asked how they were able to raise so much, answered: "By the grace of God and the penny a week."

REV. ABRAHAM JÆGER, the converted rabbi, and author of "Mind and Heart in Religion," has accepted the position of assistant professor of the Hebrew language in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

A COLONY is settling at Ridgeway, North Carolina, near the southern part of Virginia, composed largely of Methodists from England. The entire tract contains 6,000 acres. It is the intention to build 100 houses to form a town, and also divide out 140 lots of forty acres each. Rev. W. Reading, Wesleyan minister, by consent of Bath district, has consented to come from England and act as their pastor for the first twelve months at least.

MADAGASCAR.—The work still continues to advance in Madagascar, and is truly marvelous. Rev. Dr. Mullens and Rev. J. Pillans have been appointed by the London Missionary Society to visit the missionaries and native churches of Madagascar, and confer with them on many important questions suggested by the great progress of Christianity in that island. The report of the visit of these distinguished ministers will be looked for with interest.

THE Presbyterian quotes from the letter of a missionary on the advance of the work of Protestant missions in France, who states that private letters come in laden with special good news of conversions of individuals and whole families, of the institution of prayer meetings, and of revival work among the children. The same paper also reports eleven new communicants admitted by Dr. Hopper to the church at Canton, and fifteen inquirers, several of whom would be received into the church at the next communion.

AT THE last stated meeting of the American Bible Society, August 7, thirteen new auxiliaries were recognized. Communications were received from Rev. E. P. Hastings, Japan, sending account of Bible work in the Ceylon mission, with annual accounts; from Rev. I. G. Bliss, D. D., and Rev. Messrs. Bergne and Girdlestone, of the British and Foreign Bible Society, showing satisfactory progress in revising the Turkish version in Constantinople, and from others. A memorial paper in reference to the decease of Rev. Dr. Isaac Ferris was adopted.

THE Cumberland Presbyterians differ from the Calvinists, on the one hand, and the Arminians, on the other. The peculiarities of their faith are thus stated by the Cumberland Presbyterian: "1. No part of the human race is unconditionally elected to eternal life or foreordained to eternal death. 2. The death and atonement of Jesus Christ are for all men, in the same sense. 3. The certain final perseverance of all true believers in Christ. 1. Sinless perfection is not attainable in this present life. The first two points are in direct conflict with the essential doctrines of Calvinism, and the last two are as directly opposed to Arminianism."

HUNGARY is the most Protestant of Roman Catholic countries. Of the 13,000,000 of inhabitants that Hungary proper, and Transylvania at present count, we have not less than 3,200,000 adherents to our religion, or the fourth part of the population; and this numerical importance is still further surpassed by the great role which the Reformed and Lutherans have played in literature and in the different political parties. The census of 1870 gives 1,113,508 members of the Lutheran communion, 2,031,213 of the Reformed, 54,822 Unitarians, etc. There are scarcely any Protestants in the annexed provinces, Croatia, etc.

THE Southern Presbyterian Church has recently established the "Campinas Institute," in connection with their work in Southern Brazil. An old house has been fitted up for the temporary use of the school, and materials for a permanent building obtained, to be completed in a few months. A school heretofore taught by Mr. Morton and Miss Henderson forms the nucleus of the institute, which is to be under the supervision of Mr. Morton. The number of pupils is about thirty, and it is expected the number will be doubled as soon as the necessary accommodations are secured. These children are from the most respectable families in the place, and their parents offer no objection to their being thoroughly instructed in the principles of evangelical religion.

THE Dusseldorf correspondent of the Guardian says: "The Old Catholic movement is slowly rooting itself. We have to record two successes this week. In Essen, a stronghold of Roman influence, a congregation is established and a priest found. Divine service is to be begun forthwith. In the Protestant Church of St. Paul, and Herr Hoffman (another new name) is elected pfarrer for five years. Then in Breslau service is also begun in the church of St. Bernard, granted by the town council. Notwithstanding the carefully diffused declaration on the part of the clergy, that all who attended this service were ipso facto excommunicated, the church has been filled to overflowing. The third Old Catholic Congress is fixed for September 12, 13 and 14, at Constance. The order of proceeding is the same as last year at Cologne—public meetings and sessions of delegates with the invited guests."

FROM the last annual report of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church we give the following statistics: In Africa they have 26 missionaries, 15 teachers, 31 churches, with a membership of 2,065; in China, 13 missionaries, six teachers, 1,095 church-members; in Germany and Switzerland, 73 missionaries, 40 churches, 6,230 members; in Sweden and Norway, 40 missionaries, 18 churches, with a membership of 2,702; in India, 36 missionaries, 111 assistants, 289 teachers, 14 churches, with 758 members. The other fields occupied by this society are in South America, Denmark, Bulgaria, Italy and Western India. During 1872 missions were also established in Japan and Mexico. The appropriations for the foreign mission work of this church for 1873 amount to $373,825.

THE report in the Ultramontane journals that the Bishop of Deventer had refused to consecrate Dr. Reinkens as the Old Catholic bishop is officially contradicted in the latest English papers. The consecration has before this time taken place at Deventer. It was resolved, the other day, at an Old Catholic meeting held in Bern, to provide a second Old Catholic bishop for Switzerland. The details of his election will probably be arranged at the third Old Catholic Congress, which meets at Constance, September 12. Six of the Prussian bishops have formally refused to permit the government inspection of their seminaries provided for in the ecclesiastical bills; and these seminaries have therefore been deprived of the government grant and their students declared ineligible for benefices in Prussia. Two new churches, with overflowing congregations, have been opened by the Old Catholics at Essen and Breslau.

IN THE Hungarian House of Deputies, the other day, the minister of worship was asked whether a bishop in Upper Hungary had not promulgated the Vatican dogma, contrary to law. The minister confessed that the thing had been done, but declared that there was no law under which the bishop could be punished. The great Hungarian orator and statesman, Deak, admitted that this was true, and proposed that a commission should be appointed to regulate the relations of Church and State. Deak took this occasion to unfold at some length his own views on the question at issue. He advocated the enactment of laws to guarantee the free exercise and civil equality of all religions, obligatory civil marriage, the autonomy of Catholics, and the readjustment of the jus placiti in accordance with the modern system of free speech and a free press. His theories agree much more nearly with those of Cavour than with those of Bismarck. Like Cavour, he triumphantly referred to the successful experiment in America of "a free church in a free State," and believed that the principle was the only sound one upon which the relations of the two could be peaceably maintained. What is more, he made the deputies believe it; and the commission was voted on the express condition that it should conduct its proceedings on the principles announced by Deak. The New Freie Presse, of Vienna, rejoices that the government has accepted his scheme, in the hope that it may be extended to Austria. The hope is by no means unfounded. It almost takes our breath away to find Austria, which only a little while ago was the synonym of all that is reactionary, moving right up to the front among the most liberal powers on the continent.

THE Presbyterian Board (American) has taken under its care the mission in Chili, which has hitherto been dependent upon the American and Foreign Christian Union for support. Four clergymen, one of them a Chilian minister, are connected with this mission, besides Rev. David Trumbull, D. D., its founder, who, though still intimately connected with the mission work, is himself pastor of the English and American church in Valparaiso. There is no other Protestant mission on the Pacific coast of South America. At Santiago, Valparaiso, Talca and Copiapo the average Sunday congregation is about 60 persons; while at the first three places mentioned there are organized churches, consisting in all of 52 members. The other Presbyterian missions in South America are in the United States of Colombia, in the north, and in Brazil, in the center. The Southern Presbyterians also have missions in both these countries. According to the census of 1870, taken by the Brazilian government, the proportion of children in schools to the free population in the various provinces of Brazil ranges from one to 46 in Ceara, to one to 208 in Goyaz. In this calculation Mr. Schneider calls the attention of the readers of the Foreign Missionary to the fact that the slaves, of whom there are surely more than 1,000,000 in Brazil, are not taken into account. Nearly as great neglect of education exists in the United States of Colombia and Chili as in Brazil. At Bogota the church numbers over 20 members. The statistical table gives eight stations in Brazil, which number in all 396 church-members. A new church has recently been organized at Caldas. Mr. DeGamon but a few weeks since, at another point, admitted 27 to the church communion, besides organizing a church at Rio Claro. The opposition of the Roman Catholic bishops to Free Masonry is causing great excitement in Brazil. Mr. Schneider writes: "What the result may be I do not know. I may be oversanguine, but I should not be surprised if these outbreaks of Ultramontanism and the high-handed proceedings in which some of the bishops have lately been indulging in excommunicating the Free Masons en masse, sometimes even refusing to let some be married unless they abjure Masonry, and others to be buried in the cemeteries, would soon result in their utter discomfiture and in a separation of Church and State."—Independent.

The Retiring Pastor.

The season of changes has come, the Conferences are being held, and many are retiring from pastorates of longer or shorter duration to enter upon new fields. It usually takes more grace and prudence to leave a work than to enter upon it. There is a temptation, we hope not often yielded to, to leave certain disagreeable duties to be performed by the new preacher. Are there church debts or disorderly members? Let the retiring pastor attend to these before he goes, that his successor may not be embarrassed by them. The reception of the new preacher may be made pleasant and comfortable, or otherwise, by the course of the retiring pastor. He can do something toward securing him a home and immediate provisions for his family, and open his way to the confidence and hearty co-operation of the people. And, on the other hand, he can in many ways, by selfish negligence, by sinister words, and even looks, or by reflections upon the appointing power, do much to hinder, if not destroy, the usefulness of his successor.

The records should be left in a clear and intelligible condition, the boards of trustees filled, and the titles to church property secured. The incoming man may be a stranger to the people and the work, and is placed at a great disadvantage in many respects on this account. Everything possible should be done to prepare for him, and to make his path smooth and without needless embarrassments.

A contributor to the Northern Christian Advocate, writing on the duty of a retiring pastor, among other suggestive things makes the following points:

1. That of carefully inculcating upon the minds of his people that now unquestioned fact that the changes incident to the itinerancy give greatly increased power and efficiency to the church. The question of change is not one of pleasure, but of use, and to make it any other is disloyalty to Christ. The often painful separation of pastor and people is but a part of that sweet sacrifice we make for the church the dear Redeemer bought with his own precious blood. This fact living in the minds of the people will make the very pain of parting minister to that lofty spirit of self-sacrifice which likens the church to Christ, and gives it greatly increased power of good.

2. That of teaching the people that these changes, though sometimes apparently unfortunate, are always within the range of Providence. While the human side may be faulty, so constant, so particular and so all-embracing is the providence of God that not only the wrath of men, but their faults and follies are made to praise him. Such teaching, under the divine Spirit, will lift the church above what seems merely contingent and accidental, and prove that its broad foundations are in God. Centering the thought of his people on the uses of the church and the providence of God, the retiring pastor rises to the dignity of his office, and, awakening an expectancy on the part of his people, he gives promise of success to the incoming pastor.

3. It is important that he do not allow his people to give him, as an individual, too prominent a place in their minds. This may seem a strange caution to Christian pastors, and yet it is needed, since they do sometimes unwittingly use their office to turn the thought and affection of the people upon themselves as personal friends, rather than as the representatives of the Lord Jesus. It is not that the minister must not be popular and beloved, but that the favor he so abundantly enjoys minister sacredly and constantly to the one great object of his mission. The object of the ministry is to present Christ—to lift him up before the people, and to make them one in him. It is not favor with the people, or their love for him as a minister of Christ, that embarrasses the work after him. It is allowing the affections of the people to rest in him, rather than receiving and then lifting those affections toward the great Head of the church.

The pastor rises to the dignity of his office when he merges self and the affections of the people in Christ. When thought of the pastor brings thought of Christ, and the love they have for him helps them to receive and love his successor as Christ's embassador, his ministry is golden, and his fruit will remain. But when he frequently boasts of his popularity, and the people call him, "a nice man," frequently saying, "We do not know what we shall do when he is gone," having in their hearts no honest Christian welcome for another, you may be sure he has been "petting" the people and winning them to himself. A few months and many of his admirers will have forgotten their baptismal vows. His ministry is gilded. Pray for his successor!

The Same Old Hue and Cry.

The proceedings of the Southern Historical Convention, lately held at the White Sulphur Springs, have excited the indignation of several Northern journals, and among others that of the New York Christian Advocate. Mr. Davis' speech especially is the text for a long leader, in which the South is declared to be as rebellious as ever, and far from being reconstructed. The objects of the Southern Historical Society, as stated by Mr. Davis, were "that the action of the South in the war, and the causes which brought it on, might be fairly laid before mankind." No one could object to this unless afraid that the light of truth may condemn and expose his own sins. The following account and extract from Mr. Davis' speech, we suppose, contains the offensive and treasonable words:

He spoke of the object of the Historical Society, and said that to write a true history it must be done by Southern men who knew the facts, and that all the material must be gathered for the purpose South, that the action of the South in the war, and the causes which brought it on, might be fairly laid before mankind. He spoke of "Old Jubal" Early as one who was ever faithful throughout the war and as being the proper man to carry out this great object.

He said: "We have been more cheated than conquered by the declarations of the Federal President, Congress and general government, for there never could have been a surrender had we anticipated what followed, and we could to-day have been free." He still had hopes of the South, he observed, because whatever the men might be, he never yet had seen a reconstructed woman, and, while the men of the day were mightier than the principles for which they had struggled, he had hoped the children who succeeded them would grow up to maintain and perpetuate them and all that we had lost.

Mr. Davis' remarks contained no sentiments of hostility to the Federal government, but evinced an earnest devotion to constitutional liberty, for which the South had struggled. He was listened to with deep interest and frequently applauded.

Without purposing to vindicate Mr. Davis' speech, we still think that it was not necessarily of treasonable import. It might be true that there would have been no surrender had the Southern people "anticipated what followed," at the same time that no "purposed future rebellion" is even thought of.

That Mr. Davis still has hopes of the South, and that he bases these hopes upon the character of our Southern women, does not necessarily imply traitorous designs. His hopes of the South are doubtless such as all entertain respecting its future prosperity as a part of the American Union, and as relieved from the wrongs and oppressions which her conquerors have heaped upon her. It is expedient for Radical politicians and church demagogues to keep up the idea in the North that the South still cherishes the intention of armed resistance to the government, but we doubt whether Mr. Davis, or a man, woman or child in the former Confederate States, entertains the thought. The Southern people may be permitted to hope that constitutional liberty may yet assert its sway throughout the whole country, and that the principles for which they contended may yet come to be recognized as just, without being charged with the purpose of reopening a civil war. Principles which the sword failed to establish may live and triumph by peaceable means, and we have the temerity to believe that the verdict of future generations will be favorable to the Southern cause.

Reconstruction, however, as Dr. Curry understands it, means that our political ideas and convictions shall be rigidly conformed to those of the dominant party, and that the South shall confess that she was altogether in the wrong and the North altogether in the right. This is his conception of reconstruction in both political and ecclesiastical affairs, and such a reconstruction, we believe, will never obtain. The war for the future will be a war of ideas and principles, and convictions of right and justice.

The restoration of slavery is still represented as a thing contemplated by the South. This is very effective as a political trick, and is wielded to purpose among the ignorant masses of the North and the negroes in the South; but Dr. Curry knows, or ought to know, that no sane Southern man dreams of such a thing. This is the most preposterous and the most unreasonable and the most malignantly mendacious charge which the enemies of the South, for political effect, and ecclesiastical, persist in making. There is an ominous ground-swell in Northern politics just now, which is carrying alarm into the Radical camp. Hence the attempted diversion by revamping this slanderous hue and cry about "purposed future rebellion," and the design "to restore slavery, and to reconstruct the old social order of which slavery was an essential element." The partisan objects to be subserved by these reiterated charges of "purposed rebellion" and the restoration of slavery are transparent enough. This expedient, which has kept the dominant party together so long, cannot be parted with at this time. Whenever there is threatened danger to the Republican party we are sure to hear this hypocritical howl about the volcano which "threatens to break out in devastating fires," and of the dark and bloody plots of Southern leaders.

Whatever of hatred there is between the two sections, the most bitter, implacable and inveterate is on the Northern side; nor do the Republican leaders wish it to abate, because it is the very life of their existence as a political organization. If the South, after the surrender, had been not generously, but fairly and justly treated, there would have been restored friendship and a tolerable degree of prosperity. In connection with the Republican party and its policy of perpetuated hate, the Northern Methodist Church has been pre-eminent in stirring up this sectional strife. Their policy coincides with the politicians in keeping up these misrepresentations. We quote the closing paragraphs of the article from the Advocate, as indicating the spirit and convictions which prevail to some extent, at least, among our Northern brethren. Says Dr. Curry:

But what is to be the effect of these things upon the social and industrial affairs of the South? Only the most complete infatuation could hope for the restoration of the old order of things. It may be possible to involve the country anew in war, to desolate the land, and again saturate the soil with blood; but it is not possible to restore slavery, and to reconstruct the old social order of which slavery was an essential element. This, then, is the prospect presented to the quiet and order-loving people of the South—to live in perpetual insecurity and alarm; to rest upon a volcano that perpetually threatens to break out in devastating fires; and to leave to their children a heritage of hatred against their fellow-citizens, and a hopeless warfare against their own country. Surely the instincts of self-preservation should impel the men of the South to effectually forbid this terrible condition of affairs.

The policy pursued by the government has been one of conciliation and of wonderful forbearance; but facts are more and more plainly showing that the kindness thus displayed is sadly misplaced. It is not expedient for any government to harbor its sworn enemies, and permit them to concoct treason in its bosom and under the protection of its laws. If the States can not or will not put a stop to such proceedings, surely the national government owes it to itself and to its peaceable citizens to abate the intolerable and pestilent nuisance. The people of this country remember very well who it was that so effectually tamed the wild spirits of the rebellion in New Orleans. They may not for themselves desire that the peace of the country should be put under the same protection; yet probably nothing else could so effectually reconcile them to that extreme expedient as this Southern madness. The forbearance of the government is evidently misleading these people; it is quite time that there should be an examination to see whether, indeed, that forbearance has not already ceased to be a virtue.

Letter from Dr. Tudor.

MR. EDITOR: I left New Orleans on the night of August 28, by the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern railroad, and as I have ever had occasion heretofore, in private and in public, so now also, as a citizen of New Orleans, I desire to express my humble approbation of the appointments and management of our Jackson road, as we say conventionally. The Pullman drawing-room car was a marvel of solid springs, and gentle, sleep-inviting oscillation, and I slept from early bed-time until sunrise. I awoke in the serenest frame of satisfaction, thanking God for his most gracious care, and doing honor in my thoughts to Colonel Frost and all the officers of the Jackson road for the safe and pleasant transportation which, through their skillful and liberal enterprise, I had enjoyed. The Jackson road is certainly in fine order, of rail and rolling stock, and all the appurtenances of speed and safety, and manifests itself to be under wise and able control, such as should amply command the patronage and approval of the traveling community.

I regret exceedingly that I cannot testify to the continuance of my satisfaction on the track of the Mississippi Central railroad, which begins at Jackson, going north. On the contrary, I had not traveled fifty miles on that road before I found that I had come under the reign of incompetency and imbecility. The engineer stopped, as usual, at a watering station to replenish his tender, and behold there was no water in the tank. The benighted officers of the Mississippi Central have not yet learned that water is necessary for the generation of steam. We were out of water entirely, and without it were helplessly stationary. There was no scarcity except in the tank. There was abundance all around, but none in the tank. It was evidently nobody's business to see and provide that the tank should be supplied. Of course a supply of water was obtained at that very point where stood the empty tank, or we should have been there till now. We were detained for three long hours, until at last, by pumping and bailing and adopting every expedient to get water, we were enabled to move on. A model railway, truly, is the Mississippi Central, furnishing engine and carriages and rail, but no water. Glorious Mississippi Central, requiring the engineer to find water for his engine as best he can, from pools and streams lying around loose. Such a thing—defect of water—could not occur on the Jackson road, nor on the New Orleans, Mobile and Texas, nor on the Baltimore and Ohio. Connections are to be made by anxious engagements, trusting to the knowledge and faithfulness of the railroad company, and are missed in consequence of long detention for want of water. Let the traveling public hereafter inquire, before taking passage on the Mississippi Central, what hope or supply there is of water, by whose aid they shall likely reach their destination.

We reached Milan, the terminus north of the Mississippi Central, on the day in question, three hours after the train with which we should have made connection had left. The failure to make the connection was far from being a vexation to me. I had left a sick-bed at New Orleans to take the train, and was much worried, in my physical weakness, by the everlasting motion of the cars, so that I was exceedingly in the humor of the gentle lady, one of my friends in New Orleans, who on board ship at sea inquired if the captain would not do her the favor to stop the engine and progress of the vessel for a day, and let all hands take a rest. I was sincerely glad, therefore, being in no hurry, and thankful, as though it were a providence, for the quiet and sleep of a long night, stationary in the sleeping car at Milan. Personal considerations, therefore, are far from entering into my criticism of the management of the Mississippi Central, but an empty tank at a regular watering station is a symbol, too striking to be overlooked, of empty heads in control of the system to which the tank belongs. Water, O Mississippi Central! water is required for the generation of steam.

Proceeding on my journey, on Saturday, the thirtieth ultimo, the dreariness of unfamiliar faces for two days was suddenly relieved by the appearance upon the train, at Mackenzie, of our honored missionary secretary, Dr. McFerrin, who, with myself, was on his way to Louisville. It was a grand sermon that I heard from him the next morning at the Chestnut Street church. His subject was "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ," and the unspeakable gifts of that grace to us were enumerated, described and offered, according to the warrant, promise and freeness of the glorious gospel of the blessed God.

In the afternoon I visited an institution which deserves special mention and attention, because Louisville is the only city in the country that can boast of a Masonic Widows' and Orphans' Home. Its name correctly indicates that it is an enterprise organized under the auspices of the Masonic lodges of Louisville. Spacious acres on the immediate suburbs of the city constitute the most eligible site, and a magnificent brick building, completed and occupied, is but a wing of the edifice projected and now in process of erection. The home has been open for occupation for only two years past, and already shelters nine widows and eighty-six orphans of Masons. The interior of the building is a marvel of apartments, ingeniously arranged and designated for the various purposes designed, and of appointments accurately adapted to their objects. Collections among the lodges in Kentucky on last St. John's day, the twenty-fourth of June, amounted to $20,000, which justify and enable the directors to proceed with the completion of the structure according to design. Dr. McFerrin addressed the Sunday school, and I had the pleasure of following him in a few remarks; and indeed in such an atmosphere, so exhilarating to the soul, of love and beneficence, quite on the confines of heaven, would it not be difficult to refrain from speaking? Praise of so grand and Christian an institution would simply be out of taste in this place, and ungrateful to the hearts of your readers, already full to overflowing with admiration and happiness in the blessings of such a home to the destitute bereaved and orphaned. Let me simply add, Go ye and do likewise, to my Masonic brethren in New Orleans and Louisiana.

Leaving Louisville on Monday afternoon by the Short Line railroad, I approached Cincinnati after the earnest night had set in, and as a Queen City indeed she seemed to sit enthroned on the bluffs of the Ohio, her innumerable gaslights crowning her head and spangling her robes, as with stars and jewels of gold. The crossing of the Ohio on the Short Line railroad is now accomplished over a new and marvelous railroad suspension bridge, spanning the river from Newport—a structure with which the Mississippi Central could never be trusted. The idea of such a bridge could never find its way through the hair of the Mississippi Central.

The Evangelical Alliance.

The Independent gives the following abstract of the programme of the proceedings of this body, which meets in New York city on the second of October:

The programme of the Evangelical Alliance is voluminous, and we can only give an abstract of it. It will meet at Association Hall, in this city, on the second of October, with Hon. William E. Dodge in the chair, and will continue in session until October 12. The social reunion will occur on Thursday evening. On Friday, after the organization and the reception of delegates, reports and discussions on the present state of Christendom will be heard. Among the speakers will be Dr. Krummacher, of Brandenburg, and Signor Matteo Prochet, of Genoa, Italy. Saturday the topic will be Christian Union, and among the speakers will be the Very Rev. R. Payne Smith, Dean of Canterbury; the Rev. Dr. Stoughton, of London; Prof. Hodge, of Princeton, and Bishop Simpson. Sunday there will be sermons by ministers of the gospel from Europe in all the churches opened to the alliance, and a general meeting in the evening at the Academy of Music. Monday the subject will be Christianity and its Antagonisms, in which the whole subject of modern skepticism will be handled, under various sub-divisions. Among the speakers are Prof. Stanley Leathes and the Rev. J. Baldwin Brown, of London; Prof. Von Oosterzee, of Utrecht; President Dawson, of Montreal; President McCosh, of Princeton; Prof. Park, of Andover; and Prof. Smith, of Union Theological Seminary. Tuesday the theme will be the Christian Life, and it will be discussed by the Rev. Joseph Parker, of London; the Rev. George Fisch, of Paris; President Porter, of Yale; ex-President Hopkins, of Williams; President Anderson, of Rochester; the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher; the Rev. Phillips Brooks, and others. On Wednesday Protestantism and Romanism will be treated by Prof. Dorner, of Berlin; Prof. von Tischendorf, of Leipzig; the Rev. Hyacinthe Loyson; Prof. Fisher, of New Haven; Dr. R. S. Storrs, of Brooklyn, and others. Thursday Christianity and Civil Government will be the topic, and Prof. Rainy, of Edinburg; Dr. John Hall, of this city; ex-President Woolsey; and President Campbell, of Rutgers, will be among the speakers. On Friday Christian Missions, foreign and domestic, will be discussed by Dr. Angus, of London; Count von Bernstorff, of Berlin; Hon. George H. Stuart, of Philadelphia; Bishop de Schweinitz, of Bethlehem; Dr. Bushnell, of Hartford, and others. Saturday Christianity and Social Evils will be the theme; and, among others, the Rev. W. F. Stevenson, of Dublin; Sir Harry Verney, M. P., of London; Dr. Wines and Dr. Muhlenberg, of this city, will speak. On Sunday, as on the previous Sunday, there will be sermons in the churches during the day, and a farewell meeting at the Academy of Music in the evening. It will be seen that the subjects discussed are of the highest interest, and that among the speakers, whom we have mentioned but in part, are many men of world-wide fame.

THE MEXICAN MISSION. — The Mexican mission meets with a hearty indorsement from our church papers generally, and has commended itself to the people everywhere. The Western Methodist, quoting Bishop Keener's last communication to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, says:

From the beginning we have felt the liveliest interest in our Mexican mission, to which Bishop Marvin first, and then Bishop Keenor, have given much time and attention—the latter, by a visit to the City of Mexico, succeeding in laying the foundations of a work which, by God's blessing, is destined to extend, we believe, throughout the country. We have never known a mission which to our mind presented clearer and fuller testimonials of divine guidance—we see the hand of Providence in it, and that hand points Southern Methodism to a field of labor full of promise. Gladly would we aid in increasing the interest already aroused throughout the church in behalf of the Mexican mission, and just now we have peculiar pleasure in furnishing some good news of progress.

Superintendent of the Mexican Mission.

REV. L. PARKER, D. D.—Dear Brother: Please publish that, by advice with Bishop Pierce, I have appointed the Rev. Joel T. Daves superintendent of the Mexican mission work. He will proceed to the City of Mexico so soon as the yellow fever in Havana and at Vera Cruz will permit his doing so with safety.

I also announce, at the request of Bishop Pierce, the Rev. B. F. Alexander as presiding elder of the Delhi district, in place of Bro. Daves; and the Rev. Albert M. Walles, preacher in charge of Waterproof and Concordia mission, Louisiana Conference.

Yours truly, J. C. KEENER.

OCEAN SPRINGS, September 15, 1873.

Louisville Conference.

MR. EDITOR: Please announce that the place of holding the session of the Louisville Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, convening on the first of October next, is changed to Russellville, Kentucky. Yours truly,

J. C. KEENER.

Death of an Old Preacher.

From the following note it will be seen that another veteran has gone to his reward:

YAZOO CITY, September 10, 1873.

MR. EDITOR: The Rev. John G. Deskin, a superannuated member of the Mississippi Conference, died in this county on the sixth of September. He passed away in great peace, at a very advanced age, leaving behind the legacy of a rich Christian experience and a life of faithful labor. A pure man, of ripe faith and spotless character, has been gathered to his fathers. His pastor will furnish you a more extended notice at an early day. Respectfully,

CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

THE ACCOUNTS of the yellow fever prevailing in Shreveport are very distressing, and should awaken in all a generous response to the call for aid. Praying people, besides doing and giving, will also remember that stricken community at "the throne of grace." As yet we have no complete history of the origin and progress of the epidemic. At our first information it was that it was already most virulent and epidemic. It seems to have come suddenly, and to have burst upon that devoted city with an awful and terrific surprise. Our pastor there, Bro. Wilkinson, has had the yellow fever, and his family are also fully acclimated, so that their friends need have little apprehension for their safety. We sincerely hope that the fears entertained of the spread of the pestilence throughout Texas and north Louisiana may prove unfounded. We are at a loss to account for the great mortality in Shreveport. The type of yellow fever, with which we are familiar in New Orleans, is usually mild, and the statistics show that in epidemic times not more than from three to four per cent. of those attacked die.

HEALTH OF THE CITY.—While serious and fatal types of fever are prevailing in various parts of the country, New Orleans is comparatively healthy, the weekly mortality being considerably less than in May and July. What little yellow fever there is is mostly confined to the river front of a few squares in the Fourth and Sixth districts, while the city generally was never more free from the disease. It is thought now that the disease will be kept within the limits mentioned. Physicians of large practice inform us that they have no cases of yellow fever, and that they have seen none.

A MEETING of great interest has been in progress for three weeks past at the Cadiz Street Methodist church, of this city, under the charge of the pastor, Rev. James A. Ivy. From twenty-five to thirty persons have been converted, and there are still seekers at the altar. The efficient and zealous pastor has had the assistance of his Methodist and Presbyterian brethren in the preaching, and the meeting is altogether an occasion of delightful refreshing and spiritual power.

WE SPENT last Saturday and Sunday in Baton Rouge, and found the dengue there in considerable force. The pastor of our church, Bro. A. E. Goodwyn, was just getting about from a spell of this sometimes painful but rarely dangerous disease. There has been no yellow fever in Baton Rouge this season, and we believe there will be none. The Collegiate Institute and Readville will open as advertised.

WE HAVE RECEIVED an account of the Crystal Springs camp meeting, which began on the third instant and lasted eight days, from Rev. H. J. Harris. It was too late for the present issue, but will appear next week. We are glad to learn that it was a most interesting and profitable meeting. Thirty-three were added to the church, and it is estimated that there were forty-seven conversions.

PRESIDENT ANDREWS, of Centenary College, advertises, in this issue, for a teacher to take charge of the preparatory department.

A LETTER from Bishop Keener, received too late for our present number, will appear next week.

FAMILY BIBLES.—In view of the present extraordinary and increasing demand for good family Bibles, we insert the following, from the Cincinnati Herald and Presbyter, as an item likely to interest many of our readers:

The trade in large illustrated family Bibles in this country is something enormous. It is estimated that not less than one and three-fourth millions of dollars ($1,750,000) will be paid in the United States during the year 1873 for family Bibles, ranging in price from about $3 to $25 each. Of this immense sum a very large proportion will be handled by the agents of the American Family Bible Publishing Company, whose specialty is this branch of publishing, and which, from its five offices, in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Chicago, is supplying hundreds of thousands of American homes with a most excellent and comprehensive edition of the Book of books, at moderate price.

The magnitude of the company's operations can scarcely be understood without a knowledge of its methods. These are essentially the subscription plan, except that the company furnishes sample books, etc.—technically termed "outfits"—upon unusually favorable terms, to ministers, students, disabled soldiers, and perhaps one or two other classes, and with the further exception of certain peculiar inducements to subscribers. The company has over two thousand agents in commission, principally ministers, teachers, students, and the best class of professional book agents. The three former classes, of course, devote only a small portion of their time to the work, yet their sales aggregate hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. We are pleased to record these facts; for, excepting only the preaching of the cross, there are few callings which offer greater opportunities for usefulness than the sale of good family Bibles.

OF ALL the choice condiments that belong to the well-furnished table, as chow-chow, piccalilli, etc., none is so much prized as a standard relish for soups, fish and meats as the Halford Leicestershire Table Sauce, at once the best and cheapest of them all. sel8 4t

WE SEE that Procter & Gamble's EXTRA OLIVE SOAP is becoming very popular in our city. Its quality, we know, is superior, and being nicely perfumed, we are not surprised that consumers prefer it, and that it has a large sale.

COLGATE & Co.'s new perfume for the handkerchief, "CASHMERE BOUQUET," will be appreciated by all who have enjoyed the delicate and peculiar fragrance of their toilet soap of the same name, which is so universally popular. je21 2ly

TILTON'S STEAM WASHER.—The wonderful ingenuity of man has increased ten-fold the muscular power of the world, and there is not a department of human industry that does not feel the impulses imparted by the inventive genius of the country. The direct effect is to greatly augment production by a less expenditure of human force, and he who produces such results has built a reputation and a name that will live forever. Among the men of skill and invention stands Mr. J. C. Tilton, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, who has neutralized the toil and labor of women, substituting steam in place of their arms, hands and backs in his invention of the Steam Washer. Tilton's invention is as much more valuable as life and human happiness is worth more than abstract truth. Not alone for countless women does Tilton exercise his genius, but thousands of young men has he placed in a profitable business; and now thousands more can participate in the lucrative results of his grand invention. He diffuses the benefits of his remarkable mechanism with a liberal provision, furnishing a large part of the capital with which men of vigor, force and character can embark at once and reap the fruits of a field already cultivated. The machine is so well known that agents have but little more to do than deliver them. Their sale is a fixed fact. See Tilton's advertisement in to-day's paper. sel8 1t

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

WILL CLEANSE YOUR CLOTHES WITHOUT RUBBING!

EVERY ONE SOLD IS FULLY WARRANTED.

It Saves Labor, Wear and Tear, and the Annoyance of Wash-Day.

IT WILL DO THE WASHING OF THE FAMILY

WHILE YOU ARE

EATING BREAKFAST AND DOING UP DISHES.

STEAM HAS LONG BEEN KNOWN AS THE MOST POWERFUL AGENT IN removing dirt, grease and stains from clothing, and bleaching them white. Papermakers have for many years used steam in cleansing and bleaching their rags, and they succeed in making, by the agency, the finest pickings from the gutter perfectly pure and white. Until the invention of the STEAM WASHER or WOMAN'S FRIEND, although often attempted, no method had been discovered of applying steam directly to the clothing which could be used in a portable manner for domestic purposes. The WOMAN'S FRIEND washes without labor. It will do the washing of an ordinary family in thirty minutes to an hour. The STEAM WASHER is superior to all other devices for the following reasons:

1. It does its own work, thereby saving a large portion of the time usually taken in a family.
2. It uses much less soap than is required by any other method.
3. It requires no attention whatever while the process of cleansing is going on. A lady can do her own washing while she is eating her breakfast and doing up the breakfast dishes.
4. Clothing wears double the time, washed in this Washer, that it will washed by a machine, or by hand-labor or a washboard.
5. Lace curtains and all fine fabrics are washed in a superior manner. For flannels this Washer is most desirable, as it will not full them, as a machine or hand-rubbing does. All fabrics, from the finest lace to a bed-blanket, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the rubbing-board.

It is Truly a Labor and Clothes-Saving Invention.

READ THE FOLLOWING

CIRCULAR AND TESTIMONIALS.

I respectfully ask you to read this circular carefully, and candidly consider what I now propose to you as a matter of business. Before making known to you my confidential terms, permit me to state that the matter of washing clothes is one of no small consideration. It is something which concerns every family and every individual. It is but recently since Hand-washing was in common use. Latterly, however, the inventive genius of the country has been directed to the invention and construction of various devices or machinery by which much of the labor, drudgery, loss of time and wear of material might be obviated. Ponderous as well as intricate Washing Machines have been constructed, many of which are decided improvements over the old method of washing, and these machines have been very saleable with all. People will continue to have the Washing Machines; but, let me ask you, if the STEAM WASHER can be constructed for a few dollars much less than an ordinary Washing Machine, and enable all to wash by steam, without labor, loss of time, without wearing of clothes, etc., is it not reasonable to suppose that it will supersede, in a great measure, all Washing Machines now in common use? The sale of this Washer is unparalleled, and must be so. There is nothing like it in use. It is new, and every family needs it and will have it. I wish to secure a few good men to sell rights for me, and in order to secure as many as I need immediately I offer two extra inducements. My price for territory is $9 for 5,000 inhabitants; but if you will buy a single county, and agree to sell rights for me, I will allow you to deduct sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. as your commission; consequently your county will cost you but $75, instead of $225, should it contain but 25,000 inhabitants; more or less in the same proportion.

And to those buying rights I will sell Washers at nearly cost; and to those not buying rights I will furnish Washers at $60 per dozen; and, bear in mind, I will sell to no one, except a single dozen, until he first buys the right to a county. Any thinker can make the Washer as well as it can be made here, and save the cost of transportation. Remember that by purchasing the right of a single county you shall have the privilege of selling in any county or State for me, and upon application I will forward the deed to you by express for any territory which you have sold for me; provided that the same territory is not already disposed of when I receive your order. I will make all the deeds, so there can be no confusion or mistake. The amount you have to pay is simply $4 per 1,000 inhabitants in any county or State. I shall make these very liberal offers for a short time only, after which I shall sell in my regular price—$9 per 1,000.

Many of my patrons have requested me to suggest to them the best method of selling the WOMAN'S FRIEND in order to make the most money in the shortest time practicable. In reply I would say that there are many methods which might be suggested, all of which seem to work well, but the most prominent of which I will suggest. In the first place, send for a sample and carefully test it. You will learn by a single trial how to wash with it most successfully. All you have to do now is to exhibit to others. I will suggest that you make arrangements to wash at a certain place at an appointed hour; manage to have as many present as possible. You will be astonished at the intense excitement it will produce after the water and steam have rushed through the tubes and foamed over the clothing, rushing back through the clothing to the lower bottom, to be suddenly returned again in the same manner—say for thirty minutes; you take out the clothing, rinse and wring out, and find the clothing perfectly clean. You will find all delighted with it.

You can take orders from nine in ten present, to be filled afterward, at $10 each. A single trial in this manner will satisfy you that the WOMAN'S FRIEND is a success, and will sell. Still another way, which is sure to succeed nine times in ten: After you have secured a sample, and know just what it will do, you can approach almost any one who has any inclination at all to engage in any business of this kind, and readily stipulate with him to take a Washer, or even buy a county, if it will perform all claimed for it. You will succeed ninety-nine times in a hundred in making the Washer perform to his satisfaction. You should in that case lose no time in ordering a new deed for your county, to be sent by express if C. O. D., if not convenient to advance the money. You should meantime continue to take orders, and by the time your deed would come to hand you might have a gross sold. You should likewise arrange with a responsible farmer to make the Washer. The price will vary, according to style and finish. I have known some agents to sell as high as twenty Washers in a day. After you have introduced it more or less in your county, you can take another county, and rest assured that wherever you can get a single Washer in the neighborhood it will sell many more. Consequently, after you have sold a few hundred in a county, you can sell the right of your county for much more than at the start. You can calculate what your gains will be by buying a single county; but this is not the tenth part of what you ought to make, for while you are traveling you will meet with many men who want to make money, to whom you can sell rights. There is no business you can engage in which offers such splendid inducements. Besides, it is a safe business—no loss—and pleasant, because it readers perfect satisfaction. I cannot see how I can propose better terms. Should I allow my patrons to make their own terms, I scarcely believe they could make better terms for themselves and make more money.

On the receipt of FIVE DOLLARS I will ship you a complete Washer, as a sample, together with a Certificate of Agency, with full instructions how to conduct the business; and upon the receipt of the Washer you may have time to test it, and if you find it not as represented I will refund your money. The Washer retails at $10. After I send you a sample I will hold your county a reasonable time for you to decide whether you wish to purchase or not. I will furnish blank deeds, also blanks for taking orders, and will do all I can to enable you to succeed in the business. Let me hear from you soon, or your choice of territory may be taken by some one else.

ADDRESS

J. C. TILTON, PITTSBURG, PA.

DIRECTIONS.

1. Soak the clothes over night in warm suds—in the usual manner.
2. Put in the bottom of the washer a quarter bar of good soap, or enough to make a good suds, sliced up thin; then fasten down the false bottom—see that the center valve is in proper position; put in water enough to cover the cap over the valve, say about an inch; lay the clothes down smoothly, with the soiled parts well soaped, in the washer—not rolled up, but spread out, so the water circulate freely—and carefully pack the clothes down; see that the fire is sufficiently hot to generate the steam; when the water boils it will begin to flow up the tubes on the outside, at the ends of the Washer, and through the holes into the Washer again; after a steady circulation has been going on in this manner for about thirty or forty minutes the washing will be completed. Rinse well and wring same as in usual way. Colored clothes must not be mixed with white. Use soft water for boiling always. If hard, use soda, lye, or make it soft in any other way.

If it is desired to bleach with the Washer, this may be done by adding a tablespoonful of borax of commerce to a washer full of clothing.

ST. MARY'S, Auglaize Co., Ohio.

DEAR SIR: Having used your Steam Washer for over four months, we are prepared to recommend it to the public as for the cheapest and easiest method of washing that we have ever met with. We have tested it thoroughly, washing very dirty clothing in it, and know that it will do all that you claim for it. We have never had to rub a single article on the wash-board that has been washed in the Steam Washer since we have had it; hence there is a great expense saved in the wearing of clothing. We could not do without it.

For the remainder send me the deed to Choctaw and Winton counties. Balance C. O. D. Order express agent to hold deed thirty days. I live out in the country, thirty-four miles from any express office.

S. W. ASTON.

WILTON, Ky., May 13, 1873.

J. C. TILTON, Esq.—Dear Sir: I sent you this day, per Adams' Express, money to pay for one dozen Steam Washers $84 for Washers and $36 to pay part on the deed to Boone and Gallatin counties. I expect to order largely from you, and also expect to sell many county rights. The Washers are taking well here. I did not get to do much after receiving the sample until this week, but I am pushing ahead now, and I think I will meet with good success. Hurrah for the Steam Washer! You will hear from me again shortly. J. W. CONNER.

The above are a few extracts from letters received. I can publish hundreds of letters from parties who have used the STEAM WASHER and speak in its praise. I have thus far declined doing so. I know full well how certificates are looked upon. I have sold the STEAM WASHER upon its own merits. Thousands have used it, and it has given universal satisfaction throughout the country. I ask none to rely on what I say, or the commendation of others, but let the Washer stand on its merits. I would not ask or advise any one to engage in the business of selling Washers or rights unless he has thoroughly tested its work; and to enable all to do so, I send a sample Washer upon the receipt of $5 (half the retail price) and guarantee that, if found not as represented, I will refund the money. So there is little risk to begin with. Heretofore I have made but little effort to sell the STEAM WASHER, but hereafter I shall make an effort to popularize it. I shall advertise liberally in first-class papers. I refer you to the American Agriculturist, May, 1873, and the New York Weekly Tribune. I shall continue to advertise liberally in other first-class agricultural papers, as well as the leading religious papers throughout the country. Of course my former patrons who have bought territory, as well as those who may hereafter engage in the business, will be benefited proportionately. I am convinced that the STEAM WASHER is a success, and will be used in every family. ☞ Address all orders and letters to

The Child's Corner.

THE LITTLE BROWN HOUSE.

Just over the brow of the hill,
Overlooking the valley below,
Where the feathery pines are all tipp'd
With crystals of beautiful snow,
A little brown cottage doth stand,
And some of the inmates I know.

There's Jemmy, a red-headed lad
Full of business from morning till night,
Nicely blending his work with his play,
And seeming in both to delight,
With a motive that's higher than they—
An earnest desire to do right.

There's Annie, a gay little witch,
With round rosy cheeks and black eyes,
With a voice that is sweet as a bird's,
And lips that would scorn to tell lies;
With hands always ready to help—
Is not little Annie a prize?

The gray-headed grandfather sits
In a chair by the warm glowing fire;
Half asleep in the soft light he sits,
And the children draw near to admire
The thin, snowy locks and white beard
Which mark the long years of the sire.

The dear mother's grave, pleasant face
For a moment a dull shadow wears;
But shadows are there out of place,
And the wife has forgotten her cares;
For hark! on the still evening air
Her husband's quick footstep she hears.

There is poverty, so says the world,
In the little brown house on the hill;
There are riches of value untold,
That the heart with contentment doth fill;
The wealth that is better than gold
That all men may have if they will.

The Duke's Lesson About Diligence.

There was a duke once who disguised himself, and placed a great rock in the middle of the road near his palace.

Next morning a peasant came that way with his ox-cart. "Oh, these lazy people," said he; "there is this big stone right in the middle of the road, and no one will take the trouble to put it out of the way." And so Hahns went on, scolding about the laziness of the people.

Next came a gay soldier along. His head was held so far back that he didn't notice the stone, so he stumbled over it. He began to storm at the country people around there for leaving a huge rock in the road. Then he went on.

Next came a company of merchants. When they came to the stone the road was so narrow that they had to go off in single file on the other side. One of them cried out: "Did anybody ever see the like of that big stone lying here all the morning, but no one stopping to take it away?"

It lay there for three weeks, and no one tried to remove it. Then the duke sent around word to all the people on his lands to meet near where this rock lay, as he had something to tell them.

The day came, and a great crowd gathered. Old Hahns, the farmer, was there, and so were the merchants. A horn was heard, and a splendid cavalcade came galloping up. The duke got down from his horse and began to speak to the people:

"My friends, it was I who put this stone here three weeks ago. Every passer-by has left it just where it was, and has scolded his neighbor for not taking it out of the way."

He stooped down and lifted up the stone. Directly underneath it was a round hollow, and in the hollow lay a small leathern bag. The duke held up this bag, that all might see what was written on it: "For him who lifts up the stone." He untied the bag and turned it upside down, and out upon the stone fell a beautiful gold ring and twenty large, bright gold coins.

So they all lost the prize because they had not learned the lesson or formed the habit of diligence.—Methodist.

Domestic Barbering.

You can always tell a boy whose mother cuts his hair.—Not because the edges of it look as if it had been chewed off by an absent-minded horse, but you tell it by the way he stops on the street and wriggles his shoulders. When a fond mother has to cut her boy's hair she is careful to guard against any annoyance and muss by laying a sheet on the carpet. It has never yet occurred to her to sit him over a bare floor, and put the sheet around his neck. Then she draws the frout hair over his eyes and leaves it there while she cuts that which is at the back. The hair which lies over his eyes appears to be surcharged with electric needles, and that which is silently dropping down under his shirt-band appears to be on fire. She has unconsciously continued to push his head forward until his nose presses his breast, and is too busily engaged to notice the snuffling sound that is becoming alarmingly frequent. In the meantime he is seized with an irresistible desire to blow his nose, but recollects that his handkerchief is in the other room. Then a fly lights on his nose, and does it so unexpectedly that he involuntarily dodges, and catches the points of the shears in his left ear. At this he commences to cry and wish he was a man. But his mother doesn't notice him. She merely hits him on the other ear to inspire him with confidence, and goes on with the work. When she is through she holds his jacket-collar back from his neck, and with her mouth blows the short bits of hair from the top of his head down his back. He calls her attention to this fact, but she looks for a new place on his head and hits him there, and asks him why he didn't use his handkerchief. Then he takes his awfully disfigured head to the mirror and looks at it, and, young as he is, shudders as he thinks of what the boys on the street will say.—Danbury News.

A CERTAIN clergyman in Michigan, having invested his little surplus in railroad bonds, which were afterward pronounced by the Supreme Court invalid, was rallied by some of his clerical brethren on the subject of his investment. He replied, with much fervor: "Brethren, I would that you were almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds."

PRAYER to God is a moral necessity. It is the instinct of humanity—of the creature toward the Creator. Before, reason and without it the soul, in its conscious inferiority and weakness, cries to the great Creator for help.

Farm, Garden and Household.

The Fruit Garden.

August and September are favorite months to plant out strawberries with those who desire a crop of fruit the next season. In making a strawberry-bed a warm, dry spot of ground should be chosen, with, if possible, a good loamy or clayey subsoil. A moist, wet situation is very unfavorable. It is best to subsoil at least eighteen inches deep, and if the soil is poor let it be moderately enriched with well-decayed stable manure. In setting out take care that the plants do not become dry from the time they are taken up till they are replanted, and see that they do not wither afterward. Many persons cut off the leaves if they are afraid of their wilting under hot suns, but a much better plan is to shade. Inverted four-inch flower-pots are excellent for this purpose; they may be taken off at night. The dews will so invigorate them that the shade will only be required for a few days. Sometimes in September they may need a good watering; but this should never be attempted unless a thorough saturation of the bed be given; and in a few days after the hoe and rake should be employed to loosen and level the surface, which the heavy watering will, in all probability, have caused to bake and become very crusty.

Strawberries are best grown in beds about four feet wide, for the convenience in gathering fruit and giving them the best of cultivation. About three rows in a bed, and the plants twelve inches apart in the row, will be a good arrangement.

Many kinds of fruit-trees that have arrived at a bearing age may perhaps be growing very vigorously and producing very little or no fruit. Whatever checks the wood-producing principle tends to throw the plant into a bearing state. For this purpose summer-pruning is often employed, which, by checking the most vigorous shoots, weakens the whole plant, and throws it in a fruitful condition. The same result is obtained by root-pruning, with this difference, that by the last operation the whole of the branches are proportionately checked, while by pinching only the strong-growing shoots the weak ones gain at the expense of the stronger ones. Presuming that the branches have been brought into a satisfactory condition in this respect, root-pruning may now be this month resorted to. We cannot say exactly how far from the trunk the roots may be operated on, so much depends on the age and vigor of the tree. In a luxuriant, healthy tree one-fourth may be safely dispensed with; in a four-year-old standard pear-tree, for instance, the roots will perhaps have reached four feet from the trunk on every side. A circle six feet in diameter may then be cut around the stem, extending two feet beneath the surface. It is not necessary to dig out the soil to accomplish the result; a strong post-spade, or strong spade of any kind, may be driven down vigorously, describing the circle and doing the work very effectually. Of all trees the peach is as much benefited by root-pruning as any.

The grape-vine at this season will require attention, to see that the leaves are all retained healthy till thoroughly ripened. It is not a sign of healthfulness for a vine to grow late; on the contrary, such late growth generally gets killed in the winter; but the leaves should all stay on, to insure the greatest health of the vine, until the frost comes, when they should all be so matured as to fall together. Frequent heavy syringings are among the best ways to keep off insects from outdoor grapes, and so protect the foliage from their ravages.

A little trimming is useful to most trees at this season. The blackberry and raspberry may have their tops shortened so as to leave the canes about four feet. Some do this earlier in the season, but the buds are apt to burst if done too soon. In like manner pear and apple-trees that grow well, but produce no fruit, are benefited by having say half of some of the young growth cut back. The buds then left are very likely to form flower-buds in place of growth-buds for next season. Many take out all the old shoots of raspberry and blackberry after they have done bearing, and we have in times past recommended it ourselves; but on further observation we see very little good, if not positive injury. The partial shade the old stems make seems rather beneficial than otherwise under our hot suns. Frequently the sun shining on the hot ground seems particularly favorable to fungoid development. The lower leaves then fall before the wood is ripe, when it dies in the winter, and is not hardy. Gardeners' Monthly.

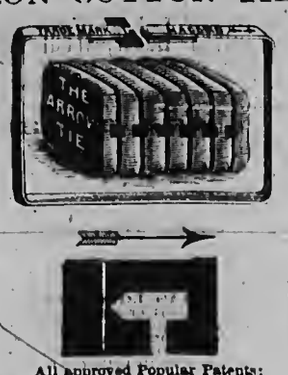
THE DUBOIS FLANGE COTTON GIN.

By the Flange the Cotton is kept in contact with the teeth on each side, until the fiber is taken from the seed, without allowing them to be taken up by the return motion of the roll, as in other Gins.



The Flange prevents hulls, stems, sticks and hard substances from being cut, consequently making a better sample out of roughly-picked cotton than other Gins.

We have sold more from this point than any agency of any other Gin for the crop of 1872-73; consequently we can furnish more and better references, and they are warranted to come up to all that is said of them.

We keep constantly on hand all sizes, from 40 to 80-SAW STANDS, left or right. Price, $5 per saw.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

EAST MISSISSIPPI
FEMALE COLLEGE.
A Chartered Literary Institution under the Auspices of the M. E. Church South,
Located at Meridian, Mississippi.
ANNOUNCEMENT.
The annual term of 1873-74 will open on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873. It will be divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. Comfortable conveniences for boarding in the college-building will be furnished and supervised by the president. The Board of Trustees claim to have made ample arrangements for the Literary, Scientific, Ornamental and Musical departments of the college, by the election of competent and experienced teachers for the various departments, and that facilities for thorough and liberal education in the East Mississippi Female College may no more than be equaled by the best of other similar institutions. Our college is recommended to public consideration with candor and with confidence of a successful career. We hope to see its interests and influence widen and deepen, under continued and steady prosperity, and it is apprehended that young ladies who now place their names upon the roll of this institution will be pleased in coming years by recognizing in their Alma Mater a living and honored success of educational enterprise.
BOARDING.
Boarders engaged for the whole term will be charged $160, $80 of which must be paid at the opening of each session.
Those engaged for one session will be charged $90, $50 of which must be paid at the beginning of the session. Those engaged for a shorter or an indefinite time will be charged $20 per month, to be paid quarterly in advance.
Extra charges will be made for washing and lights. Each boarder must furnish two sheets, one blanket and two towels. Special printed regulations will be given each boarder, giving her directions and restrictions respecting their family and social relations and practices.
In all cases of sickness, resulting in the removal of boarders from the college, advance payments will be promptly refunded. No pains will be spared to render each boarder comfortable and happy. Their treatment will be parental, and influences of strict propriety and refinement will be continually brought to bear upon all their habits.
Our college is in its incipiency. The enterprise has been recognized by the Mississippi Conference as meeting a growing demand for educational facilities in east Mississippi. In the judgment of the church and Conference, Meridian is the proper place for the institution. The location is healthy, access is easy, society is of the richest type, and almost every consideration strengthens the judgment of the board and Conference in locating the college at this place. Since this institution is under the supervision of the church there is no hesitancy in urging earnest co-operation on the part of the ministry in the surrounding country. Our appeal is earnest. We propose to place the standard of instruction high, that they who graduate here may prove themselves worthy of honors conferred, and thereby honor themselves, the college and the world. Address au14 3m J. W. ADKINSON, President.

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE.
For Young Ladies.
ABINGDON, VIRGINIA.
The next session begins SEPTEMBER 18, and continues forty weeks consecutively. Comfortable accommodations for ONE HUNDRED boarding pupils. The location is in the midst of the most charming mountain scenery. The grounds comprise eleven acres, elegantly shaded, ornamented and provided with extensive walks.
The record of the health of pupils for thirteen years past demonstrates the fact that
NO LOCALITY IS MORE HEALTHFUL.
The Faculty is composed of six gentlemen and four ladies, besides matrons, etc.
The standard of scholarship is high, and the course embraces Ancient and Modern Languages, the Sciences, Mathematics, Literature, History, Instrumental and Vocal Music, Oil Painting, Drawing and Embroidery.
Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars.
per session of forty weeks, will meet expense of board, fuel, washing, lights, servants' attendance and tuition in all branches necessary to full graduation.
PROF. F. H. SMITH, A. M., LL. D., University of Virginia, who has had daughters in the Institution as pupils for two years, says: "Martha Washington College possesses a rare combination of excellencies. From experience, as well as prepossession, I cordially and confidently recommend it to parents who are seeking the best advantages for their daughters."
We refer by authority to the Faculty of the University of Virginia, of Emory and Henry College Prof. L. C. Garland, LL. D., University of Mississippi, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and many others.
For catalogue or particulars apply to Rev. W. A. F. Cunningham, D. D., Secretary, or to

CRAB ORCHARD SPRINGS COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES.
CRAB ORCHARD SPRINGS, KENTUCKY.
Messrs. Shelby & Thorel, Proprietors.
REV. JOHN F. TARRANT, A. M., AND MRS. S. F. H. TARRANT, PRINCIPALS.
With a full Corps of Assistants.
Session Begins September 15, 1873, AND ENDS JUNE 17, 1874.
To Southern Methodist parents I would call attention to this institution. Convinced that here the Southern people would find every inducement in the way of elegance, comfort, health and economy in the education of their daughters, my wife and myself readily consented, at the solicitation of the proprietors, to assume its control. We are Southern people, and had been teaching in Alabama and Mississippi eighteen years previous to our removal to Kentucky. We have over a thousand pupils in the south. Desiring a favorable location and opportunities for doing good, we readily consented to removal. Send your daughters to Crab Orchard Springs. Our college building is the finest south of the Ohio river. Our equipments excel those of any other in the Gulf States. It is lighted with gas, will be warmed by steam, with water pipes running through the entire building, has numerous bath-rooms, and every other convenience of a modern city hotel. The building has been newly equipped—every room elegantly carpeted and furnished. Only two pupils in a room.
Full board and tuition, only $270 per scholastic year, without any extra charges.
We challenge the strictest inquiry. Send for pamphlets, containing every information. We are Methodists, and wish to obtain the patronage of our Methodist brethren. Address

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE
OF THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE,
Summerfield, Alabama.
The Thirty-second session of this institution will commence on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873. The special advantages embrace a healthy locality, pure water, good accommodations, faithful, efficient teaching, economy, ample accommodations, spacious buildings, elegant grounds, large rooms, well ventilated and thoroughly warmed. Pupils here will not be permitted to suffer for anything which will promote their health and comfort. At all times they will be the recipients of the most unremitted kindness and attention, and will be guarded with parental solicitude. It is an institution where pupils will find a safe and pleasant home, surrounded with the purest influences and a religious atmosphere.
The expenses have been reduced as low as they can be made to sustain the institution. Board, $16 per month, and tuition, $20 per year. For catalogues, giving full particulars, address

Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in Preparatory Department.....
Contingent expenses.....
A matriculation fee of $5 must be paid on entering any regular college class. One-half the charges must be paid when the student enters; the other half on the beginning of the second term, March 1.
BOARD.
Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel, can be had in the best families for $25 per month. Day-boarding with the same families, $18 per month. Rooms provided in the dormitories free of charge. Board to be paid in advance at least one month.
LOCATION.
This institution is located in the lovely village of Jackson, about twelve miles from Bayou Sara, a grove of pine, magnolia, oak and beech. The location is remarkable for its beautiful woodland, inland and delightful atmosphere, its pure water, its unrivaled healthfulness, and its cultivated and refined society.
WHEN FOUNDED.
The college was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and ceded to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1855.
ALUMNI.
Its Alumni numbers two hundred and three, and they are to be found in the most honorable and useful stations in the land.
APPARATUS AND CABINET.
The college possesses a valuable set of Philosophical, Astronomical and Chemical Apparatus, also a well-selected Mineralogical and Geological Cabinet. The apparatus includes a Theodolite, Sextant, Compass, Chronometer, Atwood's Machine, Wildring Tables, Electrical Machine, Air Pump, various combinations of the Mechanical Powers, Batteries, Chemical Tests, etc., sufficient for a thorough and extended course of observations and experiments. Steps have been taken by the Board of Trustees to put these in thorough repair.
LITERARY SOCIETIES.
There are two regular Literary Societies connected with the institution. These are of great utility to young men acquiring a liberal education—improving them in the art of public speaking, making them in some degree familiar with the proceedings of deliberative bodies, and in cultivating systematic business habits. Each Society has a convenient hall and a well-selected Library—about one thousand six hundred volumes each, which, added to the College Library of two thousand volumes, makes over five thousand volumes in the college.
BUILDINGS.
The Trustees are determined to continue the repairs on the buildings till completed. The main Center Building is a noble specimen of architectural beauty and adaptation to the purposes of its erection. The wings, built of solid brick, present each a front of two hundred feet, with upper and lower galleries the entire length, supported by Tuscan columns, and with the center making in the perspective a continuous front of seven hundred feet.
PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.
In the Preparatory Department students are fitted for regular college classes, or may obtain a thorough English or commercial education.
ITS FACULTY are men of experience and success in teaching.

CLARKSVILLE FEMALE ACADEMY,
CLARKSVILLE, TENN.
The next session of this institution will begin SEPTEMBER 1. The corps of Teachers numbers twelve, all tried and approved. The Literary, Music and Art Departments are well furnished, the course of study is full, instruction thorough, and every facility will be afforded young ladies for a finished education. The boarding arrangements are complete. For a boarding pupil, with no extra studies, the total expense is about $250. Send for circular containing rates, etc.
REV. J. M. WRIGHT,
jy3 3m President.

EMORY AND HENRY COLLEGE,
WASHINGTON COUNTY, VA.
On the Eleventh of September
our scholastic year begins, and continues Forty consecutive weeks. It is divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. The Spring session begins January 29, 1874. Students can enter at any time, though they should, if possible, begin with the session. The entire expenses for the forty weeks, including board, tuition, fuel, room-rent, washing and contingent fees, need not exceed $220. The rates, so remarkably low considering the superior advantages here offered, must commend this institution to the favor of those seeking thorough collegiate training. Before selecting your school correspond with any of those knowing the college, especially our Alumni and old students, prominent men in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and Professors of the University of Virginia, who have authorized this reference, or send directly to the President, designed for a catalogue or for any information desired.
E. E. WILEY, President,

MISCELLANEOUS.

FROM A RECENT ANALYSIS BY Prof. W. O. Atwater, of Yale College, the following table will show the chemical composition of YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Albuminoids | 12.45 | Sugar | 13.66 |
| Fat | 5.21 | Starch | 55.62 |
| Fat | 8.50 | Cellulose | 2.85 |
| Ash | 2.12 | | |

It will be seen that the Albuminoids (albumen, gluten, casein, etc.) constitute nearly thirteen per cent. These," says Youmans, "are the flesh-forming principles—the true elements of nutriment."

It is particularly valuable to all requiring a highly nutritious food at the same time easily assimilated, and hence is used as an article of daily consumption in climates which occasion rapid waste of the system. "Almost all Asiatics, Africans and (aboriginal) Americans use it as their chief nourishment."—Louis Figuier, in his work on the Vegetable World.

In Hermetically-sealed, YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN all the nutritive qualities of the grain are preserved. The grain is cut from the ear and placed in tin canisters with the rich juices (or milk) which exude from it, and is then sealed air-tight and the canister subjected to steam heat, which coagulates the albumen. In this condition it will keep for years. It will be seen by this that all the nutritive properties of the grain are preserved, and the most nourishing article of food in the domain of nature placed within the reach of all.

Thos. Broughton, with John R. Park, of Cincinnati, says: "W. C. Hamilton & Co.—I had had the Ague for two long years, and had tried several remedies of acknowledged or pretended merit without any good result. I finally tried your preparation—KRESS FEVER TONIC. One bottle completely broke up the malady, and I am now perfectly well. I can testify that your medicine does all you claim for it; and it is only due to you that this acknowledgment should be made, especially as so many worthless chill medicines are now offered."

New Orleans Markets.

From the New Orleans Price Current.

The river is 13 feet 2 inches below high-water mark.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the twelfth instant:

|---|---|
| Louisiana and Mississippi | bales |
| Lake | |
| Mobile | |
| Texas | |
| Total | |

On Saturday buyers came forward with a fair degree of spirit, but, owing to scant supplies and the stringent pretensions of factors, the sales were confined to 350 bales, at full prices, without any quotable improvement. Low middling sold at 18c., strict do. at 18¼c., and strict middling, high style, at 19¼c. On Monday, there being rather a better supply on sale, the movement exhibited more animation, and 900 bales changed hands, partly at previous rates and partly at an improvement of ⅛c., which was realized in the face of a decline at New York of ⅛c. In uplands and ⅛c. in Orleans. Ordinary to strict ordinary sold at 14c., good ordinary to strict good ordinary at 16¾c., low middling at 18¼c., and strict do. at 18⅝c. On Tuesday the market opened with a good demand, which subsequently became still more active, and there being a better supply offering the business summed up 1,450 bales, which is the largest reported this season. Under the competition among buyers, eleven of whom participated in the movement, factors were enabled to realize very full prices, in many cases a shade higher than they could have obtained on Monday. Strict good ordinary sold at 16⅞@17c., strict good ordinary to low middling, approximating the latter, at 17¼c., low middling at 17⅞, 18, 18⅛@18⅜c., strict do. at 18½c., middling at 18¾c., middling to strict middling at 18⅞c., and strict middling at 19, 19⅛@19⅛c., the last for high style.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 2,700 bales, against 1,150 for the corresponding time last week and 1,100 the week before. We quote:

|---|---|
| Ordinary | 13½ @ 15 |
| Good ordinary | 16 @ 17 |
| Low middling | 18 @ 18⅜ |
| Middling | 18¾ |
| Strict middling | 19 @ 19⅛ |

SUGAR.—The receipts are trifling, and the stock on hand is small, and the demand is only in a jobbing way. The sales were confined to retail lots, by dealers and grocers, at 9¾c. for fair, 10@10¼c. for good fair, and 10¾@10¾c. for fully fair. On Tuesday 25 hhds. Demarara sold on private terms.

MOLASSES.—There is none coming in from plantation, and no demand for the stock in the sheds. On Saturday a lot of 19 bbls. inferior, just received, sold on private terms.

CORN—Is in very light supply, and, though the demand is only moderate, prices have advanced. The sales on Saturday and Monday were confined to 750 sacks at 72c. for yellow, and 72c. for white and white mixed, and 72c. for choice white. On Tuesday 800 sacks sold at 72c. for white mixed, and 73c. for white.

OATS—Are in light supply and good demand, with very little change in prices. On Saturday 950 sacks sold at 44c., and on Monday 1,651 sacks sold at 47@48c., and a small lot of fancy white barley brought 53c. ₱ bushel.

BRAN—Has been in fair supply and limited demand, at previous prices. On Saturday and Monday only 300 sacks sold at 85c. ₱ 100 lbs. On Tuesday 350 sacks sold at 85c., a lot of 150 sacks fetching 87½c. ₱ 100 lbs.

PORK.—The market has continued dull and depressed, with a good stock on hand. There is no demand, and mess is quoted at $17.25 ₱ bbl. On Tuesday a lot of 100 bbls. mess sold on the landing at $17.25 ₱ bbl. It is retailing at $18 ₱ bbl.

BACON.—No demand on account of quarantine in our neighboring towns. Shoulders are scarce, but sides are abundant. On Tuesday shoulders were held at 9¼c., clear rib sides 10@10¼c., clear sides 10¼@10½c. ₱ lb., with retail sales at the outside figures. The principal sales were confined to 7 and 23 casks clear rib sides at 10⅝c., 10 and 10½c. clear sides at 10¾c. ₱ lb.

LARD.—Keg is in supply and dull, while there is in tight supply but not in demand. There is quoted at 8¾c. for packers' and refined, and 9c. for strictly choice refined; kegs 10⅛@10¼c. ₱ lb. On Monday 25 and 25 tierces choice refined sold at 9c., and 400 kegs kettle-rendered on private terms.

DRY SALT MEAT.—Shoulders continue scarce. They command 9¼c. ₱ lb. In round lots, 9½c. job, and are retailing at 9¾c. ₱ lb.

BREAKFAST BACON.—Choice has continued in light supply, and commands 12½@13c. ₱ lb., while sugar-cured is difficult of sale at 11@12c. ₱ lb.

MONETARY.

Gold opened on Tuesday at 111⅝@112 (against 111¼ at New York,) and closed at 111⅝@112¼ (against 112¼ at New York.) The market has ruled higher than at New York in consequence of the scarcity of cash gold.

We have not heard of a sale of silver. Notwithstanding the decline in gold, American half dollars are still quoted at 108@109. Mexican dollars are quoted at 90¾ gold for new and par for old.

Special Notices.

THERE will be a camp meeting at Siloam, on the Louisville circuit, five miles north of Louisville and eighteen miles south of Enfala, commencing on Friday before the first Sunday in October. Ministers of the gospel are especially invited. PHILIP ALLEN, P. C.

A CAMP MEETING will be held on the Pushlila circuit, Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, twelve miles west of Enterprise, near the Enterprise and Mount Rose road, beginning on Thursday night before and embracing the first Sabbath in October. It will be on the same plan as last year—self-sustaining. All within ten or fifteen miles of the camp ground must come prepared to take care of themselves. All ministers are invited to attend. There will be conveyance for ministers at Enterprise on Friday.

J. H. HOLLAND, P. C.

THERE will be a camp meeting at Choctaw camp ground, on the Rhodon Springs road, ten miles below Butler, on the Butler circuit, Demopolis district, Alabama Conference, commencing on Friday night before the fourth Sunday in September. Preachers are earnestly solicited to attend, and will be provided for. Others will please come prepared to provide for themselves. We most earnestly ask the prayers of the church for a gracious outpouring of God's Spirit.

D. J. WRIGHT, P. C.

A CAMP MEETING will commence at Salem, Greene county, Alabama, nine miles above Eutaw, on Thursday night before the second Sabbath in October. Ministers and their families are respectfully invited. It is expected that others will come with their covered wagons or cloth tents, to take care of themselves and stock.

J. W. MCANN, P. C.

MIDWAY CAMP MEETING, Floyd and Delhi circuit, Louisiana Conference, will commence on Wednesday, October 1, 1873. Arrangements have been made to establish a public restaurant for the accommodation of those who may prefer it to tenting on the ground. Meals will be furnished at fifty cents. Horses will be fed and taken care of at reasonable rates. In case families desire board they should write and make arrangements with P. W. DeFrance or James A. Leggett, Midway, previous to the commencement, so as to avoid inconveniences that otherwise might occur. All ministers of the gospel are invited, and will be cared for free of charge. Ministers should report to Joel T. Davis, presiding elder, or G. M. Liverman, preacher in charge, as soon as they arrive, who will see that they are provided with comfortable lodging. Brethren, remember in whom you trust, and that nothing good has ever been accomplished without great effort. Heaven is to be gained only by overcoming.

G.

THE New Hope and Pleasant Ridge camp meeting, for DeKalb circuit, Mississippi Conference, will begin on Friday night before the second Sunday in October next. Ministerial help is solicited from the adjoining works. Conveyance to the camp ground from Lauderdale station, Mobile and Ohio railroad, will be furnished on Friday to ministers coming by railroad.

D. G. W. ELLIS, Pastor.

CAMP MEETING.—The camp meeting on Big Creek, fifteen miles north of Alexandria, begins on Wednesday, October 1. Preachers are invited, and will be provided for. Others must come prepared to take care of themselves. Corn will be on hand at a moderate price.

F. WHITE, P. E.
J. F. WYNN.

CAMP MEETING.—Change of Time. The time of holding the camp meeting at China Grove, Dale county, Alabama, has been changed from Friday night before the second Sabbath in September to Friday night before the first Sabbath in October next. The friends of the camp meeting and ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South are cordially and earnestly invited to attend.

A. DOWLING, P. C.

THERE will be a camp meeting on the Sparta and Ringgold [illegible] and a half miles east of Sparta, on the Vernon road, commencing on Thursday before the first Sunday in October next. We expect a good many tents, and hope to entertain the people well. We invite both preachers and people to attend.

DAVID A. BOOZER, P. C.

CAMP MEETING.—A camp meeting will commence at Smith's camp ground, Gaston circuit, Alabama Conference, near De Soto ville, Choctaw county, Alabama, on Friday, the third of October next. A cordial invitation is extended to ministerial brethren.

C. B. DI BOSE, P. C.

CAMP MEETING.—There will be a camp meeting at the Line Wood camp ground, Spring Hill circuit, Meridian district, commencing on the twenty-sixth of September, 1873, which is Friday before the fourth Sunday in September. We invite all ministers who can do so to assist us. Line Wood is about twenty-two miles from Lauderdale station, Mississippi. Brethren wishing to attend will please address me at Daleville, Lauderdale county, Mississippi.

J. D. HAY, P. C.

Appointments for Quarterly Meetings.

NOTICE.—The Publishing Committee of the ADVOCATE gave it as their opinion that the insertion of the notices of Quarterly Conferences once or twice was sufficient, and, as the space of the paper is valuable, they passed a resolution recommending that they "be not inserted more than once or twice." Our friends who are interested in these appointments will take due notice thereof, as we propose to be governed by the resolution in future.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The statistician of the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Dodge, has returned from Europe, and after a careful revision of the monthly returns gives the following as the present status of the cotton crop:

The indicated increase of area is a little over ten per cent. The condition of the crop is higher than that of September of last year in Arkansas, the same in Tennessee, and lower in each of the other cotton states. Worms have been more abundant, but their ravages have been disastrous or sweeping only in a few cases. The season has been remarkable for the fall of rain, tending to a further depreciation of the crop; otherwise the conditions have been quite favorable. Fertilizers have stimulated the growth, and labor has been steadier and more reliable. The averages are as follows: Virginia 98, North Carolina 95, South Carolina 86, Georgia 90, Florida 85, Alabama 85, Mississippi 82, Louisiana 80, Texas 92, Arkansas 93, Tennessee 92, Missouri 96; in September, 1872: Virginia 97, North Carolina 101, South Carolina 95, Georgia 96, Florida 92, Alabama 88, Mississippi 90, Louisiana 86, Texas 94, Arkansas 98, Tennessee 92. Rust has appeared in some locations, and both the caterpillar and boll-worm are doing local damage in shortening the life of the plant, without much injury to the bottom and middle crops. The crop of Louisiana lacks uniformity, Carroll returning 100 and Caddo 40, Tensas 85 and Rapides 33. In some parishes the worms have been present without doing much damage, while in others the losses have been heavy. Worms have appeared in many parts of Arkansas, with little prospect of damage, except to the top crop. The average condition of the crop is much higher than in September of last year. The prospects are also good in Tennessee. Several counties in Missouri make returns of cotton which have never before made mention of that crop.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Four thousand dollars were this morning subscribed for Shreveport.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The annual convention of Spiritualists, in session here, is very inharmonious. The speeches are generally obscene and blasphemous.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Jay Cooke & Co. have announced their suspension in consequence of large advances made to sustain their Philadelphia house, and a heavy drain upon their own deposits.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—A telegram from St. Johns, Newfoundland, to the Navy Department, announces that the crew of the Polaris are at Dundee.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 18.—Nearly all the charitable associations in the United States, and many cities and individuals, are responding to the call for pecuniary aid for the destitute sufferers of this city.

The authorities of the Texas Pacific railroad will commence running relief trains within a short distance of the city, commencing Saturday next. They propose running on Tuesdays and Saturdays, as long as the epidemic continues. The trains will be laden with poultry, eggs and articles of nourishment for the sick and convalescent.

NATCHEZ, MISS., Sept. 18.—The city of Natchez has established a strict quarantine against all points.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The National Spiritualists' Convention adjourned after electing Victoria Woodhull president. The local papers refuse to print her speech on account of its indecency.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 19.—In obedience to the mayor's proclamation, to-day was observed generally as a day of fasting and prayer, religious services being held in most of the churches and business generally suspended. The cool weather of last night has increased the mortality, which numbers twenty-four, sixteen being from yellow fever.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 21.—Thirteen yellow fever deaths yesterday.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 22.—Twenty-two interments for the past twenty-four hours; of this number twelve were from yellow fever. The increased mortality is owing to the sudden changes of the weather.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 22.—The yellow fever here has not abated. The same proportion of deaths to the population in New Orleans would be one thousand per day.

The weather this morning is extremely unfavorable, chilly and damp, and the cases all look unfavorable.

The number of new cases in the heart of the city are few, because all persons susceptible of the disease have fallen victims to it.

It is spreading now in the suburbs.

The wives of ex-Judge Levisee and of Judge Looney have died with it.

Mr. R. D. Sale, of Sale & Murphy, one of the oldest, wealthiest and most valuable citizens of Shrevoport, died this morning.

Dr. J. B. Wise is dying.

Lieutenant Woodruff, of the United States engineers in charge of the raft, is improving, and, it is believed, will recover.

The destitution is heartrending. Last night there were two young children at the headquarters of the Heward Association, without father, mother or other relatives—all having died. Many similar instances can be mentioned.

The destitution of women and children, some of whose families before the epidemic were thought to be in good circumstances, will present after the storm as sad a problem as is now before us.

SALT LAKE, Sept. 22.—A strange and fatal disease, producing great consternation, is very prevalent at Kelton. Persons die in a few hours after they are attacked. The disease resembles fever.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Proceedings have been commenced to force the Union Trust Company into bankruptcy. The Bank of the Commonwealth is still closed. The run on the Fourth National Bank has ceased. There was a moderate run on the savings banks. The clearances in the Gold Exchange to-day were satisfactory. Henry Clews & Co. suspended to-day. At present they have no statement to make, save that a temporary suspension has been advisable by the firm.

The failure of Henry Clews left the streets at the close of business in a state of wild excitement, and the headway made in restoring confidence up to one o'clock to-day has been lost. Many damaging rumors are again current.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 23.—Yellow fever deaths to-day, eleven.

VICKSBURG, Sept. 23.—The Board of Health report three cases of yellow fever up to this time, and all were fatal. They do not, however, anticipate an epidemic.

FOREIGN.

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 17.—The government is engaged in the work of establishing a navy.

General Foster, military commander at Vera Cruz, has been called to the capital to receive orders from the supreme government to purchase four steamers in England for a navy.

The State of Vera Cruz is passing through a crisis, and possibly serious consequences will ensue.

The commissioners of charity have caused places of public worship to be closed. The governor is opposed to this measure, and a Catholic society has demanded his protection.

The governor has ordered the chapel to be reopened. Most of the members of the commission, also the municipal councilors, protested against the interference of the governor and resigned. The governor dissolved the whole municipal council and ordered that they be replaced by the candidates who received the next largest number of votes after those elected. Public excitement is intense.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The rescued of the Polaris party report that after separation from Tyson and his companions the Polaris was finally abandoned in a sinking condition by Captain Buddington and the remainder of the expedition. The party wintered in Lifeboat Cave, where they built a timber house which they covered with sails. The winter passed without event except the breaking out of scurvy, which, however, was unattended by severe symptoms. Plentiful supplies of walrus liver for food were obtained from the natives, and to this diet is attributed the mildness of the disease. In the spring two boats were built of pine boards taken from the cabin of the Polaris. In these the whole party embarked as soon as the ice opened and sailed southward. On the third of June they sighted Cape York, and on the twenty-second were picked up by the Ravenscraig.

Mr. Chester, first mate, is regarded as the one who did most to save the party, and the rescued men speak in the highest terms of his exertions. They also say Captain Hall enjoyed the confidence of every one, and his death, which was unexpected, was deplored by all on board.

At the session of the Old Catholic Congress, yesterday, Dr. Wolck, of Augsburg, made a bitter attack on the French, accusing them of provoking the late war and holding them responsible for all its horrors. The speech caused a painful sensation. Pere Hyacinthe and other French delegates were deeply offended and withdrew from the Congress.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—The Emperor has formally recognized the status of Bishop Reinkens as a Bishop of the Catholic Church.

NOT CONSOLIDATED.—We have been requested to publish the following communication from the president of the Supreme Council of the Friends of Temperance. We know nothing of the relations of the two organizations, "the Friends of Temperance" and "the United Friends of Temperance," and insert the letter of Mr. Abell as a matter of information.

John Crebbin, Esq., New Orleans:

DEAR SIR AND BRO.—I have to thank you for yours of the seventh, and to report that the "United Friends of Temperance" refused to consolidate with us, and therefore the two orders are distinct, and will likely remain so. We shall proceed, at as early a day as practicable, to perfect our order, as we designed to do at our last session, and deferred it only because we supposed that the liberal concessions made would secure union of the orders. Let it be made public, by direct communication with the councils of your State, that our order is working on its own merits and by our own means, and let us with renewed zeal seek to overcome the opposition of enemies, and outstrip all others in our labor of love.

Keep everything else separate from the temperance work. Life insurance is a good thing in its way, but the order must not be made to bear its burdens.

Fraternally, A. P. ABELL,
President of Supreme Council.

SAVANNAH, Ga., August 18, 1873.

From the Work.

REV. J. A. PARKER, presiding elder of the Camden district, Little Rock Conference, writing September 10, says:

We are making some headway in the bounds of Camden district, Little Rock Conference, and to date, I believe, we are rather ahead in the collection of salaries. We hope to bring up good collections at the Conference, both of souls and money, for the church.

MINDEN, LOUISIANA.—Mr. Editor: I commenced a meeting at Curry's school-house on Friday night, the twenty-second of August (assisted by Bros. Miller, Kimball, Upton and Langston,) and closed August 27. The meeting resulted in eighteen accessions to the church and twenty-two conversions. The following Friday night we commenced another meeting at Flat Lick, in the same neighborhood; assisted by Bros. John A. Miller and James W. Medlock. It closed on the following Wednesday. Result: eighteen accessions and twelve conversions.

The church has been greatly revived, prayer meetings have been established, and the family altar erected in many families. Nearly all who were converted were Sunday school scholars. Yours in Christ,

H. O. WHITE.

CROSS PLAINS, ALABAMA.—Mr. Editor: This little circuit of four appointments shows signs of improvement. We have held a protracted meeting at each point with some success. The church has been much strengthened spiritually, and a respectable number have professed and presented themselves as candidates for membership. The conversions were very clear and satisfactory. The congregations were very attentive and showed a deep interest. We had some valuable accessions to the church, who, we trust, will be useful members. The number converted we did not learn, but we guess some thirty-five or forty. Our meetings are still in progress, and we hope to see scores brought to a saving knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus before our Conference. I am happy to inform you that there is a gracious work in many parts of this pleasant country. May God carry it on until all shall know him, from the least to the greatest. Your brother in Christ,

T. MOODY.

NORTH WARREN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: On the first day of August we commenced a meeting at Oak Ridge, which lasted eight days, resulting in twelve conversions and ten accessions to the church. We were assisted there by Bros. F. M. Featherstun and A. B. Stewart, itinerants, and Bro. Alexander, of the local ranks.

From Oak Ridge we went to Beechland, where we continued nine days. There the Lord made known his power to save. There were eight accessions, several conversions and the spiritual condition of the church much improved. The Sabbath the meeting closed we had one of the most pleasant love-feasts I ever attended. Thanks to F. M. Featherstun and D. A. J. Parker for efficient aid.

Embracing the fourth Sabbath in August was the time appointed for our third quarterly meeting, which was held at Bell Hill. Our presiding elder, J. A. B. Jones, was with us. He is always punctual. The meeting continued seven days. We were assisted by Bro. J. B. Holloman, of the local ranks. There were twelve accessions and many conversions. We witnessed five conversions at a social meeting in a private family. Three or four of our most promising young men have signified their intention to join the ranks of the itinerant ministry. IRA B. ENTERPRISE, MISSISSIPPI.—Mr. Editor: We have just closed an interesting meeting of eighteen days' continuance. The interest increased from the commencement, and was the absorbing theme of saint and sinner until the close. Forty-eight joined the church, most of whom professed religion. Twenty-five of the accessions were heads of families. Twenty-seven were males, and thirty-one were over the age of twenty. Others will yet join us. We were blessed during the meeting with many gracious visits from the Master, and from time to time, as he laid his hand on this one and that, bidding them to arise and go in peace, our hearts were filled with gratitude, and we believed more and more in direct answer to prayer. After the meeting had continued for several days Bro. Hines, presiding elder of the district, suggested that we should appoint a love-feast; and a feast it was—one never to be forgotten. Members who had been at each other bitter enemies for months forgave and embraced one another. A gentleman who had been at the altar for days without obtaining relief told his wife, on the morning of the love-feast, that instead of going out to the church he would go to the woods and stay until the Lord converted him. He rode out about a mile from his home, took off his necktie, collar and coat, and fell upon his knees, and for two hours wrestled, Jacob-like, for pardon. At last the cloud bursted, light came, and joy unutterable filled his soul. His shouts of hallelujah soon attracted the attention of the neighbors at a distance, and they knew some one was praising the Lord. But he wished the news to spread. He mounted his horse and repaired to the love-feast, and hurriedly entered the church, shouting: "I've got it! I've got it! Glory to God." Mother, sister, wife and friends met him with their rejoicings. Bros. Hines, presiding elder, Gann, Hays, Armstrong, Gilmore, Hollin and A. J. Coleman (from Whistler, Alabama) were present most of the time.

KNOXVILLE CT., EAST TEXAS CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: As preacher in charge of the Knoxville circuit, East Texas Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South, I commenced a series of protracted meetings on the first Saturday and Sunday in July, which from place to place lasted until the last Sunday in August. My first was at Stovall chapel. This meeting resulted in twenty-three conversions and twenty-five additions to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, the membership being greatly refreshed from the presence of the Lord.

My next was at Pleasant Grove, commencing on Saturday before the second Sunday in July. This resulted in forty-four conversions, several reclamations, the church powerfully blessed, and forty-two accessions.

My next was a union meeting at Knoxville, with Bro. Richards, of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. This resulted in five or six conversions and eight additions to our church.

My next was at Union chapel, embracing the fourth Sunday in July. This was the place of my third quarterly meeting. My worthy presiding elder, Bro. Daniel Morse, reached us on Saturday, and at night preached us a good sermon on prayer. Penitent sinners came up with the church for prayers. All felt encouraged—we believed we should have a good meeting. On Saturday night I preached to a crowded house. God gave me liberty and power. Twenty-one mourners came to the altar for prayer. Seven were converted, six joined the church, and Christians were shouting. On Tuesday I had a double funeral to preach—one of a sister who had been in the church about ten years, and the other "a mother in Israel" indeed, who had professed religion and joined the Methodist Church at a camp meeting in Tennessee when she was sixteen years old, and had lived a consistent Christian and member of the church for fifty-six years. At the close of this service we all felt it was good to be there. Many Christians shouted the praises of God, and many mourners came to the altar, several of whom were converted and joined the church that day. On Tuesday night a thrilling scene occurred, which I wish to relate. Minnie May Ellis (a daughter of a deceased traveling Methodist preacher, Bro. John W. Ellis, whom I had known twenty-five years ago in the Alabama Conference, but who died in the East Texas Conference, and whose worthy widow lives in this neighborhood, but being afflicted had not been able to attend the meeting up to this time, and the children, having nothing to ride, had not been out before,) was with her little brother there that day, and, as before mentioned, Minnie May, a girl of twelve or thirteen summers, came to the altar for the first time, and about the time Bro. Seay's prayer ended she was powerfully converted. She rose from her knees and embraced first one and then another of her lady friends, and spoke in an intelligent manner, saying: "Just a moment before I was blessed I prayed, 'Lord, have mercy on my soul,' and he did have mercy, and that's the way every mourner must do to get religion. O I never was so happy in all my life." I found little Walter Pierce Ellis, youngest brother of Minnie May, an intelligent, fine-looking boy of about ten years of age, sitting out there weeping as if his heart would break. I went to him, and on interrogating him I found that he was not weeping for grief, but for joy. He said his soul was happy, he loved God and everybody, and wanted to go to heaven to see his pa. God had converted him at his seat. He rose up and went to the altar with me where May was; and O what a lovely sight it was to see those itinerant orphans embracing each other in the altar, happy in the love of Jesus! Christians were shouting all around, and nearly every sinner in the house gave evidence that they desired salvation. The next day the scene of the previous one was re-enacted in the altar, only more complete. John G. Ellis, an elder brother, who had been sick, came to church that day for the first time. He bowed at the altar for prayers, was soon converted, and rose up rejoicing in God, his Savior. The mother was there that day to witness the glorious sight, and to join in the happy embrace. The meeting continued with unabating interest to its close on Friday night, resulting in thirty-two conversions and thirty-six accessions to our church.

At Salem, Tronpe and Asbury chapel we had tolerably good meetings. At Troupe I had my old friend, Bro. Robert S. Finley, with me. He is a workman indeed that "needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The doctor and I organized a Methodist church in this new railroad town, consisting of fourteen members.

My meeting in London, all things considered, was successful. Twenty-five conversions and twenty-three additions to our church, and five to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. At a meeting here, just a short time before mine commenced, our Cumberland Presbyterian brethren had some twelve or fourteen conversions. This being my home, I helped them some during my rest-time. At Asbury we had seven conversions and the same number of accessions; at Salem four conversions. But one of the most powerful meetings I have ever seen in Texas was at Good Springs. I will not attempt to describe it. I will just say that in less than a week we had fifty conversions and forty-two accessions to our church. The last night I was there I baptized a class of thirty-one on their knees in the altar, by pouring. Between one and two o'clock in the morning such was the excitement—men and women in groups—in the altar, in the congregation, all over the house, and out of the house, shouting the high praises of God, that I could not control them, and hence I had to wait for a calm before I could baptize. Here I had the efficient aid of Bros. Wearn, Spence, Price, Berry, Gastou and S. K. Stovall, besides Berry Duke and other good exhorters. Thus you will see that over two hundred souls have been converted within my bounds during July and August, and one hundred and ninety-six have been added to the Methodist Episcopal Church South on the Knoxville circuit during that time. My collections, mostly by subscription, for missions, Conference and Bishops' fund reach nearly $400.

LECTURES AND SERMONS. By the Rev. W. Morley Punshon, LL. D. Boston: Estes & Lauriat.

A finely-bound volume of 377 pages, containing six lectures and four sermons. The lectures are those most widely known, and are the masterpieces of this great master of eloquence. Their titles are: Daniel in Babylon, Macaulay, John Bunyan, Wesley and his Times, Florence and the Florentines, The Huguenots. Between the lectures and the sermons we have a "Pilgrimage to two American Shrines." The sepulcher of Whitfield and Plymouth Rock are the two shrines. There are four sermons, all very good, but not equal to some other of Mr. Punshon's reported sermons. The subjects are: Kindness to the Poor, The Salvation of Israel, The Lord's Supper, The Transfiguration of Christ. Mr. Punshon is altogether beyond our criticism or praise, as much so as the Yosemite or the Alps. The work is for sale by Gresham, Camp street, New Orleans.

BROKEN LINKS AND SOUTHERN SOLDIERS. With miscellaneous sketches and poems. By Mrs. Laura A. Colbert. Nashville, Tennessee: Southern Methodist Publishing House, 1873.

This is a handsome 12mo of 269 pages. The larger part of the volume is taken up with a story in eighteen chapters, entitled "Broken Links and Southern Soldiers." Its characters, incidents and scenes are connected with the war, and on that account has an interest somewhat apart from mere literary merit. The miscellaneous pieces are in both prose and poetry, embracing stories, sketches and brief essays of a rather sad and sentimental character. The estimable author has evidently met with great trials and sorrows, and the work before us is the utterance and record of the heart-griefs and meditations of one who has passed through the school of affliction.

VICTIMS OF IGNORANCE, OR THE PERILS OF EARLY LIFE. By Geo. S. Stebbins, M. D. Springfield, Massachusetts: D. E. Fisk & Co.

The work treats altogether of the management of children, their diseases, and the means of securing their healthful growth and development. There are a number of illustrations, and the book will prove especially valuable to mothers and nurses. The volume is substantially and handsomely bound, and contains 404 octavo pages.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL publications for October are to hand early, and all of the best in their line. Dr. Haygood is a busy man, and a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. In reference to our lessons next year Dr. Haygood says:

"On the fourth Sunday of December next we conclude our three years' course on 'The Testimony of the Evangelist.' In all, one hundred and fifty-seven lessons, as 1871 had fifty-three Sundays. The editor believes that he could do better now if he had it all to do over. The preparation of these lessons has been a very great blessing to him. For this he is grateful to the Giver of all blessings. These lessons have been used, indorsed and commended by all sorts of competent judges. Our Bishops have approved them, and the Conferences—annual and district—have, in nearly every case, spoken well of them. Of course this has encouraged us.

"The lessons have been used in our largest city schools, and in the most isolated settlements of the frontier. After all, the mail-books furnish the best test. Our circulation has been steadily increasing, and very few names disappear from the books at the time of renewal.

"With such increased lights as we can get by prayer, study, observation and experience, and from suggestions, advice, approval and criticism, we propose to go on our way. From the first we intended to include the Acts of the Apostles in our course, and next year we will study this most interesting and instructive portion of the New Testament Scriptures.

"This gives us a four years' course—three years on the gospels, and one year on the Acts of the Apostles. We think that the study of the Acts will be as interesting as profitable.

"Let our superintendents now begin to settle the question of 'ways and means,' and make their renewals in full time to begin with the first lesson in January."

APPLETON'S JOURNAL is a weekly visitor that we look for with no common interest. The character of the paper is excellent, and if we make any criticism at all it would be that at times it deals too much in fiction for a journal which started out under high literary and scientific intentions. For the general reader, however, we know of no better weekly periodical.

CHURCH'S MUSICAL VISITOR, published at Cincinnati, is an excellent periodical. We have received the September number. Brainard's Musical World for September is filled with choice music and musical literature. Morton's Monthly Home and School for September has a good table of contents.

Letter from Fort Smith, Arkansas.

MR. EDITOR: In looking over your columns I see that many of your readers and friends have enjoyed richly your feast of tabernacles, that the God of Israel was with you in the plenitude of his grace and mercy, and that it was indeed "a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined." But, blessed be his holy name, while he is there to give grace and glory, he is here too, giving us joy and peace and comfort in the Holy Ghost, and filling our "mouth with good things," so that our youth is renewed like the eagle's.

He is with us in Fort Smith to-day in convicting and converting power. And oh! how beautiful to the sight are the scenes we have witnessed lately. I have thought perhaps the recording angel, as he waited in the altar to take the names of all who will have theirs recorded in the Lamb's book of life, is sketching the scenes and carrying them to heaven to hang on the walls, and that the loving Christ, as he casts his eyes on them, is seeing the fruits of the "travail of his soul," and is satisfied. Oh, the unbounded love that moved Christ to die for us! May we know more and more of its depth and height, length and breadth—rise to the height of Christian perfection, sink in the depths of humble love. I desire to add my testimony, humble though it be, of the nearness of the loving Christ to all who put their trust in him. In the hour of physical weakness and sadness, how gently and faithfully have circumstances been ordered that brought me to the very place, above all others on earth, that I might rest in mind, in heart and in body. How sweet to lay off for awhile the cares of grown woman-life, and nestle in the bosom of maternal love and care in my father's house, there, amid the genial smiles and heart-words, to have the spirit wafted back to the gladsome days of childhood's years. And as we gathered about the family altar for evening worship, and my brother's musical voice was borne on the soft evening air, in the words of Israel's sweet singer, "In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust," and my father continues the worship with one of Charles Wesley's sweet hymns: "Loving Jesus, gentle lamb," and as we "kneel before the Lord" I thank him that I was blessed with a mother and father who brought me up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." Oh, the great importance of early training! How many thousands will reap eternal life as its fruit, and how many eternal deaths because of its neglect. May parents be alive to this great responsibility. God has sheltered me under his wings, and hid me amid the soft feathers of his special providence. Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me bless his holy name.

I thank you for those soul-cheering words under the head of "Blessings and Privileges." Oh, send out the notes of Christian comfort till every true heart shall look with eyes of joy upon the promises of Christ. Praying God's richest blessings upon you in your labors of love,

I am your friend in Christ,

ANNA M. GRANADE.

ORGANIZATION OF THE DELHI DISTRICT CONFERENCE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—At the appointed hour, half-past seven o'clock P. M., Sunday, September 7, 1873, the congregation assembled in the Methodist church, Winnsboro. Religious exercises were conducted by Rev. B. F. Alexander.

Rev. J. T. Daves, presiding elder, explained the object of the meeting to be in the interest of the missionary cause, and for the purpose of organizing the Delhi District Conference Missionary Society.

The organization was effected by the following election of officers: Hon. H. P. Wells, president; Rev. J. Gorton Miller, secretary, and J. M. Diellenwierth, Esq., treasurer.

On motion all the members of the District Conference are constituted members of this society; also the annual payment of $1 by each member is required as a condition of membership, and any person may become a member by the annual payment of $1.

Revs. H. S. Trippett, J. T. Daves and C. F. Evans addressed the assembly, after which a collection was taken in behalf of the Mexican mission, which in cash and subscriptions amounted to $660.

"BE OF GOOD CHEER—BE NOT AFRAID"

When the sky is dark and low'ring,
And the tempest raging high,
Billows swelling, breakers roaring,
Christian, fear not—God is nigh.

Tossed amid the wild commotion,
Winds nor waves can thee o'erwhelm;
Thy frail bark shall stem the ocean—
Christ is sitting at the helm.

What though mighty waves are rolling,
And all human help is vain?
There is One the storm controlling—
Over all thy God doth reign.

Child of God, thou'rt not forsaken;
Thou art still thy Father's care;
Let not faith in him be shaken—
He doth hear and answer prayer.

'Tis in love that he doth chasten,
To draw closer to his breast:
Stormy winds thy voyage hasten
To thy bright, eternal rest.

Soon shall end thy tribulation,
Soon shall dawn a brighter day;
Rest in Christ's sweet consolation:
"Lo, I am with thee alway."

Yes, in safety he will guide thee
Over life's tempestuous sea;
He knows all that doth betide thee,
And will thy sure refuge be.

Even now the coast thou'rt nearing;
Soon thy feet shall touch the strand;
See the mountain-tops appearing,
Bathed in light—Immanuel's land.

Education by the State.

MR. EDITOR: The papers on "Education by the State," from the pen of Dr. McCarty, which appeared in your columns some time since, contained a very exhaustive discussion of that grave and important subject. The doctor showed conclusively that the function of government is protection. Upon this foundation of adamant he builded an argument "adversely to education by the State," which will stand intact until the foundation upon which it is erected shall be broken up and destroyed.

Beyond question no argument for education by the State can have any force until it is shown that education is within the range of the governmental function. As yet, therefore, the argument of Dr. McCarty is untouched, and it is believed to be unanswerable.

In your last issue Bro. Linfield advocates education by the State, but does not attempt to meet the arguments of Dr. McCarty. The whole argument of Bro. Linfield rests upon the covert assumption that the State can legitimately educate; that education is within the circumference of the governmental function. Remove this assumption, and the logical structure based upon it falls into ruins. This, then, is a sufficient reply to what Bro. Linfield has said. The sole business of government is protection. Education is not protection; therefore the State cannot educate. But as this may not be satisfactory to those who think with Bro. Linfield, I will consider his article a little at length.

His design, he tells us, is "to show that primary education is most properly the business of the State." Now what, precisely, is meant by primary education? Does it include algebra, rhetoric and logic, or stop with arithmetic and grammar? If it is completed with the branches last named, why? Are not the others important? But if the others are included, why not take in a little Latin? In fact, why stop with a primary education? Whatever will authorize the State to begin the education of her children will be her sufficient authority for carrying it on to completion.

Under the first division of his subject, namely, that the State should educate "on the score of benevolence," Bro. Linfield writes thus: "Whatever advantage education is to a human being, by that, the most unanswerable plea that can be made, is the State justified in taking in her own hands schools so as to secure the benefit of education to every one." This looks like reasoning. I will therefore throw it into a syllogistic form, and see if it will bear examination.

Whatever is beneficial to children should be taken in hand by the State. Education is beneficial to children; therefore education should be taken in hand by the State. Now any one can see that major premise of this syllogism enlarges the function of government to an alarming and ridiculous extent. It may be beneficial to a child to feed it with a spoon; therefore the State should so feed it.

Bro. Linfield thinks it would be superlatively selfish for bachelors and married people without children to feel it a hardship to be taxed for the education of the young. We cannot see why he should call complaints evoked by tyranny selfish in their origin. Take an illustration: A. is a very benevolent man, and one who believes in the education of the young. He begins to build a schoolhouse, but, falling short of funds, he goes out among his neighbors to raise some money. He meets B., who has no children. Quietly drawing his pistol he asks B. to draw his pocketbook. Seeing murder in his eye, B. complies. A. takes $5 and goes on his way, to collect in the same manner money enough to finish his school-house. When he hears that B. is complaining of being robbed, he thinks it superlatively selfish in him. He took only $5, and that for a benevolent purpose. If he has done evil, it was that good might come. Now if such conduct is wrong in an individual, is it right in the State? and if one would have reason to complain in the one case, why not in the other?

Bro. Linfield thinks that the State should educate "on the score of justice." Under this head he gives us the following paragraph: "It is the baldest injustice, the very effrontery of violence, to arrogate the right to make laws, as the State does, and then to evade the obligation that follows, as it does in relegating the education of the children of the State to individual enterprise and cost." In this short paragraph is contained one of the finest specimens of the non sequiter that I remember to have met. Because a State makes laws for the protection of her citizens, does it follow that she must educate her citizens? By no means. It is the sole business of the State to make and execute such laws as will secure the protection of its subjects, and therefore it cannot be its business to educate its subjects.

Hear him again: The State "establishes for each child, as his indefeasible right, the greatest possible outcome of his being." This is very nearly correct, but it is the poles asunder from the doctrine that the State is bound to furnish the means necessary for such an outcome. But Bro. Linfield thinks the State ought to furnish the means. Hear him again: "According to its own assumption, the State is bound, in simple justice to each child, to see that he has the means to make a good outcome, and that the State charge itself with the cost of his education." Now who will tell us what means are necessary to a child in order to his making "a good outcome?" Bro. Linfield thinks that a primary education is sufficient. But he tells us that "in many cases the parent cannot spare the time of the child"—that is, as I understand him, the parent cannot spare the time of the child so long as is necessary for him to secure a primary education. In that case, of course, the State must supply him with money enough to buy his time from his parents. Otherwise he will not be able to make a good "outcome of his being." Moreover, there are doubtless many parents who can, but will not send their children to school. In such cases the State must compel parents to send their children to school; otherwise the children will not be furnished with the means necessary to "a good outcome."

If the State agrees with Bro. Linfield in the opinion that a primary education is all that is necessary to furnish her children in order to "a good outcome of their being," she will in all probability conclude that she alone is fully adequate to the task of imparting the necessary instruction. Of course, therefore, she will pass laws compelling attendance upon her primary schools. If upon these, why not upon her colleges and universities? Then what becomes of your high schools and your denominational schools, and what will become of the Vanderbilt University.

But if a primary education is all that is necessary in order to a good outcome on the part of children, why should the State endow colleges and universities? Is it in order that some children may be furnished the means necessary, as my little boy would say, to make the "goodest" outcome of their being? But I will not now multiply questions. When these are answered I may ask a few more.

What surprises me most of all is that Bro. Linfield insists that the education of the young can be more "economically provided for by the State than by individuals, communities or churches." Educators will generally demand the same salary for their service, whether they serve the State, a community or a church. So far the outlay of money is equal. In addition to this the State must pay its tax-collectors and assessors, its State and county superintendents, its boards of directors, etc.; and, besides all this, take the risk of loss from leakage, which is perhaps considerable in these days when the liquid silver is so often shipped in leaky vessels. How, with these facts before him, it could enter into the mind of any one that education can be "most economically provided by the State" I am unable to conjecture.

I will close this article with two or three extracts from one of England's profoundest thinkers. It will be seen that he does not agree with Bro. Linfield as to the economy of governmental work. What is said of officialism in England will apply, mutatis mutandis, to officialism here.

"A further characteristic of officialism is its extravagance. In its chief departments, army, navy and church (of England,) it employs far more officers than are needful, and pays some of the useless ones exorbitantly."

"Traders and mercantile bodies succeed by serving society cheaply. Such of them as cannot do this are continually supplanted by those who can. They cannot saddle the nation with the results of their extravagance, and so are prevented from being extravagant."

"Walk through a manufactory, and you see that the stern alternatives, carelessness or ruin, dictate the saving of every penny; visit one of the national dock-yards, and the comments you make on any glaring wastefulness are carelessly met by the slang phrase: 'Nunky pays.'"

Step by Step.

BY JULIA V. PHIFER.

Deep down under ocean's stormy blue, low in its quiet depths, where comes no hint of the mountain waves, the battling thunder, the lurid lightning, that strike awe and fear into the breast of the toiler on the deep—far down, unseen, is a mighty power at work. The coral polyp rises from the rocky floor of the deep, calm sea—a tiny insect that blind ignorance would despise, yet a powerful agency in the hands of the mighty Architect of the universe. Slowly the wondrous something rises, stretching out beautiful branches through the amber waters, unknown, unthought of by the mariner whose white-winged vessel speeds above, a messenger of peace from nation to nation. But time flies on with never-resting wings; and lo! at last a wonder. An island rises from the midst of the sea, as if Titanic armies were yet heaping up mountains high enough to reach the throne of Jove. The grand old sea whispers soft, unutterable things about its coral walls, or dashes foaming waves across its long white stretches of pearly sand; but the structure, whose foundation is the ocean's everlasting floor, stands steadfast and serene amid the gentle lapsing of gliding waves and the loud moaning of the storm. Seeds are wafted on the wings of the wind from other lands, and the sea-born wonder is clad with verdure, while stately ships visit its shores on the way from land to land. Curling smoke from human habitations ascends above its leafy groves, and thus at last the beautiful isle is perfected and glorified with love and home.

Gentle winds whisper everlasting harmonies around its verdant shores, and sunset beautifies with all its gold and amber the fairy isle that rose, step by step, from the rock-ribbed base of the eternal sea.

So rose, in some far period of time—so far, so dim, that men have forgotten it—a sphinx that could look with stony eyes deep into the dark recesses of the irreclaimable past, and tell us of the gliding shadows, the crowding phantoms that have slipped forever from the grasp of time. So Petrea was hewn from rock by a race of men that have long since crumbled into dust. So rose the pyramids that have towered over the sands of Egypt while empires have arisen and fallen, kings been crowned and discrowned, thrones have tottered and sceptres been broken, and generation after generation has passed away. Not as Minerva sprang forth, full-armed, from the cloven head of Jupiter, did these grand structures rise; but slowly, surely, step by step, they came forth from the chaos of nothingness, and stand grandly fronting the mighty onward sweep of the centuries.

On oriental plains the ancient shepherds watched their flocks by night, lifting wondering eyes to the mighty infinitude of stars that wheeled and circled in endless march above them. Perhaps the grand strains of the stars' immortal song were as an unknown tongue to them; or perhaps a few notes floated down faint and far, teaching them, in the mysterious language of nature, the belief in a fair ideal, far beyond the walls of the real. Who can tell what mystic songs the cloudy mouth of old Orion sung to them, while it "muttered rhythms of silence up the sky," or whether his starry sword divided the vail that hides that fairer world from our gaze, as it swept across the mighty dome of night. Perhaps they heard, in the solemn, vocal silence, the songs of heaven, not very far away in their exalted vision, and caught in echoes resounding from the celestial heights the "silver-solemn clash of cymbal wings."

They have left no record of their dreams and visions. We only know that they gave names to the largest stars that wheeled through the mighty infinitude of space—that over them they saw the starry hunter watching, night after night, and the Pleiades gathered into an immortal band, forever shining down from the blue of heaven. But from the foundation thus laid upon oriental fields the grandest of sciences, astronomy, has sprung. As we look back along the ages, and see the great names connected with the progress of astronomy—such names as Copernicus, Galileo, Newton and Herschel—and think of the difficulties these men encountered in overcoming popular prejudice, we see how slowly has the work progressed—how many renowned astronomers, overtaken by death, have let their work fall unfinished from their hands. Modern science and modern invention have done much toward completing what the ancient shepherds began, yet even now the astronomer finds new vistas ever opening before him; and "all experience is an arch, through which gleams that untraveled world, whose margin fades forever." And so with every science. The seed sown, perhaps, in some far, dim period of time has been slow in its springing and growth. Winds have broken, frosts have blighted the tender plant; yet slowly, surely it has arisen and bears abundant fruit.—Many brave, good men have given their lives for the furtherance of truth. It is as if the backward path of knowledge were strewn all along with the graves of those who have fallen by the wayside; for lo!

"The stars keep their secrets, the earth hides her own,
And bold must the man be that braves the unknown.
Not a truth has to art or to science been given,
But brows have ached for it, and souls toiled and striven.
And many have striven and many have failed,
And many died, slain by the truth they assailed."

Yet earth now gives her proudest monuments to those who died in the cause of truth, and crowns with laurels the brows that are "numb as Dante's own."

Truly "there is no excellence without great labor." No grand truth has ever been discovered, no great deed ever accomplished but with enormous sacrifices and wearying toil. The telescope of the astronomer sweeps the starry vault, plaated amid the never-melting snows that girdle the pole, or beneath the fervid heats of the torrid zone. The footprints of science are found beside Alpine glaciers, and around the burning mouths of trembling volcanoes. Yet even now, after all that has been done and gained, man is forced to confess his own ignorance. He stands but in the vestibule of the temple of knowledge, and must force his way, step by step, to the glorious mysteries of the inner temple—to the shrine and the mystic "holy of holies." Undiscovered truths flutter before us with golden wings that ever elude our grasp. There is for us no sudden blaze of light, no dazzling revealing of the great mysteries of Eleusis, that would blind and strike us dumb with wonder. Slowly the light is admitted, slowly the vail is lifted, and time and labor will at last bear us on to the point where life will comprise all the unutterable knowledge that presses around us on all sides, too vast to be fully comprehended now.

And life itself—oh, sad and beautiful, oh, inexplicable thing!—has its mighty labors, as Hercules had—has its Hydras to conquer and its Nemean lions to overcome. The rule of patient labor that applies to science applies no less to life. By slow degrees great structures have been raised; by slow degrees is that grand structure, a noble life, built up, until its golden dome looks over into the peaceful fields of everlasting rest. Youth is prone to fill the canvas with glowing images of heroic deeds, and to imagine that life means to ride to the battle full-armed, like knights of mediæval times, and fight for the cause of truth and the right. They think to conquer with the first blow. Life is to them a flash and a breath, not a long, slow series of days, each containing its appointed duty and holding out its appointed reward. What wonder that many return from the battle, their shields deserted and their armor rusted, and mournfully declare that "Life is cold, and dark and dreary."

In examining the structure of the coral islands we find that every insect lives out its little life and dies, giving its form to the completion of the work. So with every hour, minute, aye, even every second of our lives. Like the coral polyp, it has been added to the completion of that wondrous structure that we are always involuntarily building. Whether its employment was good or evil, it has gone beyond our reach, and we have no more power over it. Though it were but a second, life is made up of seconds. How often might we exclaim, like Titus of old: "I have lost a day! I have missed a step that might have brought me nearer God." Oh, beautiful days! They come to us like ships full-freighted with merchandise, and too often they bear back their costly offerings to the unknown sea, because we are too eager for the sails that are afar off to see the vessels that are moored at our feet. Since we see that many tares are mingled with the wheat of our earliest sheaves, we throw them down, tares and wheat, and leave the harvest to others. Because we find the mountain-road toilsome and difficult, we take the old, well-beaten track that leads along the valley, amid all the dust and grime. Because the sad, sinful clamors of earth are mingled with the pure song of the stars that strive to draw us upward, we shut out all together, and are deaf to all the music of morning stars. We fix our aims high—far above the dull, prosaic round of every day. We intend to make life noble, but every day is given up to base uses, and we uproot all the fertile soil where we "dig the violets up to look for worms."

Oh, ye who strive to work out all the ends of life well and bravely, make your days noble and your years will be so! Strive to conquer the passions that throng around you, to rise nearer to God and heaven over the things trampled down. Step by step men reach the heights at last, and there the mournful, tearful sounds of earth will die away, and the song of the stars will come out clear and sweet, to ring for evermore through the courts of heaven.

Sunday School Report.

MADE TO THE THIRD QUARTERLY CONFERENCE, EAST SELMA, M. E. CHURCH, SEPTEMBER 6, 1873.

This was reorganized and changed from a mixed or union Sunday evening to a Methodist Sunday morning school on the third Sunday in March last. It was opened with four teachers and fifteen scholars. We use the uniform lessons prepared and adopted by our church, and distribute each Sunday fifty copies of the Visitor and twenty-five of the Little People, which are received with pleasure and, we trust, are read with profit. The teachers, with commendable earnestness and interest from the very beginning to this writing, have to the best of their ability endeavored to impart such instruction as would inspire the children with a desire for a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. These efforts on their part have not been fruitless, for I have been able to discover a very marked improvement in the children, both in the matter of good manners and an eagerness to seek to know the commandments of God and to do them.

As easily as we may determine the kind of tree by the fruit it bears, just so clearly have we evidence of the fact that we have enjoyed, in no small degree, the good pleasure of our heavenly Father. During the year several of the pupils were received into the church, and only one, a little boy, was called to his home on high. With the greatest pleasure and thankfulness to the Giver of all good I am able to say that our number, small at first, has continued to grow, until we now have seventy-one pupils, eight teachers, secretary and superintendent, making in all eighty-one members. The average attendance through the summer has been more than fifty.

The superintendent has very keenly felt the need of the presence, countenance and support of some of the official and many of the other church-members, who seldom if ever meet with us.

With entire confidence in the promises of God, faithfulness in the performance of those things our hands have found to do, and with more frequent and earnest prayer, we believe he will continue to bless our labors, in that he will enlarge our borders and add many to the church of such as shall be saved.

Notes on Popery.

MR. EDITOR: I purpose to send you a few "Notes on Popery," that growing evil in our land. Of all the systems ever suggested by the tempter or invented by human ingenuity to impress, deceive and mislead the human mind, I regard popery as the worst of the worst. It is, says Dr. Achilli, "the most pernicious and corrupt system of moral slavery that has ever been invented by the ingenuity of man."—Page 11. "The church of God, and the whole clergy (says the Council of Paris, 1429, meaning popery,) is held in derision, abomination and reproach among all nations."—Swete's Eng. V. S. Rome, page 203. There is not a doctrine in the whole book of God but they have perverted or distorted. They are opposed to liberty of opinion, the liberty of the press, and to all religious liberty. They are opposed to the reading of the Bible, having rejected it from their public schools in New York and Cincinnati. They are opposed to all free governments where they are not the ruling power, and are, of course, enemies to this government. They have ever been opposed to freedom of thought and the progress of science; and, to add no more for the present, they have ever opposed all religious reforms from within, and ever will, for to reform popery, I believe, is impossible.

Obituaries.

DIED, of consumption, on the sixteenth of August, at sea, on board the steamship Russia, en route from Liverpool to New York, FANNY BURGESS, wife of John A. Peel, of this city.

JOHN B. POWERS was born in East Feliciana parish, Louisiana, January 20, 1806, and died, at his residence in East Baton Rouge parish, Louisiana, April 11, 1873, after suffering for the period of nine weeks.

Bro. Powers professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in the year 1829, and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South at the time of his death. I visited him a short time after he was taken sick, and found him glad to see me; and while we read, sang and prayed he became happy and rejoiced in God. From this time he continued in the same frame of mind, always expressing himself as willing and ready to be absent from the body and present with the Lord. His physician told me that he had never seen any one in a sane state of mind so desirous to die. He was liberal with the means with which Heaven blessed him, both to the church and the indigent. During the war the soldiers of the Northern army burned the church-house where he held his membership. He saw it while it was yet burning, and promised himself that if he lived and had the means when the war closed he would rebuild the church. He had the money, and at an expense of $500 or $600 to himself built Bethel church, the house we now worship in. His house was a home for the preachers. Thus lived and died one of the servants of God; and when he came to leave the terrestrial body he was prepared to leave a good testimony to his surviving friends. May his wife, children and friends be as well prepared to go when they are called hence.

N. B. YOUNG.

THE Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal Church South in Pattersonville, in assembly on the twenty-ninth of June, adopted the following resolutions. After having requested Miss Sophie Grout, Miss Mary Muzzah and Miss Avarilla Muzzah to act as a committee in behalf of the school, Miss Sophie Grout was requested to act as chairman and Miss Avarilla Muzzah as secretary.

Inasmuch as a member of our Sunday school has been called to sever her connection with all worldly pursuits, and is gone (whence none return) to experience the verities of the spiritual state, we who remain will adopt the following resolutions as an expression of our sorrow and hope, and our appreciation of the departed:

Resolved, That in the departure of our young, lovely, genial companion, TESMIZA KNIGHT, we humbly ask grace from our heavenly Father to bear with becoming resignation our sad bereavement.

Resolved, That we do not sorrow as those without hope, for we do hope, by the grace of God, to meet her where the weary are at rest, and death and departure are no more known.

Resolved, That we cherish a lively remembrance of her amiable qualities, and that we affectionately condole with those nearest of kin in their sore affliction; and further, that our secretary be requested to furnish a copy of these resolutions to the family, and a copy each to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Brashear News, with a request to publish the same.

MISS SOPHIE GROUT, Chairman.
MISS MARY MUZZAH, Teacher.
MISS AVARILLA MUZZAH, Sec.

CAROLINE JORDAN, wife of H. G. Jordan, and daughter of Jesse and Charlotte Copeland, of Tattnall county, Georgia, was born May 3, 1836, and departed this life June 22, 1873, near Pensacola, Florida. She professed religion in 1857. She had joined the church some six years before, at a camp meeting held at Appling camp ground. She was married to H. G. Jordan January 10, 1855.

Some ten days before her death her husband returned home from his work at the usual hour in the evening. She said to him: "I thought I was going to-day; but I recovered." Evident it was that she was daily sinking. On the nineteenth, as her husband returned home, he found she had grown much worse. He asked her if her prospects were brighter, pointing her at the same time to the cross of Christ. She answered that her way was growing brighter; and all of a sudden she shouted: "I know that my Redeemer liveth. Glory be to God." She then called for her infant and all her children. She asked them to meet her in heaven. She made the same request of friends and neighbors. She spoke of friends and relations, and especially of an infant in the better world. Then, turning her eyes to her husband, she requested him to write to his brother and friends in the old country and community to meet her in heaven. She seemed more quiet and rested all day. Her husband asked her again of her future prospects. She replied that her way was clear. The night following she was still resting, but this was the stillness of the night of death, before the bursting forth of the resplendent rays of the eternal morning. About nine o'clock on Sunday morning, the twenty-second, it was evident that the messenger had come. She was suddenly shocked. She exclaimed to her husband: "What is the matter, I feel so strange." The second time she called her children and gave them advice as to how they should live, and bade them all to meet her in heaven. A few minutes before she died she apparently fell asleep, and slept until her spirit took its exit to a heavenly world.

D. C. STANDLEY, P. C.

JAMES T. WILLIAMS, of Attala county, Mississippi, died of congestion of the stomach and bowels on the eleventh of June, A. D. 1873, at the age of fifty-three years and eleven days. He was suddenly and violently attacked in his field and only survived twenty hours, but retained his mind to the last hour. Bro. Williams was a remarkable case of reclaiming grace. He was a native of Jackson, Georgia, and son of Rev. James Williams. He came many years ago to Mississippi and settled in Attala county, where he left a numerous family. He was a good husband and father and neighbor and citizen in the common acceptation of the word. He was thrifty in his business and accumulated property.

Years ago he was greatly exercised on the subject of religion, and joined the church as a seeker on probation; but under a combination of circumstances he thought it better not to apply for full membership, but to have his name dropped from the roll. The enemy having gained this point, and having his victim exposed in an open field to all his machinations, afflicted him almost to madness, and then held out the intoxicating cup as an anodyne for a wounded soul. He took the dreadful bait and lost power over himself, until he was driven to the verge of ruin. He was not an habitual drunkard, but flew to his cups for relief from the sufferings of a sensitive nature when his wounds grew too sore. In this condition the writer found him at his first appointment at Bethel church, near Bro. Williams' home, January 28 and 29, 1871. Bro. Williams was at my first appointment there, and a very attentive and intelligent hearer. On Sunday at eleven o'clock I took up, as my custom was, the Bishops' collection, and incidentally suggested a plan by which the funds needed for church purposes could be provided by any one and never reduce their private funds. The plan struck him; his practical mind immediately resolved to carry it into practice, which he did. He was always a liberal supporter of the church, but here was a system that would put funds at the disposal of a pious wife and children for the Lord's treasury. In 1871 he carried out his plan with very satisfactory results. In 1872 he enlarged his plans for doing good, and though he said "he was a drunken outsider," he saw plainly that the Lord blessed the work of his hands. Toward the close of 1872 he saw the Lord's house at Bethel in decay, and the Lord's funds in his and his neighbors' hands to rebuild it. His whole soul was alive to the glory of building the Lord's house. He was present at the Quarterly Conference, August 3, 1872, anxiously waiting an opportunity of helping with his money and influence to build the Lord's house. A building committee was appointed. His survivors well remember how he there pledged himself to quit drink if some of them would increase their subscriptions (the increase was agreed to and the pledge faithfully kept;) and how he urged their ability to build a house worthy the name of a church, and insisted that offerings of this kind made to God in faith cost the givers nothing.

The committee did well when they put him at their head, with his $200 subscription and his great earnest heart to work for the Lord. In a few days the building was under contract. On the night of the twelfth of September, 1872, by his request I partook of his hospitality, and next day rode with him to Liberty camp meeting. On the way his heart was full of the new church at Bethel. I took occasion to urge the importance of his coming into the church and consecrating himself to God. After a pause, with emotion he said: "I will join when the church is finished and dedicated." On Sunday, September 15, 1872, at the eleven o'clock service, the power of God was there, the prayer of his people prevailed and a great blessing came on the church. An old man with streaming eyes gave himself to God and his church. In the midst of a scene of rejoicing, in which angels partook, Judge Scarborough caught my arm to get my attention. He was pressing his way to the altar with Bro. Williams, who now sought to consecrate himself to God. He then and there laid him on God's altar, a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable; he could not wait to see Bethel dedicated. He sought an opportunity of telling me all his heart—much more than I can write here—every word of which was of thrilling interest, but must not trench further on these columns. Bro. Williams was henceforth the Lord's. He was first converted to a just sense of God's claims on our substance. He began to work up to his convictions of duty. The light shined more and more to the perfect day. "If any man will do the will of my Father, he shall know of the work." He gave much of his time and care to building the new church till his fatal attack. When death held him in his grasp he said: "Let the church be finished. I am going to die. I have been a bad man, but, thank God, I am a changed man. Death has no terror for me." Our people die well, thank God. He did not see the finishing strokes on the beautiful new church. He sleeps almost under the shadow of it. I dedicated the church on the thirty-first of August, and next day preached Bro. Williams' funeral at the same place. Thus sweetly sleeps in Jesus, at the Master's call, one of the committee—our loved friend and brother. There remaineth, therefore, a rest to the people of God.

W. P. BARTON.

WE SEE by the Christian Age that a society has been organized in connection with the Church of the Strangers, New York, under the name of the "Fraternals," which has opened comfortable sleeping apartments, where decent but destitute women can find a bath, a clean bed, a cup of tea, with religious services, and medical attention, if needed. The Age says that thousands of such unhappy females have been forced to seek lodging the past season at the station-houses, the filth and foul company of which make them the resort only of the desperate. Such charities reflect the real glory of our religion. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me."

JONES takes a vacation because he needs change. Jenkins stays at home for a similar reason.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1873.

THIS I DID FOR THEE.—WHAT DOEST THOU FOR ME?

I gave my life for thee,
My precious blood I shed,
That thou mightst ransomed be,
And quickened from the dead.
I gave my life for thee;
What hast thou given for me?

I spent long years for thee
In weariness and woe,
That one eternity
Of joy thou mayest know.
I spent long years for thee;
Hast thou spent one for me?

My Father's house of light,
My rainbow-circled throne,
I left for earthly night,
For wanderings sad and lone;
I left all for thee;
Hast thou left aught for me?

I suffered much for thee—
More than thy tongue can tell—
Of bitterest agony,
To rescue thee from hell.
I suffered much for thee;
What dost thou bear for me?

And I have brought to thee,
Down from my home above,
Salvation full and free,
My pardon and my love,
Great gifts I brought to thee;
What hast thou brought to me?

Oh! let thy life be given,
Thy years for me be spent,
World-fetters all be riven,
And joy with suffering blent.
I gave myself for thee;
Give thou thyself to me.

"Scribner's" and Christianity.

The following article is from the pen of the man whom we regard as the ablest theological writer of the present age.

Charles Scribner is dead. This sad fact is manifest not only by the vacant seat in his household, and by "the aching void" in the hearts of his numerous friends, but it is painfully revealed by the course adopted by the magazine which bears his honored name. Many of its readers have been grieved by the travesties of religious experience which have appeared from time to time on its pages; and now it seems disposed to assume an attitude of decided hostility to Christianity itself. This is not done boldly and avowedly, but in a way far more dangerous. Such articles as those on "Modern Skepticism," in the recent numbers of that magazine, are adapted to produce a more injurious impression on the public mind than anything which Comte or Herbert Spencer has written. The writer represents "Modern Skepticism" as something entirely new, not to be met by old arguments, or old methods of defense. It is not only new, but portentous. It is a tidal wave which threatens to sweep creeds, church and Christianity from the face of the earth. Who can resist a tidal wave? The authors of the new system are represented as honest, earnest, profound—men of the highest genius, learned and laborious. Their opponents are old fogies, not even understanding the principles which they are called upon to refute; who administer the "old doses of Paley and Pearson," not at all suited to the emergency. The writer lectures the whole body of the English clergy for their "blunders" in the conflict. In his view they are little better than an army of Chinese contending against modern artillery with gongs and brazen kettles. The time is past when opinions can be put down by authority, whether of the church or of the Bible. The American clergy are warned not to follow the example of their English brethren. They are, however, represented as entirely incompetent for the work to be done. It demands eminent genius, great learning, great labor. How can all this be expected of our overworked pastors. They can only, with folded hands, wait the coming of the tidal wave which is to sweep them all away. If anything is to be done, he seems to think it must be done by laymen. How enough of them are to be obtained to raise an embankment sufficiently high and strong to resist the incoming flood it is hard to say.

The first remark which suggests itself in reference to this bravado is that it is nothing new. Christianity has been swept away many times in times past. Men are now alive who remember when Christianity was abolished in France, and the Illuminati held their revels over its grave. Still more recently the philosophers of Germany were unable to find words sufficiently strong to express their contempt for any man who believed in a personal God, the free agency of man, or the immortality of the soul. Comte, some twenty years ago, abolished Christianity, and introduced a new religion. Where is it now? Has Tyndall's famous demonstration of the inefficacy of prayer sealed the lips of any saint or sinner from the rising to the setting of the sun?

We feel no contempt for "Modern Skepticism," any more than we do for the cholera. Both are great evils; but we have no more fear that skepticism will sweep away Christianity than that the cholera will extirpate the human race. In this nineteenth century there are probably ten times as many sincere believers ready to die for Christ and his gospel as in any previous century since he rose from the dead. While such self-complacent boasting as that in which the writer in Scribner has indulged is simply foolish, it nevertheless is to be deprecated. It is worse than foolish to endeavor to startle the public with confident assurances that the plague is at their doors. It is much to be lamented that some distinguished ministers join in this panic-making, and openly proclaim that Darwin has never been answered. He needs no answer any more than the man who shall assert that two and two are five hundred. Darwin's facts may go for what they are worth; but his reasoning has not the strength of a spider's web. It is easy to lead a man by a hair along the road which he wishes to go; but not if he resists. No man is a Darwinian who does not desire to be one.

The second remark suggested by the perusal of the articles in question is that their author does not seem to have the slightest idea of what Christianity is, or of the nature of the evidence on which its claims are founded. We are told that theologians must abandon "every one of the traditional arguments in favor of Christianity." Christianity, it is said, "must rest upon a basis of evidence and reasoning of a like character to that which claims our assent to ordinary scientific propositions." Unless it can be sustained by scientific evidence, it is no more worthy of faith than witchcraft or sorcery. Now what is scientific evidence, as that phrase is ordinarily used? It is the evidence of the senses. Facts must be proved by facts. Scientific evidence is the evidence afforded by observation and experiment, and by the exhibition of the processes by which a given effect is brought about. If you say that God answers prayer, you must pray and the answer at once follow. This must be tested over and over, everywhere and by every one. And, moreover, you must be able to explain how, if rain be the blessing asked, it is that he gives rain. If you say that a man was raised from the dead, you must prove by experiment that it is possible to restore a dead man to life, and explain how it is done, so that others may repeat the experiment. This, as every one knows, is the way in which Prof. Tyndall would have the efficacy of prayer tested.

The evidence on which Christianity rests is of two kinds, historical and moral or spiritual. Neither of these admit of scientific verification in the sense intended. How can it be scientifically proved that Cæsar conquered Gaul, or that Jesus Christ rose from the dead? The latter event is the best authenticated fact in the history of the world; and if that fact be true, then by an absolute necessity of sequence the gospel is true. Yet the event from its nature does not admit of the verification which "Modern Skepticism" demands. It is said that nothing now can be believed on authority. But all the facts of history are received on authority; they admit of no other evidence. If it be answered that authority is repudiated as a ground of a faith only in relation to doctrines and not to facts, the answer is that the facts involve the doctrines. Admit the facts of the Bible, and the doctrines will take care of themselves.

The scientific method is equally inapplicable to the moral or spiritual evidence on which Christianity rests. How can the moral obligation of the decalogue be scientifically proved? What would the modern skeptic say to murderers, thieves and prostitutes who should demand scientific evidence that their acts were wrong, before they would admit themselves to be deserving of condemnation? The evidence of the truth of Christianity found in its adaptation to the higher nature of man, and to his personal experience, and in its meeting and satisfying its spiritual necessities, as well as in the witness of the Spirit, is in its nature analogous to the evidence of the authority of the moral law, and is equally irresistible and indescribable.

Thirdly. Our author forgets that there are such things as axioms or intuitive truths. If a mathematician should fill a folio volume with formulas exhausting all the resources of the calculus and arrive at the conclusion that a part is greater than the whole, there would be no need of great genius, protracted research, to go over his work and point out the flaws in his process of reasoning. The conclusion is the refutation; and, in like manner, when "Modern Skepticism" reaches and avows conclusions inconsistent with intuitive truths on the plainest facts of consciousness, it is thereby refuted. It is impossible that it should be trustworthy, when the skeptic tells us that science leads to the conclusion that man is not a free agent, that he is not responsible for his character and conduct; that design does not imply intelligence, that there is no efficiency in causation, that there is no personal God and no consciousness or life for man beyond the grave, it is not necessary that we should be men of genius to prove that the skeptic is what the Bible (not we) calls a fool. This is the short and easy way in which every Christian, and we had almost said every man of sense, deals with "Modern Skepticism." When owls have hooted the sun out of the heavens, then, and not before, may the "tidal wave" of such skepticism sweep Christianity from the face of the earth. The Christian has ever sounding in his ears the words of his ascended Savior concerning his church: "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—New York Observer.

A Nursery of Popery.

In treating lately, says the Methodist, of the question of the "Decline of Protestantism," we mentioned that nearly all the conversions to popery, in this country, are from the Protestant, Episcopal Church, and we submitted that fact to the serious consideration of "Ritualists." The Christian Era discusses it, and gives the following illustrations from Boston: "On Sunday, June 29, at three o'clock, Rev. Father Welch, of Boston College, received the abjuration and gave conditional baptism to Mr. Richard Bliss, of Cambridge. This young man is connected with the Scientific Museum of Prof. Agassiz, in Cambridge, and has been for seven years a member of the Episcopal Church. Number two is Mary Stella Libby, a daughter of James Libby, Esq., of Boston. She was a member of the Church of the Messiah, a high church institution, of which Rev. Pelham Williams has charge. The Pilot, which ought to know, is informed that this is not, strictly speaking, a ritualistic church, but that it has decidedly Catholic tendencies. This lady is the ninth or tenth convert that has been prepared for Rome under the instruction of Mr. Williams. Number three is Frank Collins Ward, a young English gentleman, who was received by Rev. Father Metcalf at the pro-cathedral, Castle street. Mr. Ward belonged to the Church of England, and has for some time been under Father Metcalf's instructions and guidance. Number four is a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, Rev. Charles R. Brainard, formerly rector of the church in Quincy, Massachusetts, but for about a year past residing in Middlebero, Massachusetts. There is something striking in the fact that these converts are all from the Episcopal Church, and it makes us fear that that ancient church is a half-way house to Rome."

Similar facts can be given from New York, New Jersey, and, indeed, from all parts of the country. Cannot our Protestant Episcopal brethren see that their unfortunate substitution of ecclesiasticism for apostolic simplicity is converting their church into a nursery of Romanism? The Era adds: "No wonder the evangelicals inside the church should endeavor to resist the evil and stem the tide. But they cannot stem it. Tyng, Cheney, John Cotton Smith, and that noble class of men, are being swept away on the besom of the deluge. They are 'nowhere' in preventing high church encroachments. And the high church party is right if the prayer-book is right. Baptismal regeneration is papacy, and the prayer-book teaches baptismal regeneration."

Biblical Researches.

Many doubts have been expressed in regard to the credibility of the biblical statements, referring to the animals which were presented by the King of Egypt to Abraham. For instance, Bohlen asserts that sheep and camels cannot thrive in Egypt, that asses were repugnant from their color, and therefore not raised, and that the omission of horses in the category displays an ignorance of the state of Egypt, where such animals were perfectly at home. Dr. Ebers, in his profound work, Aegypten und die Buecher Moses, refutes successfully these objections; in not mentioning horses, he affirms that the Bible shows an exact knowledge of Egyptian affairs at the date of Abraham's visit. Before the era of the Hyksos (Arabic and Palestinian tribes who ruled over Egypt for some time,) a horse is never mentioned on the numerous monuments; but after the expulsion of the Shepherd Kings frequent allusions are made to the horse, and in the eighteenth dynasty its neck and head are perfectly represented. There is no doubt that the Hyksos introduced the horse into Egypt—its stature and head especially are marked by strong Arabic peculiarities. As Abraham visited Egypt before the rule of the Hyksos, Pharaoh of course could not have given him a horse. In later parts of the Pentateuch, however, the Israelites appear to have been very well acquainted with the horse.

Upon the monuments of the twelfth dynasty appear sheep, according to the naturalist, Herrman, Ovicaotis or ayenitica. Herodotus mentions the rams of Mendesia, the horns of the ram of Ammon, the ram-headed idols of the Nile, etc. In a grave of the great pyramid appear a picture and statement of about 2,235 common and 973 improved sheep and ewes; hence 3,208 animals in all, belonging to one owner. The existence of large numbers of asses in ancient Egypt is established by pictures from Beni-hassan, and the much older graves of the pyramids, where we meet with large herds of them. Then Seth was not yet "the wicked," and his animal by no means despised. And even later, when the ass was hated, he was much used for riding and carrying burdens.

Greater doubts could be raised against the camel, as this animal nowhere appears upon the monuments, and its name in the new kingdom is written Kamaal, corresponding with the Hebrew, showing that the word was derived from an Eastern nation; and it has been proved by Heinrich Barth that the camel, on which at the present day the life of northern Africa depends, was introduced into the Barbary States after the birth of Christianity, and was wanting during the period of the highest culture in that part of the world. And still camels did exist in Egypt in the most ancient times, as Hekekyan Bey, at his diggings at great depths, has met, among other remains of quadrupeds, with bones of dromedaries.—Jewish Messenger.

COLLEGE GRADUATES IN CONGRESS.—The Congressional Directory of the last Congress shows that of three hundred and seventeen senators and representatives only about eighty-seven were graduates of a college. But this number is not to be taken as absolutely correct; for the biographical notices of the Directory in a few instances say nothing about education, and in others are suspiciously ambiguous. Of the leading colleges of the country, the representation is small. Yale leads with ten graduates; the University of North Carolina comes next with six; Union, Dartmouth and Hamilton have each four; Harvard and Princeton have but three; as have Williams, West Point, Waterville (now Colby University) and Miami; there are two from the University of Virginia, two from Brown and Madison; one from Amherst, Oberlin and Michigan—all told, about fifty real graduates of real colleges, in the two houses of Congress. As to States, the most notable is North Carolina, for six of her nine members are college men (which is the highest proportion to be found in Congress,) and all of them are graduates of her State University. The three great States, notwithstanding their wealth and the number of their colleges, have about one-fourth each: New York, nine out of thirty-three; Pennsylvania, six out of twenty-six; Ohio, five out of twenty-one. New England is not much better, having less than half; and ten States, extending in age from Maryland and Delaware to Texas and Nevada, have not a single graduate. As between the North and South and the East and West not much can be said, for North Carolina and Nebraska are the only States which come up to the proportion of two-thirds. Remembering the fine array of cultivated statesmen which old Virginia possessed in her day of scanty educational means, it must be deemed sad evidence of her decline that Virginia and West Virginia combined now have but one graduate of a college among their fifteen members.—The Nation.

How to Study the Bible.

One of the most interesting and profitable methods of teaching the four gospels is by means of the map of Palestine. The four gospels are but different accounts of the life and ministry of Christ, and the best way to understand and appreciate them is to study the life of him whose wonderful work they record. Having secured a good wall-map of Palestine, and a harmony of the gospels, begin, for example, at Bethlehem, and tell the story of the Savior's birth and the interesting incidents connected therewith; the circumcision, at which time he was called Jesus; the presentation in the temple; the flight into Egypt, and the return to Nazareth after the death of Herod; the story of his disputation with the doctors in the temple at twelve years of age; his baptism by John at thirty years of age; his temptation, and so on, going over the life and ministry of Christ in connected historical order.

According to this plan the ministry of Christ is made to have greater reality for us. When we think of him we can follow him, in our mind, by means of the map from place to place. His life and ministry come before us as a whole, and we are able to locate him in almost everything he did. It is really the only thorough and satisfactory method of Bible study, and moreover the most interesting.

In adopting this method let the superintendent or teacher place the map as near the children as possible. On the first Sunday spend about fifteen minutes of the session of the school on the birth of Christ. Point out Bethlehem as the place of his birth; then Jerusalem, where the temple was, in which the child was presented to the Lord; then Egypt, the place to which he fled from fear of Herod. On the next Sunday briefly review and question the school, and so on from Sunday to Sunday, until the school has followed the Savior from the manger at Bethlehem until he was conceived from his disciples and ascended "to the right hand of the Majesty on high."

The schools which adopt this plan will be, indeed, rooted and grounded in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. Children who go over the story in this way will have a more correct and satisfactory view of the Savior's life than thousands who read and read again the Bible story without the map. As remarked before, the only text-book necessary for these lessons is a harmony of the gospels. It groups the different accounts under one head, and gives each event in historical order. Will you try it?—Reformed Church Messenger.

FROM all sides, says the Independent, is heard the demand for better teachers and better teaching in the Sunday school; and in this, as in all things else, the supply will measurably keep pace with the demand. Prof. Landis well says in Our Bible Teacher:

"Persons who would be utterly unable to teach a common school in the most backwoods district are deemed abundantly competent to teach intelligent and inquiring youth the sacred oracles of God. It seems to me this is almost criminal. I know the difficulty superintendents often have to find competent teachers; but better far have fewer classes, and those few classes well instructed, than to have many classes and have God's word mangled, distorted and perverted, and the children and youth misinstructed. There are many professed teachers who are profoundly ignorant of the Bible, and, what is worse, who are, of course, so profoundly unconscious of their ignorance as to regard themselves perfectly competent to instruct their classes without so much as studying the lesson. Away with such teachers!"

Not a few teachers give their whole attention to one scholar at a time in the class. They seem to forget while they are teaching him that they are responsible for his classmates. In this way they have practically as many classes as they have scholars—quite too many classes for them to manage successfully. Good teaching may be pointed and personal without being exclusive to a single scholar. Rev. W. S. Palmer says in the National Sunday School Teacher on this point:

"Never, on any account, teach one scholar alone, leaving the rest unoccupied. While you adapt your questions to particular individuals, which is essential to the best results, ever act upon the consciousness that you have a whole class in hand. You cannot be too persistent in your purpose to keep the entire class interested in every word you speak. In reviews or when asking easy questions it may sometimes be well to single out individuals—not by calling their names, but simply by catching their eyes."

HAVE you thought how many weak things there are in the world? Look at the natural kingdom. How few are the oaks and many are the rushes! There is a rose with a stem so fragile as almost to break under the burden of its own fragrant bloom; yet God is the God of the reed and the rose. There is not a spire of grass bruised by the trampling feet, nor a leaf fluttering from a twig, nor a bird that flies, nor a worm that crawls, no, nor any order of life so weak as to be beneath his care.

ONE of our Southern Presbyterian ministers, Dr. Wilson, of Louisville, while recently in London, went to hear Mr. Spurgeon, who, finding that he was in the house, courteously invited him to the platform. It being communion Sabbath, Dr. Wilson was asked to partake in the service and sacrament, and made an earnest address to the large assemblage of communicants.

THE STORY is told, illustrative of the effects of Concord atmosphere, that a little chap who lived next door to Emerson was engaged one day in digging a hole by the roadside. A worldly trifler passing by asked him: "What are you digging after, little boy?" With gravity he answered: "After the Infinite."

Religious Intelligence.

A LARGE number of the exiled German Jesuits have settled their headquarters at Dillon Hall, about nine miles from Liverpool.

THE Colorado Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church reports an advance of over thirty-two per cent. in membership over that of last year. The year has been one of marked prosperity.

A CATHOLIC exchange says: "Rev. Theobald Buter, of the Society of Jesuits in America, is now in Ireland looking up candidates for the priesthood, to be brought to this country to supply the wants of the Catholic population of the United States."

THE Advance, in a recent article on penny-giving, stated that a church in Wisconsin was recently embarrassed with a debt of $10,000, which it would have been impossible to pay in the ordinary way. But the pastor conceived the idea of penny shares to be paid daily for five hundred days; and that debt was lifted forthwith.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHT theological seminaries, with 435 professors and 3,351 students, are the correct figures for this class of our institutions, as given in the recent annual report of the Commissioner of Education at Washington. Fifteen of the seminaries and 500 students belong to the Roman Catholics; the rest to the Protestant denominations.

THE subscription of $160,000 for the erection of a second theological hall for the Divinity School of Yale College, toward which a friend of the seminary has recently subscribed $80,000, on condition that the remainder was raised by August 1, has been completed by the professors becoming responsible for the sum still wanting, amounting to about $6,000.

HENRY DAY, ESQ., of New York city, writes to the Observer from Beyroot that a wealthy Greek in that city has offered $500 toward the erection of a Protestant church on an eminence in the eastern end of the city, provided other friends of the enterprise can raise $1,000 more. Dr. Jessup has been authorized to secure the ground, and have the deeds vested in the Mission Board.

REV. GIDEON DRAPER, of the New York Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, while in Geneva, Switzerland, preached several Sabbaths in the American chapel in that city. The people were so well pleased that they have extended to him an invitation to become their pastor, and we understand that he has accepted the invitation. He will therefore remain in Geneva for the next year, and possibly longer.

REV. FATHER CHINIQUY, the reformed Catholic priest, who has charge of a congregation near Kankakee, Illinois, who like himself have forsaken the Church of Rome, was baptized at the late camp meeting at Kankakee. He came forward of his own accord, saying: "I do not consider that I have ever received Christian baptism for the Roman Catholic Church is not a Christian church." The next day he preached with great power.

A FOREIGN LETTER SAYS: "The 'Infallible' Catholics call the Old Catholics 'a sect of New Protestants,' and two priests in Cologne have just been excommunicated for joining them. The new sect grows steadily in numbers, and has recently shown the weight of its influence by securing from the town council of that city a second church for its use. The Abbe Hurtault, canon of Tours, has joined Father Hyacinthe in his mission at Geneva."

AMONG the reasons given why the religious festival of the Juggernaut car is on the wane in India is the very sufficient one for the Hindoo that the English government will allow no more self-immolations to give eclat to the spectacle. The absence of victims renders the whole scene tame and meaningless to the devout native, and he, sorrowfully keeps away from it. In fact there were so few Hindoos at the last Serampore festival that a sufficient number could not be mustered to drag the ponderous car along the usual route.

AMERICAN missionary societies are almost in exclusive possession of the opening field in Japan. In Yokohama the Reformed, the Baptists, the Presbyterians and the Woman's Missionary Union are established, and now the Methodists have joined them with one missionary, who has just entered on his work. Sectarian lines, however, are very wisely ignored, and the native Christian church in that city, comprising fifty members, is not troubled with non-essential creeds or doctrines. This policy is adopted also in the other places which are open to missionaries. The number of American workers in Yokohama is nineteen.

THE United Brethren celebrate their centennial in 1874, in which year the first society was formed by Bishop Otterbein, in Baltimore. No exact date is fixed upon for the exercises, which are to be held in each society any time during the year, to suit their convenience. Collections are to be made in all the societies, and the funds collected are to be equally divided between the Missionary Society, the Church Erection Society and the endowment fund of the Union Biblical Seminary, except when otherwise directed by the donors. Rev. D. Berger, of Dayton, Ohio, is named general treasurer of centenary fund.

THE struggle in Brazil between the Catholics and the government is likely to be quite as sharp as that in Germany. By the constitution of Brazil and by a contract recognized and approved by the Pope certain ecclesiastical powers were never to be exercised by the church without the permission of the State. Since the proclamation of infallibility this compact has been ignored and the clerics have been defying the power of the government. At last the matter has come to a definite issue. The Bishop of Pernambuco excommunicated certain Free Masons, without obtaining the permission of the authorities. He was ordered to withdraw his sentence within four weeks, and refused to do so. For this reason he is prosecuted by the president of the province. The government has also declared to the Chambers that it will take energetic measures to enforce obedience to its authority from the bishops. It is a square fight, and Don Pedro the Second, though heretofore a good Catholic, is not the man to surrender.

THE German ecclesiastical laws are now being enforced throughout the country. The authorities are especially instructed to see that the Catholic bishops carry out the provisions of the law respecting the training and appointment of the clergy, as the performance of the duties of office by priests whose appointment is not warranted by the laws would be null and void, and would necessarily lead to deplorable confusion in the affairs of those citizens who are their parishioners. The Archbishop of Posen, Count Ledochovski, has been advised that since he has failed to give effect to the recent ecclesiastical legislation in the clerical seminaries established within his diocese the exemption of their pupils from military duty will be withdrawn, and neither ordination as sub-deacon nor as presbyter will henceforth secure immunity from service.—Independent.

THE Italian government has prohibited all pilgrimages organized under orders from the Vatican. The avowed reason is the same as has caused the suppression of movements of troops—namely, the public health and the public order. Immediately after the first cases of cholera the superior council of health, convoked by the home minister, hastened to recommend to the government to put down all large gatherings of people, whatever the object, unless there was a necessity for them in the public service. The Italie says the prohibition of pilgrimages was absolutely necessary. A further proof of the weakness of the Pope and the Propaganda in the region where they ought to be strongest is furnished by the fact that a monument has been unveiled in the University of Naples bearing the inscription: "To Pope Clement the Fourteenth, who, by the bull of the twenty-first of July, 1773, dissolved the Society of the Jesuits, the University of Naples dedicates this monument."—Independent.

FOR LIBERIA.—Rev. Thomas S. Malcom, of Philadelphia, gives the following information as to another expedition to Liberia, preparations for which, he says, are in progress. "Out of more than three thousand applications for passage, a careful selection will be made. The number sent must depend upon the means furnished. Among the worthy freedmen who wish to aid in building up a Christian republic in Africa there are not less than one thousand in Georgia. One of these is an elder in the Presbyterian Church, and another a Baptist preacher. Many of their friends wish to accompany them. Such men are peculiarly needed in Africa. We may properly term this work 'missionary colonization.' It is economical and permanent. Firmly planted in Africa, the work will not only soon become self-sustaining, but missionaries will be sent to the regions beyond. We ask help from all friends of the freedmen and of Africa. Fifty dollars will pay the passage of an emigrant, and the same sum will secure six months' support while clearing land, building houses and planting a crop."

CHRISTIANS IN PERSIA.—A late letter to the London Times states that the condition of the Christian population of Persia seems to be improving. They number 50,000, of whom one-half are Armenians and the other half Nestorians. The 6,000 Armenians who reside in towns are found chiefly in Tabreez and Julfa, near Ispahan. The rest are cultivators in the provinces of Ispahan, Irak and Azerbijan, who are exposed to the same illegal exactions as their Mohammedan fellow-subjects, but to no more. The Nestorians are not so well treated, being immediately exposed to the oppression of the Afshar chiefs, in the plain of Oroomiah and the neighborhood, but even in their case acts of violence and injustice are not so frequent as they used to be, such as the seizure of girls, and their forcible conversion to Islam. The American missionaries, who are doing so good a work in that district, have often remonstrated against the oppression. In Persia the Mohammedan who becomes a Christian, or the apostate to Islam who afterward renounces it, is liable to death. The Sudr Azem is a liberal man, but neither he nor the Shah could introduce religious liberty into Persia in the face of the priesthood. Only a reorganization of the administration will stop fiscal extortion.

THE text of the Pope's allocution, delivered on the twenty-fifth of July, has now been published. It is only a jeremiade over the suppression of the religious orders in Rome and a denunciation of the judgments of the church against all who have participated in passing or who shall aid in enforcing the bills suppressing them. These are the comfortable words with which the vicar of Christ addresses "the powers that be" in Rome: "We are forced by the duty of vindicating the rights of the church, by the solicitude of warning the careless, and by very charity for the guilty, to raise our voice and to declare to all those who have not hesitated to propose or to approve or to sanction this aforesaid most iniquitous enactment, and to all commissioners, promoters, counselors, adherents, executors or purchasers of ecclesiastical property, that whatever they have done or may do is to no valuable account, but void and null. And not only so, but they are, in the act of any participation whatever, each and all of them, stricken with the major excommunication, and with yet other ecclesiastical pains and penalties, according to the sacred canons, apostolical constitutions and decrees latliated by general councils, and especially by the Council of Trent, and that they have fallen into the most terrible vengeance of God and are walking in plain peril of eternal damnation." Whether this will have any effect upon the value of the real estate confiscated by the laws referred to remains to be seen.—Independent.

Dying as a Little Child.

Aged saints in their dying hours often seem to return to the simplicity of their childhood, and their faith and trust have the sweetness and dewy freshness of their earliest religious experience. It was Dr. Guthrie who in his last hours called for a song, and when asked what they should sing, replied: "Give me one of the bairn's songs." Dr. Paxton, in his address at the funeral of Dr. Gardiner Spring, stated that in his last illness, when disease was added to the infirmity of age, he seemed to be taken back to his childhood, and on one occasion, after repeating a child's hymn, Dr. Spring repeated also the evening prayer of early days, "Now I lay me down to sleep," and added: "God bless me, and make me a good boy, for Jesus' sake. Amen." It was truly a sublime scene, this aged and learned theologian entering heaven as a little child. There is something not only sublime and touching, but instructive, in such facts as these. They may help us more perfectly to understand and appreciate the Savior's emphatic declaration: "Verily, I say unto you, whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." It would seem that not only are we to receive the kingdom of grace as little children, but the kingdom of glory also. The child-likeness which constitutes so important an element of conversion and Christian character comes out in its greatest clearness and beauty at the end of a long career, and just as the immortal crown is to be obtained.

The humility, the sincerity and the unquestioning trust of our earliest years are often marred by contact with the discussions and skeptical thought of mature years. Unconsciously a taint of self-sufficiency and pride of intellect have been permitted to soil the spirit, and the soul has gone out of Christ somewhat to wrestle with problems of theology and philosophy, and to grapple with secret things too high for human comprehension. For the earlier and truer processes of faith there has been an attempt to reach satisfaction and assurance through the investigations of science and criticism, and by the unaided powers of reason. Some of the loftiest and most erudite minds have retained the child-like spirit through all the labors and attainments of a life of study; but with many this dew of youth and this precious aroma of the opening flower are lost.

Contact with the world, and the maturing of the appetites and passions, have a tendency to stain the innocence of our first experience, and to darken, where they do not altogether obscure, the soft and pure light of life's morning. Happy are they who pass through the robust period of passion and active life, and meet and contend with the cares, business and trials of the world without ceasing to be as little children in their thoughts of God, and in their trustfulness respecting Christ and his promises! The religion of childhood is the true religion of the whole life, and the conditions of conversion in the young are the same as those which meet men later in their history. Learning, experience of the world, matured mental powers and a wider field of knowledge contribute nothing to the ability to apprehend Christ, and to believe with the heart unto righteousness. However old and wise and learned, the impenitent sinner must get back to the point of tenderness and humility, where the operations of the Holy Spirit were first consciously felt. The repentance will be more bitter, the awakening more terrible, the change more violent and demonstrative, but the humility and simplicity of the trust in Christ must be that of childhood.

The Christian life is a growth and a perfection, but its strength and ripeness are in this direction of likeness to a little child. It is the wisdom, the safety and the glory of the mature man to return to it, and to keep the heart in this atmosphere of gentleness and transparent love. The hours of birth into the earthly life, the spiritual and the heavenly are doubtless related. The birth of conversion is invested with the attributes of a simple and trusting spirit, and these same qualities are present and prominent when the soul struggles into the glory of its immortal inheritance. If there has been a certain hardness about the religious temper, and a certain finish and gloss of culture and learning in the opinions, these give way at the last to the meekness and single-mindedness of the first love. The spirit, weary and baffled with its efforts to attain to wisdom and understanding, comes back to the point where all true greatness resides.

The aged believer throws off the gathered stores of all the years of riches, honor and learning, and rejoices to get back to the mother's knee, and to close a long life of devotion with the infant prayers and songs with which it began. This unquestioning confidence, this pure gold of faith separated from the dross of skeptical doubts and intellectual pride, and this absence of all fear concerning the life to come, are as a balm to the parting soul. No elaborate liturgies are then desired, and no masterpieces of poetry and music are asked for. "A bairn's song" suits best the soul that is near to the melody of heaven, and the prayer which infant lips have uttered is the most fitting close to a life which now glides gently into a world of perfect and endless praise. Dying as a little child is, after all, only to die the death of the righteous.

Trip to the Alexandria District Meeting.

BY BISHOP KEENER.

MR. EDITOR: The ties of blood are very strong. Nothing less could have drawn me just at this time from my home-rest; for I had set apart a few weeks that were not to be broken in upon by any call, for the enjoyment of "Cherrywild," by the open sea, and the group of home-folks that constitute its richer charm. But despite this firm resolve I found myself, on last Wednesday at five o'clock P. M., in a "Concord coach"—a two-horse—which receives passengers at the month of Red river, and promises in the advertisement to place them in Alexandria "by seven next morning." From this coach we emerged at half-past two next day. Fare, $10—this for the benefit of those who may think of that trip. I was the only passenger during the night. The moon lay in soft light and shadow upon tree and field, upon bayou and forest, as we swept along after the style of a country coach, rattling up to the sleepy little post-offices along the route as if we carried the fortunes of the government and all the people in our mail-bags. The driver began his blast a good way off, and the clatter of the horses' feet and the wheels swelled the inspiration of his bugle. Deep in the night we passed by two colored churches under full headway. They were singing over and over and over, with much vigor, one of their own strains. It was evident that they had adopted fully the great truth that man should not live by bread alone; for it was midnight, and there was no abatement so long as we were in hearing.

The region through which we were passing is one of the richest in soil in the State. The lands are high above overflow, level, of reddish hue, and well cleared. It was well set in cotton; the crop about one-half eaten by the worm. The negroes are moving out of it, and white emigrants from Alabama, Mississippi and north Louisiana are moving in. Our church all along Bayou Boeuff and Hough-power is in a hopeful condition—houses being repaired and built, and good meetings not unfrequent. We have a body of ministers along this once irreligious, wealthy Red river delta who are equal to the difficulties attending upon the present state of its finances and revulsion in social affairs.

At Alexandria, at the "Ice House" one sees a very white spire piercing through the trees on the opposite bank of the river. This is the new church in Pineville, which was about to be dedicated and in which the District Conference was to be held. It is a house of thirty-six by sixty—well built, ceiled and seated in admirable style. The pulpit is built of cedar, which was caught floating down from the Red river raft. It is of deep red, and varnished only. The altar is very spacious. The house sits in a lot of four hundred by five hundred feet, that was presented by a worthy citizen of the parish.

The District Conference was very inspiring in the news which it gave of the healthy condition of our church all through and about and above the piny woods and creeks and bottom lands which lie to the north of Alexandria, in the direction of the Monroe and Shreveport railroad, and including the Grant and Colfax regions. Every circuit had a new church building, or built this year, and some had two or three. Over three hundred members had been added, and the collections were better than last year. But of all this the reports of the committees will speak accurately.

The last time I was in Alexandria was at the close of the war, with everything in a Philadelphia ox-wagon, awaiting a steamboat. We had rolled in some one hundred miles from Texas, and were on the way to New Orleans, without anything but our faces and our credit. The chimney-stacks all around told the story of Yankee invasion and prowess. The church and parsonage were in ashes—set on fire in sight of the pastor's wife and two smiling brethren of the New England Conference who had forced themselves upon her hospitality for a few weeks, paying board in water-crackers and dried apples. Since that time the church has laid fallow, with occasional attempts to rebuild, but without success. Now there is a very nice parsonage in Alexandria, just about finished, and it will not be long, I think, before a house fully as good as that in Pineville will be standing not far from it.

The meeting began on Friday. Audiences were by far the largest ever seen in that region. The house was filled with young and old to its utmost capacity. Mourners came up the first night, and sometimes thirty were up at once. On Saturday night and Sabbath night nearly all at the altar were converted. On Sabbath morning $453.50, the balance due on the church, was pleasantly contributed and the house was dedicated. On Sabbath afternoon a number of children were baptized, the sacrament administered, and Rev. J. W. Smith ordained deacon. Up to the time of my leaving some twenty-five had joined the church. The meeting was under full headway. The preacher in charge was the happiest person I saw there, excepting it might be his father.

The Plague at Shreveport.

MR. EDITOR: Two weeks ago today a terrible alarm spread throughout our city, in consequence of several deaths having occurred the day before from what was presumed to be yellow fever. That day, and for several days afterward, thousands of our citizens fled hurriedly away by every avenue of egress from the city. At first there seemed no sufficient cause for such panic, but day after day developed the fact that a "noisome pestilence" was preying upon the people; and last Wednesday it was officially declared that yellow fever had become epidemic among us. A Howard Association was formed immediately after the discovery of the presence of the pestilence, and a noble work of philanthropy has it been doing ever since. From the very first the mortality has been fearfully great; the recoveries are very few, while the deaths are very many. More than two hundred have already fallen victims to this malignant disease. The daily death-rate mounted up yesterday to thirty-five, which, considering the slenderness of the population here at present, has no parallel in the history of our epidemics. For a week all business has been suspended; the office and supply depots of the Howard Association are the only places where any people are seen to gather and where any visible activity prevails. The streets are all deserted, save by messengers hurrying from the sick-room to the apothecary shop, or physicians driving from place to place at the top of their speed, or hearses carrying the dead to the graveyard. In fact the whole city has been transformed from a busy commercial entrepot into a great hospital where, literally, everybody is either sick or waiting upon the sick. I cannot call to mind, as I write, a single household in town where there is not more or less of sickness. In some houses I have found the father and mother and all the children sick and scattered through the different rooms. It is common to find patients in every bed in the house, and they in all stages of the disease—some just taken, some tossing violently in the very heat of the fever, some delirious, and some heaving in the throes of death. Out of a family of six, I have followed five dead bodies to the grave. I have seen the wife die, not knowing that her husband had died a day or two before. I have buried children, the parents little knowing they were made childless, and I have buried parents, their children little knowing that since they had been taken sick they were become orphans. The sick and the dying and the dead I see frequently in one room, sometimes in the same bed. The mourners at one funeral are themselves the mourned in a day or two. And still the pestilence walketh in darkness and the destruction wasteth at noonday. Yesterday a prominent physician told me it was not only increasing but becoming more fatal—he was utterly discouraged with his own want of success in treating it. Just as a patient seems to be doing well, suddenly a change comes, and he is dying. It is no ordinary epidemic that is among us—it is not yellow fever simple—it is a malarial hybrid of the worst sort—it is a most desolating plague. It is fast decimating our business circles, our churches, our Sunday schools, our households. Of the clergy of the place, only the Episcopal minister and myself are left standing. Two Catholic priests have died; the Lutheran minister is dying; the others are all absent. Some physicians have died; others are on their beds; the remainder are breaking down with excess of labor. The arrival of the physicians and nurses from New Orleans was a most grateful relief. It was like the coming of a strong reinforcement to troops that were worn out with fatigue and fighting. These physicians and nurses are doing excellent service here. "God bless the Howards of New Orleans!" is the prayerful ejaculation upon all our lips.

My office of preacher is suspended—there are none to hear. The Lord himself is the preacher here now—he is preaching with the voice of judgment, and the people quake with exceeding great fear. I tried to keep up a morning prayer meeting, to make special supplication to God in behalf of the sick, at whose bedsides there is generally no opportunity to pray; but of the few who came at first, one by one has sickened, until we had to give up the effort. I now spend my time, from early morning until late in the evening, and sometimes until far in the night, attending funerals, or nursing the sick, or obtaining physicians and nurses and supplies for the indigent. My heart sickens at what I witness every day. Every night I feel prostrated from bodily exertion and nervous agitation; but every morning I read the ninety-first Psalm, and go forth renewed in strength and courage, trusting in the Lord. So far, thank God, the plague hath not come nigh my dwelling. J. W.

Summer Notes.

MR. EDITOR: The tide of travel is ebbing fast. Earlier than usual the tourist returns to his home to resume the ordinary occupations of life, and the great metropolis trembles with busy turmoil and feverish activity. In many respects this has been an eventful summer. Throughout the West a wail of lamentation has gone up from its plague-stricken people. The destroying angel has indeed been busy. Cholera—a most ridiculous misnomer for a disease whose very pathology is found in the deficiency of biliary secretion—has become the "swooping terror" of the West. Business has been checked, and the energies of the people have been paralyzed. Death, disease, devastation, have drained the South.

"When sorrows come they come not single spies,
But in battalions."

And yet, standing upon the great thoroughfares of travel, you would never imagine, from the throng of Southern tourists that join the great army of pleasure-seekers, that they belong to a people whose fortunes are shattered and whose future seems so dark.

The progress of science during the past year, as evinced by the proceedings of the associations, has indeed been great. There is a much greater tendency to conservatism among the leaders of scientific thought. I have heard less of the "flippant foppery of science"—as it has been termed by an eminent Methodist divine not a thousand miles from your city—than ever before. The amplitude of oscillation in scientific thought has, I admit, been very great; but when you consider the mighty and opposite forces that have kept it swinging, you cannot wonder that extremes have been reached on both sides of the momentous questions of the day. A great point has been gained by the church in introducing religion to the attention and consideration of scientific thinkers. There is more to be hoped for from direct opposition than from stolid indifference, and it is a remarkable fact that most of our eminent scientists have until very lately been of this class of indifferent Gallios who "care for none of these things." In the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, religious subjects are never allowed to be introduced. If a speaker, even in the heat of debate, trenches upon theological ground the rap of the gavel is heard at once. For extemporaneous discussion I think this is well, both for the interests of science and religion.

Another very interesting fact connected with the scientific developments of the past year is the great impetus which has been given to original investigation. Text-books have really become a drug in the market, and I think indeed that science has at last vindicated herself from the charge of jealous old Chaucer:

"For out of the old fields, as men saithe,
Cometh al this new corne fra yere to yere,
And out of old bookes, in good faithe,
Cometh al this new science that men lere."

I hope soon to see the day when every professor of science will be forced to sustain every statement made in the lecture-room by actual demonstration. Then we will have done with bombastic charlatanry and pretentious wheedling. Away with the dry, hard crusts of compilers and readers on which students have been gnawing so long, without satisfying their hunger after truth. As Bishop Kavanaugh said in his semi-centennial sermon before the Kentucky Conference: "Paper is a bad conductor anyhow." It will not do for the pulpit or the lecture-room, except on extraordinary occasions, and even then it helps the matter wonderfully to let on a little extemporaneous electricity.

Prof. Agassiz is succeeding finely with his island. He has lately been presented with a fine yacht for his collecting expeditions, and from present indications he will not only accomplish the end in view—the practical and thorough education of students in that department of science—but he will also gather together a collection from the ocean-world which will surpass any that has yet been made.

Harvard College is about to have a dangerous rival in the new Boston University. Isaac Rich has done much for Boston by this donation. I was out at Cambridge a few weeks ago, where I met Mr. H. O. Houghton, of Riverside Press renown. He is one of the trustees of the new University, and from what I gathered in conversation with him it will be perhaps the grandest educational scheme on the continent, especially in the direction of the arts and sciences.

Culture seems to be the guiding star of modern civilization. What the Romans called the humanities of life are now focalizing the thought of the world. While I would not do aught to stem the tide of intellectual progress which is now moving so grandly over the world, nevertheless I cannot but think that there are breakers ahead which may dash it into the vapor of fruitless speculation, or whirl it into the boiling, foaming Charybdis of a restless atheism. In the excellent work of Mr. J. C. Shairp, on Religion and Culture, I find this significant trumpet-blast:

In an age of great material prosperity like the present, when the comforts and conveniences of physical life have greatly increased, and science is every day increasing them, this world is apt to seem in itself a "satisfying abode," quite irrespective of any hope beyond. The spread of knowledge is doing so much to remove many of the surface ills of life that vague and exaggerated hopes are apt to be fostered of what it may yet do for the healing of the deepest disorders. To minds that have got themselves intoxicated with notions of material progress, this world, as I have said, is apt to seem enough, and man to appear a satisfying object to himself, quite apart from God. This tendency, I think, manifests itself, as in other things, so also in some theories of culture which have lately been propounded. In these we see the attempt made either to substitute for religion the last and highest results of knowledge and culture, or to bring religion down from its supremacy, and give the highest place to culture.

The church has already waked up on this point and is taking into her own hands the education of her children. This is as it should be. The outcropping of Cæsarism, as seen in the public free schools of the land, will never do. And in the higher universities the inevitable result of State interfereuce is the exclusion of religion. They cannot consist together.

Our church institutions must be sustained. How often does it happen, says Shairp, "that when the sons of a family, after having been for some sessions at college, have returned to their own homes, bursars or scholars or M. As., with honors, the family have felt that somehow they were changed, had lost their old simple natures, and for this loss college learning and distinctions seemed but a poor substitute." I regard the Vanderbilt University as a grand crystallization of the mind of the church on this point, and the energy and activity with which those in charge are prosecuting its construction and interests show that the church is not asleep.

Who can estimate the power of a sanctified culture? I heard a Bishop remark the other day, in reference to John Wesley's definition of the Witness of the Spirit: "Only a man of deep personal spiritual experience, combined with profound intellectual cultivation, could have produced it." This is what the church needs, and from the indications of the present we have every reason to hope for grand results. Let "knowledge come," but let not "wisdom linger."

Missionary Collections.

MR. EDITOR: We thank you for the timely reminders you give us in the ADVOCATE on the subject of missions. At the last session of the Mississippi Conference the Board of Missions divided the amount necessary to pay the allowances for domestic missions and the forty per cent. due the parent board among the several districts of the Conference. This was a new step, and we hope in the right direction. Will the presiding elders please note the amount to be raised in each district as published in the Minutes, and distribute it among the several charges that no district will fail to raise the amount assigned it?

We would also suggest that the preachers do not defer the collection for missions to their last appointments for the year, or confine it to any single call on any congregation. Perhaps not more than one-third or one-half the members will be present on any one occasion. The absentees will give nothing. Let us adopt some plan whereby all will give something for missions. The missionaries depend upon us for their salaries. Are we faithful stewards? We are trying a locked box at the church door.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
Sec. Bd. of Missions, Miss. Con.

KENTUCKY CONFERENCE.—The Kentucky Conference held its session in Lexington, September 3-9. Bishop McTyeire presided, and T. F. Vanmeter was re-elected secretary. Julius Wright, T. J. McIntyre, J. W. Sagerser, M. Scott, J. E. Clark, W. H. Quisenberry, J. F. Wight, were admitted on trial; T. F. Tallaferro, J. Reeves, C. Foster, P. H. Fishburn, into full connection; W. H. H. Ditzler, re-admitted; H. M. Linney, J. W. Mitchell, A. Minor, P. H. Fishburn, received by transfer. Seven supernumeraries; six superannuated, viz., I. Collard, J. C. Hardy, W. C. Atmore, J. Sandusky, W. Bickers, J. C. Crow. T. R. Malone, L. C. Danley, died. White members, 19,502—increase, 321; colored, 139—increase, 7; local preachers, 119—increase, 19. Infants baptized, 329—the year before, 314; adults, 1,083—the year before, 934. Sunday schools, 152—decrease, 6; teachers, 1,187—increase, 52; scholars, 8,041—increase, 316. Necessary for Conference claimants, $3,000; collected, $1,658. For missions, $2,762.93—last year, $2,563.07. The next session is to be at Mount Sterling.

The delegates to the General Conference are, ministers: Robert Hiner, Morris Evans, Charles W. Miller and J. W. Fitch; reserves, Thomas J. Dodd and Seneca X. Hall; lay: J. M. Tipton, William B. Winslow, W. M. Leathers and J. R. Moss; reserves, J. R. Beckley, Thomas W. Hardy. Bishop Kavanaugh delivered his semi-centennial discourse to an immense audience on Sunday night. The discourse was intensely interesting, and the Bishop will of course forward it to us for publication.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

DO NOT FAIL to read the advertisement of Hiwassee College in this number of the ADVOCATE. Our Nashville confrere speaks of the college in these terms of commendation:

Hiwassee College is prosperous. Among the students are four preachers—two from the local and two from the itinerant ranks. The boys generally are members of the church. A more quiet and orderly class perhaps never met in college walls. President Brunner's aim is to make the college worthy of its connection with the church as a Conference school, and at the same time to keep expenses so low that poor young men may enjoy all the advantages thereof. We hope he may realize his benevolent design.

IT WILL BE SEEN that Rev. John Wilkinson, pastor of our church at Shreveport, has kept at his post during the prevailing epidemic. In this we believe he has done right. May God shield him and his family. Our latest advices indicate a considerable decline in the mortality. Epidemics usually have a specific period in which to run, and this has passed the climax.

THE financial panic at New York at last accounts was abating. The excitement began with the failure of Jay Cooke & Co., and the storm was terrific for a few days. The details are so voluminous that we have found no space for them in our news column.

THE HEALTH of New Orleans is improving. The fatal cases of sporadic yellow fever were less by one-fourth the past week than the week previous, and the total mortality is small for the season of the year.

ONE WATCH set right will do to try many by; but, on the other hand, one that goes wrong may be the means of misleading a whole neighborhood. And the same may be said of an example.

Crystal Springs Camp Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: The camp meeting at Crystal Springs camp ground, Copiah county, Mississippi, commenced on Wednesday, the third instant, and continued for eight days. It was an occasion of more than ordinary interest on several accounts. There are many items I would like to give, but your space will not allow. We had thirty-three added to the church, and, as nearly as we could ascertain, forty-seven converted—a glorious season of refreshing to the church. We had the largest congregation perhaps ever assembled in this country. The best possible order prevailed. Ample provision was made for the accommodation of visitors, and everybody seemed to be pleased. God's name, we trust, was glorified, and in eternity a glorious harvest will be reaped from the good seed sown.

We were blessed during the meeting with the faithful, unctuous ministrations in the pulpit and in the altar of quite a number of our traveling and local ministers. Of the former, Bros. W. E. M. Linfield, our esteemed presiding elder; C. G. Andrews, president of Centenary College; Joshua T. Heard, C. B. Galloway, A. B. Stewart, E. R. Strickland, J. J. Clark, George F. Thompson, C. Chamberlin, E. H. Mounger, A. Day, F. W. Sharbrough, R. B. Downer, A. B. Nicholson, E. F. Mullins, R. J. Jones, Jr., W. E. Ballard, P. A. Johnston, E. Hicks and J. J. Smiley. Of the latter, Bros. J. W. McNeil, B. T. Pearson and William Pearce. I am sure that I never knew preachers to labor more zealously, and God owned the labors.

A feature of the camp meeting was a discourse upon Methodism, delivered on Monday to an immense congregation, by Bro. Linfield, at the request of several brethren. The "origin, work and fruits" of Methodism constituted the theme. Many of our own people, as well as hundreds of others, were enlightened by this discourse, and all were constrained to acknowledge that under God the Methodist Church has been the greatest moral power of the age.

The immediate results of our camp meeting may not have come up to the expectation of those who were interested for the success of this grand enterprise, yet we have much for which to "thank God and take courage." Last year we had only eight tents on the ground. This year we had twenty-eight. These tents are all comfortable and well built. We feel that the camp meeting is a fixed institution now. It is demonstrated beyond doubt that the self-supporting plan is the plan for these times.

May God's Spirit kindle afresh in the hearts of Methodists everywhere the spirit of enterprise, progress and consecration. H. J. HARRIS.

MARRIED.

HENRY—SORY.—By Rev. R. A. Sibley, at the residence of the bride's father, in Smith county, Mississippi, August 18, 1873, Mr. Patrick Henry, of Morton, Mississippi, to Miss Caledonia Sory.

WICKER—EPTINO.—By the same, at the residence of the bride's stepfather, Mr. William Penn, September 4, 1873, Mr. James A. Wicker to Miss S. Ida Epting, all of Smith county, Mississippi.

ROBERTS—BASS.—At the residence of the bride's father, on the third of September, 1873, by Rev. C. R. Godfrey, Mr. George A. Roberts and Miss Elizabeth Bass, both of Winn parish, Louisiana.

HARRINGTON—CLAUNCH.—At the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. C. R. Godfrey, on the fourth of September, 1873, Mr. William E. Harrington and Miss Roxanna Claunch, both of Caldwell parish, Louisiana.

HIGH—HOLLOWAY.—September 11, at the residence of the bride's mother, in Scott county, Mississippi, by Dr. T. S. West, Mr. P. E. High to Miss Josephine Holloway. (Mr. High placed in the minister's hand $2, requesting the ADVOCATE to be sent to his wife. That is the way to do business, Mr. Editor.) F.

FREEMAN—NOYES.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Natchez, Mississippi, September 4, 1873, by Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, Mr. James D. Freeman and Miss Christiana Noyes.

JOHNSON—CUMINO.—At the residence of the bride's father, Rev. H. F. Johnson, Whitworth College, September 17, 1873, by Rev. E. H. Mounger, Miss Lela E. Johnson and Mr. Charles Cuming, all of Brookhaven, Mississippi.

FAIL—GAINNES.—On the ninth of September, 1873, by the Rev. W. Ira Powers, at the residence of Mr. Miles Gainnes, the bride's father, Mr. Alfred Fail, Jr., to Miss A. A. Gainnes, all of Choctaw county, Alabama.

WHITNEY—TAYLOR.—On the fourteenth of September, 1873, by the Rev. James M. Wurrick, at the residence of Mr. H. F. Taylor, the bride's brother, Mr. S. C. Whitney to Miss P. C. Taylor, all of Choctaw county, Alabama.

ROUSSEAUX—THOMSON.—September 21, 1873, by Rev. H. P. Bowen, at the residence of the bride's mother, in the parish of St. Tammany, Miss Missouri A. Rousseaux to John Thomson. No cards.

OF ALL the choice condiments that belong to the well-furnished table, as chow-chow, piccalill, etc., none is so much prized as a standard relish for soups, fish and meats as the Halford Leicestershire Table Sauce, at once the best and cheapest of them all. se18 4t

WE SEE that Procter & Gamble's EXTRA OLIVE SOAP is becoming very popular in our city. Its quality, we know, is superior, and being nicely perfumed, we are not surprised that consumers prefer it, and that it has a large sale.

COLGATE & Co.'s new perfume for the handkerchief, "CASHMERE BOUQUET," will be appreciated by all who have enjoyed the delicate and peculiar fragrance of their toilet soap of the same name, which is so universally popular. js12 1y

JUST AS IT SHOULD BE.—Many of our correspondents are kind enough to keep their book and ADVOCATE business separate. They never write about the business of the two on the same sheet. Although they may inclose the two letters in the same envelop, they are dated, signed and addressed separately, and distinct from each other. This enables us to attend more promptly to each. When the business is mixed the book-keeper of one department must content himself to wait till it has passed through the other department—order filled, goods shipped and letter answered—before the business of his department can be attended to; and as the book-keepers and clerks of the two branches of business are separate, and file their letters separately, it must be apparent to every man of reflection that much perplexity results from writing about the business of both on the same page. When money is remitted it should be distinctly stated what for; and if for two or more purposes, how much for each. Write nothing in business letters except that which has reference to business.

SOARDS' CITY DIRECTORY FOR 1874. New Orleans will not in the future, as in the past, depend on a Chicago publisher for her annual City Directory. Mr. L. Soards, of this city, has made arrangements for the publication of the next New Orleans City Directory. Mr. Soards has already obtained a handsome patronage to his enterprise but as the expense of the work is considerable he is anxious to increase his subscription list to such an amount as will make sure at least the cost of the publication. With an experience of over eight years in publications of this nature, he pledges himself that no exertion or reasonable expense will be spared to make the City Directory for 1874 satisfactory to all. Being a citizen of New Orleans, he is better qualified to get up a directory than a stranger could possibly be. An inducement offered to subscribers by the new publisher, we are requested to say, is the fact that they will receive their copies as soon as issued from the press, and no sales to non-subscribers will be made till after the subscribers are supplied. Mr. Soards solicits an early and liberal response to his enterprise.

THE Billings & Spencer Company, of Hartford, Connecticut, are the sole manufacturers of Billings' patent solid-forged sewing machine shuttle, which they make to order to suit every variety of sewing machines. They also make a specialty of the manufacture of wrought iron and steel drop forgings, and machinery generally. At the Vienna Exposition they received the medal for progress. Descriptive circulars sent on application to any address.

SWAIM'S CELEBRATED PANACEA

HAS LONG ATTRACTED THE NOTICE of the most eminent physicians by its great efficacy in curing what were considered incurable cases of disease, where the patients have been almost destroyed by SCROFULA, etc., and Prof. Valentine Mott, of the New York University, Profs. Gibson, Dewees and Chapman, of Philadelphia, and many other physicians of celebrity, gave, over their own signatures, letters recommending it and certifying to its great merits. It has been occasionally advertised, and thousands of families throughout the United States recommend and use it. The Laboratory is under the direction of Dr. FRANKLIN STEWART, who has devoted his attention and skill in its careful preparation during the past twenty-five years, and not a bottle put up that is not worth many times its cost to the patient. It is perfectly safe for the most diseased and debilitated, and in all cases where the Blood is not pure it should be used freely.

Prepared only at SWAIM'S LABORATORY, 112 South Seventh street, below Chestnut, Philadelphia.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Albuminoids | 12.45 | Sugar | 13.06 |
| Gum | 5.21 | Starch | 55.62 |
| Fat | 8.59 | Cellulose | 2.95 |
| | | Ash | 2.12 |

It will be seen that the Albuminoids (albumen, gluten, casein, etc.) constitute nearly thirteen per cent. "These," says Youmans, "are the flesh-forming principles—the true elements of nutrition."

It is particularly valuable to all requiring a highly nutritious and at the same time easily assimilated diet, and hence is used as an article of daily consumption in climates which occasion rapid waste of the system. "Almost all Asiatics, Africans and (aboriginal) Americans use it as their chief nourishment."—Louis Figuier, in his work on the Vegetable World.

In Hermetically-sealed YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN all the nutritive qualities of the grain are preserved. The grain is cut from the ear and placed in tin canisters with the rich juices (or milk) which exude from it, and is then sealed air-tight and the canister subjected to steam heat, which coagulates the albumen. In this condition it will keep for years. It will be seen by this that all the nutritive properties of the grain are preserved, and the most nourishing article of food in the domain of nature placed within the reach of all.

RECEIVED THE AWARD OF THE Paris Exposition, American Institute, and Great Exposition of Cordova.

MANUALS OF MATHEMATICAL INSTRUMENTS, MICROSCOP

The Child's Corner.

THE THREE GRACES.

A MADRIGAL.

Tell me, little trembling rose,
Those whose sweet, coy graces show
Where her fairer charms are plac'd
Modestly tell those parents true—
What your name and where your place?
Whence your story or your theme?

Tell me, fairest Arabian myrtle,
Those whose pleasure is secretion,
Like the wildwood flowers at night
Chosen a cheerful, cozy domicile—
What your name and where your pair?
Why that trouble in your mind?

Tell me, brilliant, pure and clear,
Loath to leave thy parent sphere—
Fearful though where'er thy chariot points
Beauty in poverty and toil—
What thy name, thy prevailing charm?
Who could do thee any harm?

Blush am I; but by and by,
If I live they'll call me nigh.
I'm a rose, but if I grow,
Fear they'll name me for my woe.
Call me Fear, dear, if I come
Thee to pay—if I grow
Wanton, vanity above.
I was Blush (rose); I was Sigh
I'll be Mystery by and by;
But our mother's name is Love!

Attitude—Posture.

The two words at the head of this article mean the same thing. Attitude means posture, and posture means attitude. They both mean position, or manner of standing, sitting, lying, walking, etc. Here, for instance, is Henry, who stands, sits and walks erect. People say his attitude is fine. They look at him, and never tire in his praise. He is a model boy in this respect. But Charles, when he stands, sprawls his feet apart, turns his toes in, hangs his head and arms in a very unhandsome way; when he sits his feet are sprawled out in everybody's way, and his body curves about as if it was half-brother to some snake. People say: "What an awkward fellow!" What is the trouble? His posture—his attitude is a bad one. He does not know where to put the different parts of his body, so they shall be in the most natural position and look the best. Postures are of two kinds—natural and artificial. The natural ones are those that most concern us. They are those which we use every day and all the while. Artificial ones are only used occasionally, as in dancing, boxing, fencing, acting, etc.

In standing the true posture is the upright one, with the heels together, or nearly so, and the toes turned out at an angle that is easy and gives a strong base to support the body. The arms, when not in use, should hang evenly by the side, or be folded on the chest. In sitting the spine should be kept straight, and the hips and knees only bent. Suppose you try standing up in that way I tell you, and, to be sure you are upright, stand with your heels against the wall of the room. Now if your hips, shoulders and the back of your head touch the wall you are upright. Maintain this attitude, and go before a large glass and see how straight you are. Try and get into the habit of maintaining this posture when standing, walking or running; and after awhile it will be easy for you. Now sit down in your chair as you generally do, sprawled out over half the room, so nobody can get by you without falling over your feet and legs, and ask your mother how she would like to have you always take up so much room in the world. Then try sitting upright, and see how she likes that. Try both ways before the glass, and see if you don't like the upright position best. Some people think it a sign of weakness to look much in the glass; but I should like to have one side of every room, from the floor half way to the top, a large mirror, so people could see their own behavior and attitude in it all the time. I believe they would be ashamed of themselves whenever they saw anything wrong, and learn to do better. One reason why many people are so mean is because they never see themselves. They don't know how badly they do act. A very large looking-glass in their room would help them a good deal. Fancy, for instance, a large boy or girl quarrelling right before a large mirror. They would laugh themselves into good nature at once, or else go off and hide for shame. Then, again, if people could always see themselves in a large mirror they would like their good deportment so well that they would want to repeat it constantly. Sickly, deformed and ugly people never want to look at themselves in the glass.

Uprightness of body is not the only thing to look after. There is an uprightness of mind, that thinks and acts correctly, that does what is right, tells the truth, and is kind and tender of the feelings of others. There is a verse in the Bible which every boy and girl should remember and practice, and which reads: "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

Not only are upright people handsome, but they are healthier than the crooked. They live longer and can do more work, and be happier. Learn, then, in all your studies, labors and sports to maintain, as nearly as possible, the upright position of body.—Herald of Health.

Run for the Lily-Pads.

"How many of you boys ever went fishing?" asked the minister.

Instantly fifty boys' eyes sparkled, and fifty boys' hands were raised.

"How many of you ever fished for pickerel?" continued the minister.

Up came most of the hands again—little hands that, as the minister knew, had been nearly every one of them guilty of taking what was not theirs; for they belonged to boys who were in a reform school, and most of them for stealing, some little and some much.

"Did you ever have any trouble in getting the pickerel to bite?" asked the minister.

"Yes, sir?" cried the boys.

"So have I," he replied. "I have fished for pickerel a great many times; often in a certain pond behind my father's house, which was very clear and smooth, and covered with water-lillies. These lilies they were beautiful, lying with their pure, white petals and golden centers on their floating leaves; but I did not like to see them, for this reason: When I trailed my line with a fat little frog or a nice little minnow on it, if I saw a pickerel swim round and round, looking at it, and working his mouth and gills, and I knew that pretty soon he would jump up and snap at the tempting bait, and then I had him. If he once began to look I was sure of him; but if, instead, he turned and swam off under the lily-pad, as many a fish did, I knew I had lost him, and there was no use skimming and dancing my line to that fish any longer.

"Now, boys, I want to tell you, when you see something you wish for which is not yours, or when you feel like saying a bad word, or going where you know you ought not to go, do not stop to look at it or think about it, but just run for the lily-pads."—Apples of Gold.

ONLY A GRAIN OF SAND.—A man who for years carried an old and cherished watch about him, one day called on its maker and told him it was no longer useful, for it would no longer keep time correctly.

"Let me examine it," said the maker, and, taking a powerful glass, he looked carefully and steadily into the works, till he spied just one grain of sand.

"I have it," he said; "I can get over your difficulty."

About this moment, by some powerful but unseen power, the little grain, suspecting what was coming, cried out:

"Let me alone; I am but a little thing, and take up so little room I cannot possibly injure the watch. Twenty or thirty of us might do harm, but I cannot, so let me alone."

The watchmaker replied: "You must come out, for you spoil my works, and all the more so that you are so small, and but few people can see you."

Thus it is in the home. One cross feeling, one hasty word, one angry look may mar and hinder the running of the perfect machinery. We may go along, and with God set again the timepiece; but if we do not trust in his keeping power, how soon the old enemy is on hand to thrust in again the little grain which will impair the works and hinder the wheels, and present a false face to all who are around! Let us then look to our Savior as one who is able to "keep us from falling," and trust him as the God who will deliver in the temptation, and keep the home watch running perfectly.

A BRIGHT little girl of four summers (Ella B.,) in trying to console her aunt, who had lost all her little children, came up, caressed her and said: "Auntie, ain't you mighty lonesome?" "Yes, darling." "You have no little children now, auntie, to love you." "No, darling." "Don't you reckon, auntie, God wanted some little children to go live with him?" "Yes, darling, he wants little children with him to love and praise him." "Well, auntie, you and uncle will die and go to God, and then you'll see little Jodie and Sallie and Albert, and won't you be glad?" "Yes, darling, we will live with them forever and be happy." "Well, Aunt Mattie, I want to go with you: and won't you dress me in white and carry me?" "Yes, Ella, if you will be a good and obedient little girl you shall go too."

Farm, Garden and Household.

The Narragansett Turkey.

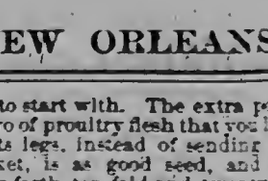
This is one of the largest and hardiest of all the breeds of turkeys. It is raised in the greatest perfection in southeastern Connecticut and Rhode Island, a region famous for its fine poultry. Turkeys do well along the seaboard, and almost every farmer remote from the villages has his flock. It is not uncommon to find flocks of from one to two hundred birds, the product of about a dozen hens, under the skillful management of a poultry woman or boy. Of course they do some damage to grain; but this evil is counterbalanced by the enormous destruction of insects secured. From June to September they subsist mainly upon grasshoppers, crickets and other insects, ranging for the most part in the pastures and woodlands. They are fattened in October and November, and it is not uncommon for a lot of early chicks to reach the average weight of fourteen pounds, dressed, at Thanksgiving or Christmas. The common run of turkeys sent to the New York market do not average more than eight or nine pounds.

The Narragansett is a very large, healthy bird, and has been bred for size for many generations. Most of the birds sold in the Boston and Providence markets under the name of Rhode Island turkeys, or Extra No. 1, are of this breed. The farmers are careful in the selection of their breeding stock, taking young gobblers that will weigh from twenty-two to twenty-eight pounds, and hens that will weigh from twelve to sixteen. Where the birds are kept over, gobblers will sometimes dress thirty-two to thirty-four pounds. For making poultry for market the Narragansetts have no superior. The prevailing colors are white and black, with a large patch of white upon the wing bow, giving the general impression of a gray bird. They are not uniform in the shading, but with sufficient painstaking could be bred to a feather.—W. Cliff, in the Poultry World.

SAVE THE BEST FOWLS FOR BREEDING.—It is the worst possible policy to kill all the best and handsomest fowls, and save only the mean and scraggy ones to breed from. This is precisely the way to run out your stock; for like tends to breed like, and the result is that, by continually taking away the best birds, and using the eggs of the poorest, your flock will grow poorer and poorer every succeeding year.

It would seem as though this was too plain to be insisted upon, but, in fact, "line upon line" is needed. It is the crying want of the poultry upon the farms the country through, this careful and intelligent selection of the best for breeding.



Nothing is lost by a little self-denial to start with. The extra pound or two of proultry flesh that you leave on its legs, instead of sending it to market, is as good seed, and will bring forth ten-fold and twenty-fold in your future broods. Save your best stock for breeding.—Poultry World.

DESTROYING ANTS.—A French agriculturist, after trying every method known to him for the destruction of ants infesting his fruit-trees succeeded in effecting his purpose in the most complete manner by placing a mixture of arsenic and sweetened water in a saucer at the foot of the trees. For the larger species he made use of honey, instead of sugar and in a few days' time he claims to have exterminated them completely.

Another Remedy.—Fill small vials two-thirds with water, and add sweet oil to float on the water to within half an inch of the top. Plunge these upright in the ground, leaving only half an inch standing out, near the nest or runs of the ants. The ants will come for a sip and go home to die. No insect can exist with oil stopping up its spiracles or breathing pores.

MACHINERY, TIES, ETC.

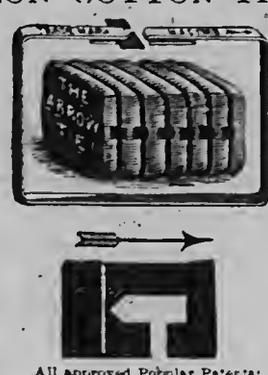
THE DUBOIS FLANGE COTTON GIN.

By the Flange the Cotton is kept in contact with the teeth on each side, until the fiber is taken from the seed, without allowing them to be taken up by the return motion of the roll, as in other Gins.

The Flange prevents nails, stems, sticks and hard substances from being cut, consequently making a better sample out of roughly-picked cotton than other Gins.



We have sold more from this point than any agency of any other Gin for the crop of 1872-73 consequently we can furnish more and better references, and they are warranted to come up to all that is said of them.

We keep constantly on hand al sizes, from 40 to 90-SAW STANDS, left or right. Price $5 per saw.

EAST MISSISSIPPI
FEMALE COLLEGE.
A Chartered Literary Institution, under the Auspices of the M. E. Church South.
Located at Meridian, Mississippi.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The annual term of this [illegible] opens on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873. It will be divided into [illegible] sessions of twenty weeks each. The [illegible] is designed for the training of the young women of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and is controlled and supervised by the Presidency. The Board of Trustees claim to have made ample arrangements for the Literary, Scientific, Ornamental and Musical departments of the college, by the selection of competent and experienced teachers for the various departments, and that facilities for thorough and liberal education in the East Mississippi Female College may be more than be equaled by the best of other similar institutions. Our college is recommended to public consideration with confidence and with confidence as a successful means of aid to parents in the training and culture of their daughters, and it is appreciated that young ladies who now place their names upon the roll of this institution will be pleased in coming years by recurring in their minds to have a living and blessed memory of educational enterprise.

BOARDING.

Boarders engaged for the whole term will be charged [illegible], two of which must be paid at the opening of each session.

Those engaged for one session will be charged [illegible], three of which must be paid at the beginning of the session. Those engaged for a quarter or an indefinite time will be charged $12 per month to be paid quarterly in advance.

Extra charges will be made for washing and lights. Each boarder must furnish two sheets, one blanket and two towels. Especial printed regulations will be given each boarder, giving her directions and restrictions respecting her family and social relations and practices.

In all cases of expulsion, resulting in the removal of boarders from the college, advance payments will be promptly refunded. No pains will be spared to render each boarder comfortable and happy. Their treatment will be parental and affectionate. Strict propriety and refinement will be continually required to bear upon all their habits.

Our college is in its infancy. The salary that has been guaranteed by the Mississippi Conference as shown a growing demand for such an institution in east Mississippi. In the bosom of the [illegible] and Conference, Meridian is the proper place for the institution. The location is healthy, access is easy society is of the right [illegible], and almost every consideration strengthens the judgment of the board and Conference in locating the college at this place. Since this institution is under the supervision of the church there is no hesitancy in urging earnest cooperation on the part of the ministry in the surrounding country. Our appeal is earnest. We propose to place the standard of instruction high, that they who graduate here may prove themselves worthy of honors conferred, and thereby honor themselves, the college and the world. Address J. W. ADKINSON, aul4 3m President.

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE.
For Young Ladies.
ABINGDON, VIRGINIA.

The next session begins SEPTEMBER 11, and continues forty weeks consecutively. Comfortable accommodations for ONE HUNDRED boarding pupils. The location is in the midst of the most charming mountain scenery. The grounds comprise eleven acres, elegantly shaded, ornamented and provided with extensive walks.

The record of the health of pupils for thirteen years past demonstrates the fact that

NO LOCALITY IS MORE HEALTHFUL.

The Faculty is composed of six gentlemen and four ladies, besides matrons, etc.

The standard of scholarship is high, and the course embraces Ancient and Modern Languages, the Sciences, Mathematics, Literature, History, Instrumental and Vocal Music, Oil Painting, Drawing and Embroidery.

Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars, per session of forty weeks, will meet expense of board, fuel, washing, lights, servants' attendance and tuition in all branches necessary to full graduation.

PROF. F. H. SMITH, A. M., LL. D., University of Virginia, who has had daughters in the institution as pupils for two years, says: "Martha Washington College possesses a rare combination of excellencies. From experience, as well as preposession, I cordially and confidently recommend it to parents who are seeking the best advantages for their daughters."

We refer by authority to the Faculty of the University of Virginia, of Emory and Henry College, Prof. L. C. Garland, LL. D., University of Mississippi, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and many others.

For catalogue or particulars apply to Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, D. D., Secretary, or to

CRAB ORCHARD SPRINGS COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES.
CRAB ORCHARD SPRINGS, KENTUCKY.
Messrs. Shelby & Thorel, Proprietors.
REV. JOHN F. TARBANT, A. M., AND
MRS. S. F. H. TARBANT, PRINCIPALS.
With a full Corps of Assistants.

Session Begins September 15, 1873,
AND ENDS JUNE 17, 1874.

To Southern Methodist parents I would call attention to this institution. Convinced that here the southern people would find every inducement in the way of elegance, comfort, health and economy in the education of their daughters, my wife and myself readily consented, at the solicitation of the proprietors, to assume its control. We are southern people, and had been teaching in Alabama and Mississippi eighteen years previous to our removal to Kentucky. We have over a thousand pupils in the South. Desiring a favorable location and opportunities for doing good, we readily consented to removal. Send your daughters to Crab Orchard Springs. Our college building is the finest south of the Ohio river. Our equipments excel those of any other in the Gulf States. It is lighted with gas, will be warmed by steam, with water pipes running through the entire building, has numerous bath-rooms, and every other convenience of a modern city hotel. The building has been newly equipped—every room elegantly carpeted and furnished. Only two pupils in a room.

Full board and tuition, only $250 per scholastic year, without any extra charges.

We challenge the strictest inquiry. Send for pamphlets, containing every information. We are Methodists, and wish to obtain the patronage of our Methodist brethren. Address

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

THE NEXT TERM OF THIS VENERABLE INSTITUTION OPENS ON T[illegible]
FIRST MONDAY IN OCTOBER, 1873.

FACULTY.

REV. C. G. ANDREWS, A. M., President, and Professor of Mental and Moral Science, Political Economy and International Law.
REV. A. R. HOLCOMBE, A. M., Professor of Mathematics and Adjunct Professor of Natural Science.
G. H. WILEY, A. M., Professor of Ancient and Modern Languages.
T. L. JONES, M. D., Professor of Natural Science.
REV. R. D. NORTHWORTHY, A. M., Principal of the Preparatory Department.

CHARGES.

Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in College.....
Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in Preparatory Department.....
Contingent expenses.....

A matriculation fee of $5 must be paid on entering any regular college class. One-half the charges must be paid when the student enters, the other half on the beginning of the second term, March [illegible].

BOARD.

Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel, can be had in the best families for $20 per month. Day-boarding with the same families, $10 per month. Rooms provided in the dormitories free of charge. Board to be paid in advance at least one month.

LOCATION.

This institution is located in the lovely village of Jackson, about two miles from Bayou Sara, a station on the [illegible] road, and about [illegible] from the Mississippi river. The village is remarkable for its beautiful shade trees and for its healthy atmosphere, its pure water, its unrivaled health fulness, and its cultivated and refined society.

WHEN FOUNDED.

The college was established by the state of Louisiana in 1825, and ceded to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1845.

ALUMNI.

Its Alumni number two hundred and three, and they are to be found in the most honorable and useful stations in the land.

APPARATUS AND CABINET.

The college possesses a valuable set of Philosophical, Astronomical and Chemical Apparatus, also a well-selected Mineralogical and Geological Cabinet. The apparatus includes a Theodolite, Transit, Compass, Chronometer, Atwood's Machine, Whirling Table, Electrical Machine, Air Pump, various combinations of the Mechanical Powers, Batteries, Chemical Tests, etc., sufficient for a thorough and extended course of observations and experiments. Steps have been taken by the Board of Trustees to put these in thorough repair.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

There are two regular Literary Societies connected with the Institution. These are of great use to young men acquiring a liberal education—improving them in the art of public speaking, making them in some degree familiar with the proceedings of deliberative bodies, and in cultivating systematic business habits. Each Society has a convenient hall and a well-selected Library—about one thousand six hundred volumes each, which, added to the College Library of two thousand volumes, make a total of five thousand volumes in the college.

BUILDINGS.

The Trustees are determined to continue the repairs on the buildings till completed. The principal Center Building is a noble specimen of architectural beauty and adaptation to the purposes of its erection. The wings, built of solid brick, present each a front of two hundred feet, with upper and lower galleries the entire length, supported by Tuscan columns, and with the center making in the perspective a continuous front of seven hundred feet.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

In the Preparatory Department students are fitted for regular college classes, or may obtain a thorough English or commercial education.

ITS FACULTY are men of experience and success in teaching.

A CONVERSATION FAN.

No family circle is complete in social diversions and entertainments without one, and in order to enjoy the pastime it should be distinctly understood that the answers do not numerically follow the questions, but to spice the amusement an answer must be looked for that will afford a fitting response to an interrogatory.

Where a direct answer is not to be found to a direct question, it will be discovered that it furnishes the sequel to a sustained conversation, so that couples can carry on a tete-a-tete, which they may not wish to make audible, by silent indications of numbers.

THE CONVERSATION FAN

New Orleans Markets.

From the New Orleans Price Current.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the nineteenth instant:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Louisiana and Mississippi | bales | 4,870 |
| Lake | " | 6 |
| Mobile | " | 630 |
| Total | | 5,506 |

On Saturday the market opened with a very limited demand, and continued extremely dull throughout the day, but, as one buyer came forward and took 300 bales, the business summed up 600 bales, while under the heavy decline at New York (1⅛@1⅛c.) factors were compelled to make some concessions, showing a partial decline of ⅛c. strict good ordinary closing at 17⅛@17⅝c., low middling at 15¾c., and strict low middling at 15⅞@16c. Low middling sold at 15⅜c., and middling at 16⅛. 15⅞@16c., the last for high style. On Monday the exchange movement being suspended, and New York ruling still lower buyers refused to go on unless at reduced rates, in which they were sustained by the very low prices ruling at Mobile and Memphis. The sales, which summed up 550 bales, were consequently at a decline of ⅛@⅜c., strict good ordinary closing at 16⅝@16¾c., low middling at 17⅛@17⅜c., strict low middling at 17c., and middling at 16¾c. On Tuesday, with a better supply, and factors evincing a disposition to meet the demand freely at additional concessions, buyers came forward with more spirit and took 1,400 bales at prices showing an irregular decline of ⅛@⅜c., strict ordinary sold (early) at 14⅜c., good ordinary, high style (early,) at 16⅜c., strict good ordinary (early) at 17@17⅛c., low middling (later) at 17, 17⅛@17⅜c., low middling to strict low middling at 17c., strict low middling at 17⅜c., strict low middling to middling at 17⅝@17¾c., and strict middling at 18⅛@18⅜c. The market exhibited a firmer tone early in the day, but subsequently assumed a downward tendency.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 2,360 bales, against 2,799 for the corresponding time last week and 1,150 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 12,499 bales, against 32,212 bales to the same date last year, and the decrease in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 47,581 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 5,423 to Great Britain, and a decrease of 3,581 to France. We quote:

| | | |
| Strict ordinary | — | @ 14⅞ |

SUGAR.—The receipts are trifling, and the stock on hand is small, but the demand is only in a job way. Yellow clarified is scarce, and wanted by grocers. The sales are confined to retail lots, to dealers and grocers, at 9¾c. for fair, 10@10¼c. for good fair, and 10¾c. for fully fair.

MOLASSES.—There is none coming in from plantation, and no demand for the stock in the shade. On Saturday two kegs sorghum sirup, new, came in from New Iberia, by Morgan's Louisiana and Texas railroad, and sold at 60c. ₱ gallon.

CORN—Is in light supply and moderate demand, at previous prices. On Saturday 450 sacks sold at 72c. for yellow mixed, and 75c. for yellow, and on Monday 900 sacks sold at 73c. for white, and 75c. for yellow. On Tuesday 2,350 sacks sold at 71c. for white mixed, 72@73c. for white, and 73c. for yellow mixed and yellow.

OATS—Are in light supply and fair demand. Under the influence of Western advices prices have advanced. On Saturday 1,000 sacks sold at 44c. for ordinary, and 50@52c. for choice Galena. On Monday 800 sacks sold at 45@48c. for St. Louis, 50c. for choice, and 52@53c. for choice Galena. On Tuesday 950 sacks sold at 48@51c. for St. Louis, and 52@53c. for choice.

BRAN.—Prices are unchanged, with a light supply and moderate demand. On Saturday and Monday 200 sacks sold at 85@87½c. ₱ 100 lbs. On Tuesday only 100 sacks sold at 87½c. ₱ 100 lbs.

PORK.—The market has again continued dull and depressed, with a good stock on hand. There is no demand on account of quarantine in our neighboring towns, and mess is quoted nominally at $17 ₱ bbl. On Tuesday a lot of 50 bbls. sold at $17.25 ₱ bbl. It is retailing at $17.50 ₱ bbl.

BACON.—Shoulders are scarce, but sides are abundant, and quotations are useless. On Saturday 30 casks clear rib sides sold, in two lots, at 10c. ₱ lb. Shoulders are held nominally at 9½c., clear rib sides .6c., clear sides 10¾c. ₱ lb.

MONETARY.

Gold opened on Tuesday at 111¾@112⅛ (against 112 at New York,) and closed at 111¾@112⅛ (against 112⅛ at New York.)

We have not heard of a sale of silver. Notwithstanding the decline in gold, American half dollars are still quoted at 106@108. Mexican dollars are quoted at 96 gold for both new and old.

Special Notices.

A CAMP MEETING will be held at Salem camp ground, Jackson county, Mississippi, commencing on Thursday evening before the third Sunday in October. Ministers are earnestly requested to attend. P. H. NAPIER, P. C.

THERE will be a camp meeting at Siloam, on the Louisville circuit, five miles north of Louisville and eighteen miles south of Vernon, commencing on Friday before the first Sunday in October. Ministers of the gospel are especially invited. PHILIP ALLEN, P. C.

A CAMP MEETING will be held on the Paulding circuit, Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, twelve miles west of Enterprise, near the Enterprise and Mount Rose road, beginning on Thursday night before and embracing the first Sabbath in October. It will be on the same plan as last year—self-sustaining. All within ten or fifteen miles of the camp ground must come prepared to take care of themselves. All ministers are invited to attend. There will be conveyance for ministers at Enterprise on Friday.

J. H. HOLLAND, P. C.

A CAMP MEETING will commence at Salem, Greene county, Alabama, nine miles above Eutaw, on Thursday night before the second Sabbath in October. Ministers and their families are respectfully invited. It is expected that others will come with their covered wagons or cloth tents, to take care of themselves and stock.

J. W. MCCANN, P. C.

THE New Hope and Pleasant Ridge camp meeting, for DeKalb circuit, Mississippi Conference, will begin on Friday night before the second Sunday in October next. Ministerial help is solicited from the adjoining works. Conveyance to the camp ground from Lauderdale station, Mobile and Ohio railroad, will be furnished on Friday to ministers coming by railroad.

D. G. W. ELLIS, Pastor.

CAMP MEETING.—The camp meeting on Big Creek, fifteen miles north of Alexandria, begins on Wednesday, October 1. Preachers are invited, and will be provided for. Others must come prepared to take care of themselves. Corn will be on hand at a moderate price.

F. WHITE, P. E.
J. F. WYNN.

CAMP MEETING.—Change of Time. The time of holding the camp meeting at China Grove, Dale county, Alabama, has been changed from Friday night before the second Sabbath in September to Friday night before the first Sabbath in October next. The friends of the camp meeting and ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South are cordially and earnestly invited to attend.

A. DOWLING, P. C.

THERE will be a camp meeting on the Sparta and Ringgold circuit, five and a half miles east of Sparta, on the Vernon road, commencing on Thursday before the first Sunday in October next. We expect a good many tents, and hope to entertain the people well. We invite both preachers and people to attend.

DAVID A. BODDIE, P. C.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 25.—There is no abatement of the epidemic. That noticed yesterday was more apparent than real. To-day the fever broke out with renewed fury, and attacked a large number of citizens.

Drs. Choppin, Davidson and Bruns pronounce the disease genuine yellow fever, and it is to be presumed that this will settle the question even with the most pertinacious doubters.

Many of those attacked have had the fever during preceding epidemics, either here or elsewhere. Some had lived here many years, and many were native-born. In truth, those supposed to be thoroughly acclimated have been nearly as freely stricken as the new-comers.

In some cases the fever sets in in a most malignant type from the start, as if determined to kill at once. With such cases medical skill and good nursing alike fail to save the patients. It is possible that in these cases the persons attacked had been drinking excessively, or that their systems had been otherwise impaired.

A remarkable peculiarity of the situation is that none of the convalescents, or at least very few of them, have fully recovered their health. In fact no one that has had the disease feels well.

There exists much and most distressing destitution in our midst. Many widows and orphans are left without protectors.

Total interments from the disease to date, within the city limits, four hundred and eleven, and about twenty-five outside but near the city.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—A statement is made of the assets and liabilities of Jay Cooke & Co., of Philadelphia, New York and Washington, placing their liabilities at slightly over $7,900,000; their assets, including bills receivable, bank stock, bonds, real estate and loans to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, show a balance of nearly $16,000,000, half of which appears to be Northern Pacific railroad stock.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The bust of John Howard Payne was unveiled at Prospect park to-day. The ceremonies closed with "Home, Sweet Home," by the school children, a very touching tribute.

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 27.—The State fair has been postponed to November 10.

Governor Powers concurs in the opinion of the Attorney General that there should be an election this fall.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Sept. 27.—The Board of Health reports one fever death. No new cases.

CAIRO, ILL., Sept. 28.—Considerable uneasiness is manifested at the prevalence in this city of what has hitherto been denominated a congestive form of bilious fever, but which some physicians now pronounce yellow fever modified by the Northern climate. Only six or eight cases have occurred, and these are confined to those whose business kept them on or near the river. There is more sickness here than this city has experienced for years, and in a majority of cases the symptoms are similar and resemble those of yellow fever in a mild form.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 28.—Twenty-two yellow fever interments yesterday. Total for the week, ninety-eight, against one hundred and twenty-eight the week previous.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Jay Gould thinks the panic is over.

Noon.—Affairs more settled. Considerable doing in stocks; Western Union, 63 asked.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Sept. 29.—In consequence of the money crisis in the various cities, the University of Virginia has made arrangements for credits. All the students are temporarily embarrassed by the same.

BRYAN, TEXAS, Sept. 29.—Sixteen new cases were reported in Calvert this morning—in all, twenty-six.

The doctors pronounce it yellow fever, but experienced nurses assert it is not.

Hearne has emptied itself; Bryan is following in its wake. Wagons command high rates. Most families are going to the country.

It is impossible to form a conjecture of the situation at this time. A perfect stampede has commenced from all places contiguous to Calvert. No trains or mails either way.

SHREVEPORT, Sept. 30.—There is no marked change in the epidemic during the last twenty-four hours.

New cases may have been more numerous than the day before, on account of the unfavorable change in the weather, but the type is less virulent than some days ago.

Most of the cases during the last few days are doing well, particularly the promluent citizens.

Lieutenant E. A. Woodruff, United States Engineers, is reported worse. Charles Horn, engineer of the ice works, is reported very bad. M. A. Mansfield, merchant on the other side of the river, died on Monday night. Rev. W. E. Paxton, Baptist minister, was taken down to-day. No other promluent citizens are reported down to-day.

The colored people are getting their share of epidemic. It is now thought not to be near as fatal as it has been with the whites.

There is a good deal of poverty and suffering among them, as well as among the poorer classes of whites. The Howards afford relief alike to all.

Interments to-day, seven, of which five were from yellow fever.

MARSHALL, Sept. 30.—But three residents of Marshall have been attacked with yellow fever; two died last week; the other is recovering.

It is believed all these parties were either exposed in Shreveport or elsewhere. No cases originated in Marshall. The panic is useless and foolish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The impression prevails that all the leading houses will pull through.

Evening.—Stock market still without improvement, and closes firm. Western Union Telegraph quoted at 66½, Rock Island 91, Lake Shore 74¼, Union Pacific 19⅞, Pacific Mail 33.

It is stated on the authority of a clearing house official that legal tenders were received from the interior of the country to-day in considerable amounts.

Money is in motion. The events of the day, it is hoped, will unlock currency. Greenbacks were at 2 and 3 per cent. premium early in the day, but closed nominal. Money closed at 8, with ½ commission. Sterling—a big business done—6¾. Governments dull; nothing doing. State bonds quiet.

GALVESTON, Sept. 30.—To the Associated Press of New Orleans:—After a conference held with Dr. Peete and the medical profession of Galveston, Dr. Peete has concluded to raise the quarantine against New Orleans, to take effect to-morrow.

DR. AUSTIN.
DR. SCOTT.
DR. SMITH.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—The Financier says that the business of the Atlantic cable has largely increased since the panic in New York. The receipts are now estimated at $27,000 daily.

A fire in the Athenæum library at Manchester destroyed twenty thousand volumes.

BAYONNE, Sept. 26.—The Carlists in Spain are disheartened. They are unable to move, for want of money, artillery and ammunition.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—The King of Italy had a long private conference with Prince Bismarck to-day. He subsequently took leave of the Emperor and imperial family and departed on his return home.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Salustino Olozaga, the well-known Spanish statesman, is dead.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The members of the Right assert that the Assembly will declare in favor of the restoration of the monarchy before November.

Jean Chaconnae, the French astronomer, is dead.

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—Louisa Muhlbach, the celebrated German novelist, is dead.

Our Banks.

ACTION FOR SELF-PROTECTION.

The undersigned, incorporated banks and bankers of the city of New Orleans, desire to inform the community of the motives that actuate them in partially suspending the payment of currency upon their demand obligations.

Owing to the partial suspension of currency payments by the associated banks of New York and other Northern cities, and the consequent refusal of Western and other banks to receive checks on New York, as in regular course in settlement of collections, made here for their account, it is ascertained that very large remittances of currency hence have been made upon peremptory orders within the past five days. To such an extent, indeed, has this prevailed that at the same rate only a few days must elapse before our vaults and the community would be entirely depleted of the means essential to the ordinary movements of trade.

At the present moment foreign exchange is unsaleable in New York, and as we derive from this source our main supply of currency, we are now thus deprived of our only means of restoring the amounts lost by shipments to the West and to the interior.

We have therefore taken this step as a means of self-protection, and for the benefit of the agricultural as well as commercial interests, and as the only manner through which the incoming crops can be moved without ruinous sacrifices in prices.

The duration of this protective policy is limited to a period of thirty days, during which time we are confident the daily receipts of cotton and sugar will afford us a prompt and early relief, and compel currency to seek this market.

N. O. CLEARING HOUSE, Sept. 25, 1873.

THERE were three deaths from yellow fever in Montgomery, Alabama, on the twenty-sixth ultimo, and twenty new cases were reported, all in the Fifth Ward, which is being closely quarantined by the other wards of the town. On account of this appearance of the fever many people have left and are leaving Montgomery.

From the Work.

PERRYVILLE CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: I have just closed a most gracious meeting at one of the appointments on the circuit, at which the membership was greatly blessed, sinners happily converted to God and joined our church. J. W. VEST.

SUMMERFIELD, ALA., Sept. 20, 1873.

REV. ELISHA PHILIPS, presiding elder of the Marianna district, Alabama Conference, writing September 18, says:

The Lord has graciously visited many parts of this district. We are expecting to make a good report at the Annual Conference. I start on my fourth round of Quarterly Conferences to-day.

COLUMBIA, LOUISIANA.—Mr. Editor: I commenced a protracted meeting in Columbia on last Saturday night, with a small congregation. We had a good and profitable meeting the first night. The congregations gradually increased. On the last night we had a large congregation. The membership was graciously and happily revived. There were many penitents at the altar. A solemn reverence pervaded the entire audience. Three have united with the church, and some few have been baptized. The meeting still goes on.

Yours in Christ,
C. R. GODFREY.

SEPTEMBER 18, 1873.

CRAWFORD CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: We have held six protracted meetings this year, during which time many souls were blessed and fifty-six names were added to the roll. Some of these meetings were considered seasons of unusual spiritual power.

The worms have made sad havoc of the cotton; but I am hopeful that I shall be able to get the collections ordered by the Conference, and the stewards seem hopeful of their department. We are a long way from headquarters, but the ADVOCATE is highly esteemed by this people. We hope to see you at Conference.

Yours truly,
W. W. GRAHAM.

MARIANNA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: This conference was held in Columbia, Alabama, beginning September 5. Our presiding elder occupied the chair. Fifteen delegates were present. Four works not represented by preacher or delegate. The spiritual condition of the church very good. Three hundred and thirty-six accessions since Conference. Sunday schools are good. Financial system only moderately good, but improving. The condition of the houses of worship in the district not as good as they should be. The conference resolved to build a high school at some accessible point in the district. Bro. Philips is a presiding elder (see Discipline, chapter 3, section 3,) and not the Advocates. Delegates elected to the Annual Conference: Rev. J. Z. S. Cannerley, L. M. Edwards, David Carmichael and P. C. Peacock. SECRETARY.

SEPTEMBER 10, 1873.

SUGGSVILLE CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: A protracted meeting began at this place on the eleventh of September, and continued for nine days. The Lord was with us in the power of his holy Spirit in the conviction of sinners, the conversion of penitents and the edification of his people. The faith of the church in the power of God's word and the efficacy of his grace in the salvation of sinners was greatly strengthened. During the meeting nine persons united with the church, five of whom are heads of families, and among the most influential citizens of the vicinity. The other parties were young people of great promise to the church and the world.

We are greatly indebted to Dr. Handley, of Peachtree circuit, for faithful and efficient aid.

Yours fraternally,
E. M. TURNER.

SUGGSVILLE, ALA., Sept. 24, 1873.

ELBA MISSION, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: I commenced a protracted meeting at Elba on Saturday night before the fifth Sunday in August, which lasted eleven days. There were many bright conversions to God. Thirty-five were baptized, forty-five added to the church and the membership wonderfully revived. One grand feature of the meeting was the good attendance, day and night. Great solemnity pervaded the mighty throng. The meeting protracted itself by a continual, growing interest, the saving influence of God's Spirit entering almost every house in the town. Thank God, it did not stop here, but it spread far and wide in the surrounding country. I think there were only two young men left in the town of Elba to advocate the cause of the wicked one. I trust God may so influence them that they may soon come over on the Lord's side. The greater number who joined at Elba were adults.

J. M. BROWN.

SEPTEMBER 12, 1873.

BAYOU SARA CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: By way of news from the work, I wish to say that on the fourteenth of September we commenced a protracted meeting at Concord church, Bayou Sara circuit, Mississippi Conference. After continuing the meeting for ten days the result is thirty-five accessions to the church, twelve infants baptized and a general re-establishment of the family altar. God has most graciously owned and blessed his word. I was assisted by the effective services of several of my ministerial brethren, among whom I would mention Rev. W. H. Leith, of East Feliciana circuit, who was with us for three days, preaching with power and telling effect. The revival influence is general throughout the entire community. Old and young are turning to the Lord, to whom be all the praise.

R. D. NORSWORTHY, Pastor.

SEPTEMBER 24, 1873.

STONEWALL MISSION.—Mr. Editor: This mission was instituted at the last session of the Mississippi Conference, including at that time a membership of only twelve. The mission is confined alone to Stonewall Factory, situated on the Mobile and Ohio railroad, four miles south of Enterprise, Mississippi, and in the bounds of the Meridian district. Being a supernumerary on account of feeble health, the presiding elder requested me to take charge of this mission. With this request I complied. In the early part of the season I held a series of meetings, at which the membership was increased to twenty-two. On the seventh instant I commenced another protracted meeting, assisted a part of the time by Bro. Brasier, local minister, and closed on last night (September 21.) At this meeting we only had service at night, except on Sundays, as a considerable portion of the congregation are operatives in the factory. Notwithstanding the operatives had to labor for twelve hours every day, still they were punctually at church every night. At this meeting, night after night, to the close, the power of God was most wonderfully displayed in deep convictions and happy conversions. Of conversions there were nearly forty, and forty-two additions to the church. Surely the Lord is doing wonders in the earth. W. SPILLMAN.

ENTERPRISE, Miss., Sept. 22, 1873.

HOLMESVILLE, MISSISSIPPI.—Mr. Editor: It is with gratitude and delight that I read in the ADVOCATE notices of the wonderful outpourings of the Spirit of God among his people in different parts of his vineyard. The Psalmist says: "My soul maketh her boast in the Lord; the humble shall hear thereof and be glad." It is always a source of gratitude to Christians to hear of the prosperity of Zion in other parts. This is one of the many evidences I have of my acceptance with God. If I felt no interest in this I should conclude that I was not in sympathy with the great mission of love and mercy. I cannot report success to any considerable extent on my work. We are a quiet, peaceable people. Our congregations are large and, with only a few exceptions, well-behaved. The brethren generally are at peace among themselves. On the nineteenth of July we commenced a meeting at China Grove, which lasted four days. The Spirit of the Lord was with us from the beginning to the end. It was indeed with many of us a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. There was no loud preaching, no loud praying (except by one good brother,) no loud or long exhortations. Everything passed off quietly, yet the Lord was there in power. About fifty or seventy-five persons bore witness to the fact that the meeting had been a blessing to them. We had a few conversions, but no accessions. Three young men, heads of families, went home from the meeting and commenced to hold family prayers. God give them strength and courage, for they need it.

In Holmesville we undertook to hold a meeting the last of August. Sickness and rain interfered. On Sunday we had a pleasant time, and raised a contribution for Conference purposes. We secured, by subscription and otherwise, $25. Pretty good for Holmesville.

We held a five days' meeting at Muddy Springs, embracing the second Sunday in September. We had a good time. Three accessions to the church.

I feel under lasting obligations to Bros. E. W. Simmons, J. H. Winborn, B. Jones and J. W. Sandell for valuable services rendered us in these meetings. How could we get on without each other's help?

The cotton crop throughout this country will fall far below what it was last year. Corn, peas and potatoes are pretty good where they were properly cultivated.

A good deal of sickness and some deaths throughout the country. Five of my flock have passed into the regions beyond this year—three from China Grove, viz: Sisters Yarbrough, Pierson and Packwood. We are passing away. H. P. L.

Alabama College.

MR. EDITOR: The Agricultural and Mechanical College will open its next session on Wednesday, October 1, 1873. This college is located in the intelligent, healthy and pleasant town of Auburn, and if its agricultural department is equal to its mechanical, it certainly deserves a large patronage. While under the fostering care of the Alabama Conference it made but one doctor of divinity. This defect has been remedied by attaching the mechanical department, and it is now able to turn out five in one year. The friends of the institution are hopeful, and believe that with the mechanical department attached the institution will be able to manufacture all of the ological timber in the State of Alabama. EAST ALABAMA.

MILK in New York is now said to be as pure as water. That's the thin.

Yellow Fever Treatment.

The following treatment, to our personal knowledge, has been used with great success. Mr. Notlee has been known to us for many years, and we can testify to his success in treating and nursing yellow fever. Where experienced nurses and physicians cannot be had this may be of great service. Several times during the last twenty years it has been published in the ADVOCATE.

MR. EDITOR: For twenty-five years I have used, with unfailing success, the following in yellow fever:

The first symptoms are pain in the head and back, sickness at the stomach, generally preceded with a slight chill. Give a hot mustard foot-bath in a small tub or water-bucket. Sit on a chair, draw a blanket closely over all, leaving open only sufficient space for breathing. Drink a cup of hot elder-bloom or orange-leaf tea while in the bath. Remain there until a free perspiration takes place, perhaps in fifteen or twenty minutes. Cover closely in bed with two blankets for some hours, and then one will be sufficient. Take castor oil or salts for two operations. A thick folded ice-cloth to be kept on the forehead. Have two of these cloths. Place one in a bowl with a lump of ice on it (without water,) and change them every few minutes during the first stage of the fever. Eat freely of ice, drink ice-water or ice-lemonade with cream of tartar or tamarind in it. If the perspiration should appear to dry in, or a rush of blood to the head, give a foot-bath in a bucket in the bed. The patient will lay on his back, placing his feet in the bucket. Draw the blankets over all. Use the same bath-water every time. Add a tumbler of vinegar and a handful of salt. Give a cup of orange-leaf tea every six or eight hours. There are cases (but rarely) where there is a difficulty in urinating. Give a wine-glass, three or four times a day, of strong tea made of the inner bark of the elder-tree. Let the room be well ventilated, but no current of air. If on the second or third day there should be a soreness or burning sensation in the breast or stomach, apply a hot poultice of ground flax-seed, with thirty or forty drops of laudanum sprinkled on it. Repeat this, if needed, every three or four hours until relieved. Where the fever has not run over six or eight hours before being placed in the bath, and this method is faithfully adopted, the fever will pass away in thirty-six or forty hours. If the patient is restless at that time, sponge with vinegar and water. On the fourth day take four or five spoonfuls of corn-meal gruel or beef tea, and increase slowly (but no milk.) On the sixth day change clothes and get up a little if there is good weather. Any one that has never seen yellow fever before, and will faithfully apply this in every particular, may be certain of success. Be very careful of a relapse, which often comes from eating too freely.

ED. NOTLEE.

NEW ORLEANS, September 23, 1873.

Vanderbilt University.

GROUND BROKEN.

The work of excavating for the university was begun on Monday afternoon, September 15. The contract having been awarded to John Kilgoin, he was ready with his scrapers, and it was signed. The contractor's carts, shovels, picks and spades were ready also, and as the terms bind him to complete the job within a specified time, he was for beginning at once. There was no time to arrange a programme or to gather a crowd; so Bishop McTyeire went out and broke ground for the workmen, who stood by with heads reverently uncovered during the simple ceremony. The Banner reporter got the wind of something going to happen, and was on hand. He says:

"After the outlines of the building had been measured by the architect, the small company were invited to the center of the central corridor—that is, what will be the central corridor—and an old-fashioned shovel having been secured, Bishop McTyeire advanced to the spot and did honor to the proposed university by breaking the first ground. Before doing this, however, he quoted in Latin the following verse from the one hundred and twenty-seventh Psalm: 'Nisi Dominus ædificaverit domum, in cassum laboraverunt qui ædificant eam.' 'Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.'

"The view of the city from this portion of the university grounds is really grand and magnificent, and was greatly admired by those present. That the workmen might not be delayed in the commencement of their work, not as many persons were invited to witness the 'shoveling of the first dirt' as the notice was only given yesterday that the excavators were ready to commence operations.

"According to the contract, Mr. Kilgoin is bound by security to have the excavation completed by the first of November, which will be dispatching this portion of the work with rapidity, as there are about four thousand yards of dirt to be dug up and hauled away. He proposes to have about thirty or forty employees at work, and is confident of fulfilling his contract. The building will be three hundred and fifty feet from West End avenue, and two hundred and forty feet from Elliston street.

"Contracts have been awarded, but not yet closed, for the cut-stone work and for the window and door-frames. The contract for building the foundation-walls has not yet been awarded. Specimens from different quarries have been examined, and the contract will probably be given within the next few days."

We happened to be out of the way when the ground was broke, but (D. V.) we intend to be on hand when the corner-stone laying shall take place, which will take place with imposing ceremonies at no great distance of time, when the public will be duly invited.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Columbia Conference.

From a communication of Rev. Joseph Emery, the secretary, to the Pacific Methodist, we take the following items:

The eighth session of the Columbia Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South, convened at Brownsville, Linn county, Oregon, at nine o'clock A. M., Tuesday, September 3, 1873, Bishop David S. Doggett presiding.

The secretary of last session called the roll, and the following ministers answered to their names: C. H. E. Newton, A. E. Sears, B. R. Baxter, J. W. Stahl, R. C. Oglesby, D. C. McFarland, J. M. Lovell, E. G. Michael, E. J. Dawne and Joseph Emery.

Lay delegates: Thomas Henry, local preacher, A. Cauthorn and H. M. Strong.

The Bishop announced the name of Ferdinand W. D. Mays as a transfer from the Holston Conference, and introduced him to the Conference.

On the fourth day, before resuming the regular order of business, the Bishop announced that the characters of all the ministers had passed, and they had been declared "blameless in their life and official administration." He then delivered a touching address on ministerial character. He said the characters of the ministers were the priceless jewels of the church, and exhorted all to watch with jealous care over their characters, maintaining them spotless before God and man.

Under the Dust.—"Who has died during the year?" The name of Granderson Curtis was called. C. H. E. Newton, chairman, presented an excellent memoir of the deceased brother, which was, on motion, adopted and ordered to be spread upon the minutes.

The Conference proceeded to the election of delegates to the General Conference, which resulted as follows: B. R. Johnson and A. E. Sears. Alternates—D. C. McFarland and J. W. Stahl. Lay delegates—J. A. Cauthorn and S. J. Wilhoit. Alternates—B. F. Burch and A. Cauthorn.

Conference convened according to adjournment at half-past seven P. M. Opened with singing and prayer by the Bishop. He then delivered an address to the preachers, which will live in their memories till life's latest hour. After which he read the appointments, as follows:

UMATILA DISTRICT.—B. R. Johnson, P. E., Walla Walla circuit, B. R. Johnson; Powder river and Grand Ronde, C. H. E. Newton; Boise and Fayette circuit, to be supplied; Umatilla Meadows, to be supplied.

WILLAMETTE DISTRICT.—T. B. White, P. E. Corvallis station, B. R. Baxter; Junction City circuit, E. G. Michael; Dallas circuit, Dr. Goucher; Lafayette and Tillamook circuit, F. W. D. Mays; Salem station, E. J. Dawne; Oregon City circuit, Jolley; Lebanon circuit, D. C. McFarland; Albany station, to be supplied by a transfer; Brownsville circuit, J. W. Craig; James Emery, professor in Corvallis College; A. E. Sears, agent of Corvallis College.

JACKSONVILLE DISTRICT.—J. W. Stahl, P. E. Jacksonville circuit, J. W. Stahl; Roseburg circuit, R. C. Oglesby; Josephine circuit, to be supplied; J. M. Lovell, transferred to Pacific Conference.

The session of the Columbia Conference just closed has been the most interesting in the history of the Conference. The statistics show an increase in membership and in church property.

A deep religious interest pervaded the entire community. The preaching was plain, pointed, spiritual, and the result was that souls were saved and added to the church. The missionary anniversary, on Saturday night, was a success. One hundred and fifty dollars was collected.

HEALTH OF OUR BISHOPS.—We find, says the New York Christian Advocate of September 11, the following in the Pittsburg Advocate of last Saturday. No later news from the venerable patient has reached us.

"A special dispatch to the Commercial of this city, under date of September 2, says that Bishop Morris is lying at the point of death at his house in Springfield, Ohio, and that he was not expected to live during the night.

"A dispatch received at this office, dated September 3, 11.10 A. M., says: No radical change since yesterday; condition critical; little hope."

Bishop Janes is relieved from the acute pain which he suffered at the time of his attack and for some time afterward, so that he is able to walk out, but the organic difficulty remains, and he is also much prostrated by what he has suffered. We trust such arrangements will be made between himself and his colleagues that he may not be called to go forth this fall.

Our latest information from Clifton Springs indicates the rapid improvement of Bishop Simpson's health. He hopes to be early at work again.

A CURIOUS LITERARY PRODUCTION.

The following is one of the most curious compositions ever written. It evinces an ingenuity peculiarly its own. The initial letters spell—My ast is in the glorious cross of Christ." The words italic, when read on the left-hand side from top bottom, and on the right-hand side from bottom top, form the Lord's Prayer complete.

Make known the gospel truth, our Father, King;
Yield up thy grace, dear Father, from above;
Bless us with hearts which feelingly can sing:
"Our life thou art for ever, God of love."
Assuage our grief in love for Christ, we pray,
Since the Prince of heaven and glory died,
Took all sins, and hallowed the display.
Infinite *Be*ing, first Man, and then was crucified.
Stupendous God! thy grace and power make known:
In Jesus' name let all the world rejoice,
Now labor in thy heavenly kingdom own—
That blessed kingdom, for thy saints the choice.
How vile to come to thee, is all our cry;
Enemies to thy-self, and all that's thine.
Graceless our will, we live for vanity;
Loathing the very be-ing, evil in design.
O God! thy will be done from earth to heaven;
Reclining on the gospel, let us live,
In earth, from sin deliver-ed and forgiven.
Oh! as thyself, but teach us to forgive;
Unless us power temptation doth destroy,
Sure to our fall into the depths of woe.
Carnal in mind, we have not a glimpse of joy
Raised against heaven; in us no hopes we know.
Oh! give us grace, and lead us on the way;
Shine on us with thy love, and give us peace.
Self and this sin that rise against us, slay.
Oh! grant each day our trespass-es may cease;
Forgive our evil deeds, that oft we do;
Convince us-daily of them to our shame;
Help us with heavenly bread, forgive us, too,
Recurrent lusts; and we'll adore thy name.
In thy forgive-ness we as saints can die,
Since for us, and our trespasses so high,
Thy Son, our Savior, died on Calvary.

The Old and the New.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of the eleventh instant I find an article under the above caption from Bro. J. V. Enochs. I am much puzzled to decide whether Bro. Enochs is striking at Visitor or Young America. Can you decide? He reminds one of the cross-eyed butcher. He requested a man to hold a bullock, while he should knock him down. The man consented, and was holding the animal as tightly as possible, when he happened to look at the butcher, and saw one eye steadfastly fixed on him. "Do you always strike where you look?" said the man. "Of course I do," said the butcher. "Then you may hold for yourself, for I won't hold him," replied the man. From all that I can glean from his paper he seems to be looking at Visitor, but intends to hit Young America; and he does hit him, too, with a heavy hand. The very things of which Bro. Enochs complains—the want of zeal in the church, the sparsely-attended quarterly meetings, the want of exhorters in our church, the want of class meetings, etc.—are all the result of the action or want of action of Young America.

After enumerating several evils that exist in the church, he says: "Imagine this; then know that Young America is toiling with the concentrated energy of his nature to educate and embellish his children, so as to make them worthy of the church of Wesley, while he gathers them around him at the family altar, in the closet, and prays God daily, hourly, that they become lights in the church," etc. Now Bro. Enochs knows full well that the above was the practice of our fathers and grandfathers in Methodism. He was present at the District Conference spoken of, and he doubtless remembers, when the reports of the circuits were called for seriatim, the neglect of this very thing, which he says Young America is striving for with so much earnestness, was the almost universal complaint. What I understand by Young Americas are those who have the present rule over us; but among those who have the rule over us are a good many warm-hearted and zealous Methodists. Thank the Lord they are not all dead yet, either physically or spiritually. Why, my dear brother, if some of these Young Americas were to get into an old-fashioned Methodist revival they would be like a cat in a strange garret—would be for hunting a corner; his eyes would be like small moons! Whence originated our venerable, devoted and beloved Bishop who presided over us? He was a live man when Methodism was a power in the land, and the present lamentable condition of our spirituality was a matter of no small concern with him; hence his pertinent and searching inquiries into the habits of Methodists of the present day; and the result was as above indicated—an almost entire neglect of duty to God and the family. The state of affairs so devoutly wished for by my worthy Bro. Enochs is precisely the state of affairs that existed in the church when conversions were the order of the day, when our Quarterly Conferences were composed of living members, when the presiding elders and preachers in charge were buffeted by storms and confronted by swollen streams, were tanned by scorching suns, and pelted by wintry blasts; but, nevertheless, their watchword was "onward," and the people gladly met them. But a different state of affairs unfortunately exists now; and this state of affairs is Young Americanism, not Methodism. What I mean when I say that the "devil hates Methodism, and so do some others," is that the glorious institutions known once among us as band societies, where the brethren and sisters sought and found the pearl of great price—sanctification; and class meetings, where the members of the church weekly met to encourage each other on their pilgrimage to heaven; and love-feasts, where the church met to tell their experience, and explain the way in which they first sought and found the Lord, are almost entirely done away. They were the delight of our fathers and grandfathers; but now they have almost ceased, except when an "old fogy" comes along, as presiding elder. By whom are they ignored, if not by Young America? What has become of the law making them obligatory? It is repealed! By whom? Will Young America answer?

Bro. Enochs mistakes his man if he thinks that I, as an "old fogy," repudiate education. Neither did our fathers and grandfathers; but they lived in a day of log school-houses, and "old barn church-houses" and "clapboard parsonages"—if any they had at all. In those palmy days they could have prayer meetings, class meetings, and all the other meetings that were so rejoicing to them; but, alas! 'tis not so now. Our church, I am sorry to say, is too much like a certain Baptist church I once knew. The pastor thereof got a certain Bro. M. to fill his appointment for that place. The brother went accordingly, preached on Saturday, and was about to dismiss the congregation until Sabbath, when an officious deacon arose and said: "Bro. M., please announce a prayer meeting for to-morrow morning at nine o'clock." The meeting was announced; the people assembled to hear something new. Bro. M. told the deacon (Bro. C.) that he must open and lead the prayer meeting. "Why, Bro. M.," said the deacon, "I never prayed in public in my life!" "Well, who does pray in public, Bro. C?" "No one that I know of," was the reply. From what does this state of affairs originate? Certainly not from the usages of ancient Methodism!

When in the "city of magnificent distances," some years ago, we were riding with a friend in the direction of Georgetown. When we came to the Treasury Department we saw a number of old pillars thrown down in the street, and as many new ones supporting the portico of the building. The old ones were solid granite, the new ones marble. "Why is this?" we asked our friend. "Oh," said he, "those old pillars are out of fashion; they are just as strong, if not stronger, than the new ones, but they are not the style of the day; so they had to come down without regard to cost." The reader can make the application; and if he loves the old paths of Methodism he will mourn when he does it. VISITOR.

Selma Dist., Alabama Conference.

THE CLOSE OF THE THIRD ROUND OF QUARTERLY MEETINGS.

MR. EDITOR: Through the goodness and mercy of our heavenly Father we have passed through the sweat and toil of another summer—one, too, of much sickness and suffering; but thankful indeed are we that this sickness has not been "unto death," nor this suffering greater than we have been able to bear. "His grace is sufficient," and through Christ we can bear all things. During this round the churches have enjoyed a large share of the divine presence, and two hundred and forty-four souls have been added to our membership, all of whom, we trust, are "such as shall be saved." The preachers of the district have labored faithfully, enduring "hardness as good soldiers." The total loss of the crops in our district last year, and the rather unpromising prospects in the beginning of this, has been sorely felt by us. But with all patience have we endured, waiting "till fall," and though the rations may have been short, the preachers have "abounded in the work of the Lord." Our people have been built up and greatly strengthened in the faith of the gospel, while hundreds of poor, wayward sinners have been brought to "a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus." Of many of these precious meetings I see you have been informed. Allow me to add to those reported. Quite a revival on Peachtree circuit at two appointments, with eighteen accessions. Dr. Huudley, the pastor, is one among the most faithful and successful workers in the Master's vineyard. A gracious revival at Choctaw Corner, where I assisted Bro. Wade seven days, and left him with twenty-nine accessions, and rejoicing that his labor in the Lord was not in vain. Arriving, the next day, at Sister Agee's, on the Rembert Hills circuit, I tarried for the night, arose refreshed, and set out with the family for the quarterly meeting at Magnolia, where I found Bro. Pilley, with his charge so well worked up that they were ready to sustain him in any effort he should make for the salvation of the people. Here I found some little misunderstanding existing, and consequent alienations, which were soon buried at the foot of the cross, and a fresh baptism of the Holy Spirit received. We protracted the services five days, when I left the pastor with forty-three accessions—men ranging from seventy-three and sixty years of age down to the youth of twelve. Fifteen or twenty pledged themselves to the erection of family altars. This meeting demonstrated the fact that the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Stephen A. Pilley is a worthy son of a noble sire—one of the honored fathers of our Conference, who still lives to cheer us with his presence at our annual greetings. Bro. Pilley is an able expounder of the Scriptures, and so thoroughly had he taught the people from the word of God that an intense interest was awakened; and so great was the "desire to flee the wrath to come" that they would urge the door of the church to be opened, that they might get into the fold and declare themselves "on the Lord's side." Bro. George F. Ellis, of the Jefferson and Linden mission, was with us throughout the meeting, rendering invaluable service, and rejoicing to see his own little lambs flocking to Jesus.

We closed up the round at East Selma. Here six accessions were reported, giving Bro. Glenn a membership of eighty, and about the same number of pupils in the Sabbath school. At this place formerly we had a union school. Since its dissolution its growth has been so wonderful that the Quarterly Conference passed a resolution requesting the secretary to forward to you for publication the report of the superintendent. This has been a missionary church for some fifteen or twenty years, without ever accomplishing much, being sometimes left without a pastor. Last year it was served by that veteran of the cross, Bro. Walter H. McDaniel, who labored with his own hands during the week for his support, and served this people on Saturday and Sunday, by which he gathered together twenty-eight members, which he turned over to his successor, Bro. Glenn, who has at last solved the vexed question: Shall we have a church in East Selma? It is a fixed fact; the work is done. Go shew the things which you do here, and see "the poor have the gospel preached unto them;" and to God be all the glory.

At the Selma station—Bro. Andrews, pastor—twelve accessions were reported this round, chiefly from the Sabbath school. Our information leads us to believe this is the best school in the district, and admirably managed by Hon. P. G. Wood. We have class-meetings throughout the district, but none exciting so much interest as that of this church, led and controlled by Judge J. R. John. These two honored brethren rank among the most profound jurists of our State, but no position is too humble for them in the church of God, wherein they may be instrumental in leading a soul, young or old, to Jesus. With this Aaron and Hur to hold up the hands of our Moses in this city, we will surely gain the victory. Here we have nearly four hundred members, combining all the elements of strength we could ask for, and at no distant day we hope to see our beloved Methodism set up in every household.

Our schools will soon open. At Summerfield every facility is afforded for the education of our children, both girls and boys. Bro. McVoy has spared no pains during vacation to have everything in order, and he has made some valuable improvements. Bro. Massey awaits the return of his young men, to go to work with his usual energy and faithfulness. It may be of some interest to my friends to know that the Lord has called my two eldest sons into the work of the ministry, and by authority from the church at Summerfield they go forth to preach the gospel—Waverley to the Alabama Conference, and Ritchie to the Southern University to take the theological course. "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

Dr. A. S. Andrews, the president of the Southern University, is doing a great work for the church, and we cannot honor him too much for it. With his well-stored mind and generous heart he is drawing the people to him, and building up for us one of the best institutions of the land.

We have waited "till fall," the crops bring better than at one time expected. We are hopeful in regard to the collections ordered by the Annual Conference. The preachers will get their assessments, for they are indeed "laborers worthy of their hire."

We start to-morrow for Uniontown to fill our engagement there. Dr. Spangler is still feeble. The pulpit is filled by that grand old man whose name heads our Conference roll, Georgia has her Pierce, Alabama her Levert. Long may they live to bless the church.

ANDREW J. BRIGGS.

Alexandria District Conference, La.

MR. EDITOR: The Alexandria District Conference, just held at Pineville, will long be remembered by the people of this district. As an occasion most blessed to many, and to many a season of unmitigated annoyance, this conference will live in the history of Pineville. The conference was held in "Keener's" chapel, which of itself has a history, being built on a rock foundation at an expense of great faith, little money and no church organization.

The church, with its lights, seats and pulpit of cedar from the Red river raft, all new and complete, was the first sermon. The workmen hardly had time to clear away before the congregation was there to see the new church and to hear the Bishop. Only half of our preachers were present, and only one-fifth of the lay members. The reason for this small attendance may be thus stated: Worms in the cotton, sickness in families and selfish carelessness. They all straightway began to make excuses when the invitation came. Some proved oxen, some picked cotton and some had married wives, while others were just about to marry, and therefore could not come. Without the chosen ones we had a full feast, for unseen messengers went out and forced them to come in.

The general order of the meeting was revival. The order from the president in the chair was for all hearts to look for a blessing, and this order prevailed. Committees brought up the reports, on the state of the church and the like, between blessings. Twenty-two began life anew and thirty-three presented themselves as candidates for membership. The congregations were larger than have assembled here for many years, and many of those attending never saw religion in this wise.

The earnest manner and the plain doctrine on the part of the preachers, as well as the deep conviction and unmistakable conversion of some of the hearers, gave great offense to some who did not so much as attend the services. The meeting has had influence by hearsay and second-hand preaching, which goes to prove that the order of the day was carried in fullest effect. Who shall measure the results of this meeting? The Lord has abundantly blessed this part of his vineyard.

The presence of Bishop Keener was a special blessing and pleasure, giving life and interest to the occasion, as the following resolution, offered and unanimously adopted by the conference, will show:

"Resolved, That we are extremely pleased with the attention and marks of approval with which we have been honored by our beloved Bishop Keener, which only is exceeded by his grand presentation of the eternal verities of the Christian faith."

The people of Pineville and Alexandria entertained the members of the conference with heartiest welcome and unusually pleasant accommodations. Hosts and guests were sorry when the meeting ended.

The following facts came out during the conference: Three hundred members received into the church since January 1. The entire district, excepting two appointments, enjoying seasons of revival. The preachers have received fifty per cent. more this year than last year at this time. In this district there are thirteen works manned, and room enough for about six more. Only one station in this district. The district lies along Red river, both sides, and takes in the most fertile and beautiful country in the South. Great demand for preachers of the right sort—young men, energetic and willing to preach the gospel on credit until they can build up a work. Three or four young men who have a good start in the gospel, and make complaint at nothing, and are willing to give themselves, to the last farthing, to the Lord, will find most favorable opportunity in this district of indulging in expressions of gratitude to their great Employer. We want men who can live well and cheerfully on say $200 a year—board for self and horse given, one coat, two shirts, three watch-pockets and thirteen pairs of socks thrown in, and to leave on the work, in the shape of church property, all deeded properly, an amount valued say at about four-halves of his total receipts from the work. This district offers these privileges. Who will come and work in this land of faith?

Our next District Conference will be held at Evergreen, Avoyelles parish, Louisiana. A LOOKER ON.

PINEVILLE, September 8, 1873.

Finance.

MR. EDITOR: This subject has been ventilated and aired until the air is odorous with an odor not very savory. We have been doctored for a cure by many who have not inquired as to the cause of the disease, which is not the better way; and in so doing we have been placed in an unfair light, both preachers and people—the preachers as over-anxious about the pay, the people as being too stingy and dishonest for real Christians to be, in the estimation of intelligent outside skeptical or unbelieving men. They suppose a man called of God to preach the gospel would not be afraid of starvation, and they know that a man who has tasted of the good word of God and the powers of the world to come, and is still in possession of that blessing, does not need even asking to support the messenger of these things. And so, you see, the church is slandered in these discussions as to how to get the gospel supported.

Now how has all this come to pass? Why the preachers have been over-anxious to get everybody into the church, and have well-nigh succeeded by strategic propositions and flank movements, and in various ways; and the poor creatures, nearly worn out in the effort to keep out, have laid down to rest, just inside the fold, from whence they have never risen, and I'm afraid they never will; and they are called upon to pay for a benefit they have never received. Is it strange they should refuse? Is it right to represent them as Christians, and thus slander our holy religion? For I declare to you that every man, woman and child who has this blessing will ask the servants of God to take a blessing at their hands, yea, and more than any true minister of Jesus would ask of them.

Well, what's the remedy for this unsavory ill of which so much has been said? I answer: One of two things—either make the payment of some amount a condition of church-membership, or else let us (the preachers) go forth without any stipulations for pay, or any words about it, and labor without fee or reward until starvation drives us from the front to the rear; then recuperate as best we can, and return to the front again; and so on till the Master calls us from labor to refreshment. The latter is my purpose for the future; and I ask the poorest and meanest appointment in this Conference; and I'll stay one year, God being my helper. Like our noble presiding elder, I'll wear out rather than rust out. (I have never seen a man so heroic and laborious in all my life, and I have heard nothing about quarterage from him.)

But whatever may betide, let us cease this undignified clamor about money on both sides. Let that cease, or else cease preaching any more than we can do gratuitously. I am ashamed of it, my brethren.

J. W. JORDAN.

Letter from China.

MR. EDITOR: For the benefit of our young preachers I ask the publication of the following letter from our missionary in China in the ADVOCATE. Very respectfully,

WILLIAM BAKER.

"SHANGHAI, CHINA, August 12, 1873.

"REV. WILLIAM BAKER—My Dear Brother: I was glad to see a notice in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE of the publication of the Southern Methodist Home Altar by yourself. I am glad to know it is a publication advocating holiness in heart and life. We need something of this sort to bring the subject more prominently before our people. There is no subject dearer to the hearts of Methodist people everywhere than that word holiness, in the very name of which there is sweet music. Christ our Lord walked in the highway of holiness; and we are directed to follow this divine light. O that we could see many such publications in our beloved Southern Church, pointing the humble child of God to the 'King's highway,' that they may walk therein. As Bro. Hamilton says: 'This is what our preachers need to make them powerful in the pulpit.' I knew but little of this blessed way until I started on my way to China. But, thanks be to God, it has been a blessed theme for my soul to dwell upon for many years. I know it is only necessary to bring the subject prominently before the young preachers of our church, and before all those who desire light, that they may embrace and spread the good news of a full salvation which brings Jesus near to every one of us. To have the Savior ever present with us is holiness. If we admit Christ into our hearts all will be light, and all love, and no sorrow can distress us. We shall be safe in Christ, and we shall be one with him. I would like sometimes to write for your publication, for I feel that nothing would delight my soul more than to do something to forward this blessed and holy cause. I would feel my life well spent in advocating this 'highway' which seems so plainly marked out on every page of God's word. I send $1.25 for one copy, and twelve cents for postage for one year, being two cents on each copy if it be monthly. You require two cents postage to China. Please send me the numbers beginning with the present volume, and direct to my address—Shanghai, China. I wish the very best success to your undertaking; and be assured you have my sincere prayers.

"I am yours in the bonds of Christian love, J. W. LAMBUTH."

Obituaries.

DIED, August 31, 1873, at the residence of her father, Robert J. Williams, in St. Helena parish, Louisiana, Mrs. ADDIE LEE, wife of Jesse Lee, aged twenty-four years and six months.

Her parents and grandparents before her were Methodists, and early in life she united with the church of her fathers, and lived an acceptable member of the same until her death. Hers was the priceless "ornament of a meek and quiet spirit." Naturally of an amiable and cheerful disposition, she was the light of the household, the joy and comfort of her parents, and the idol of her husband. Her early death has spread a gloom over our entire community, and her grief-stricken family find it hard to say: "Thy will be done." God comfort them in their affliction.

THOMAS CLINTON.

SAMUEL SHORES SCOTT and DANIEL HUDSON SCOTT were born in Lowndes county, Alabama, July 26, 1873, and died, the first-named August 8, and the latter August 14, 1873. They were twins, and the fourteenth and fifteenth children of the Rev. Joseph M. and Amanda B. Scott, of the Alabama Conference. These beautiful "olive-plants" brought joy and gladness in their coming, but soon sickened, and after severe suffering passed away; but they have gone to that Savior who said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The parents' affection clung to them with the strongest tenacity, but they feel it a duty to submit and not murmur, as they are now angels, and secure from earth's sorrows and sufferings.

J. W. SHORES.

DIED, near Pleasant Hill, Lowndes county, Alabama, Mrs. MARY T. CLOPTON. Her maiden name was Reese. She was born in Hancock county, Georgia, July 16, 1795; moved to Putnam county, Georgia, and was married to Dr. J. B. Clopton in 1810. In 1820 she and her husband moved to Alabama, and settled near Rocky Mount, Autauga county, and from thence to the city of Montgomery in 1826, where she professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1832, under the pastoral charge of Rev. S. B. Sawyer. She told me that she fitted up the first room for Methodist preaching in Montgomery with her own hands. This was before she became a member of the church. She was therefore the mother of Methodism in Montgomery, and a warm and devoted member of the church till her death, which occurred August 8, 1873.

J. A. SPENCE.

DIED, at his residence near Jackson, Louisiana, June 11, 1873, after a painful illness of five weeks, JOSHUA CALEB THOMS, aged thirty-three years and ten months.

He was reared under the influences of a Christian mother, whose early lessons of piety and devotion instilled into the heart of the boy a love and reverence for his parent, which was cherished in manhood and proved a blessing in his dying moments. Feeling his immortal interests to be of the first importance, as his disease was steadily progressing, I gently approached him in regard to his future, alluding to his mother, who had trained him for God, her prayers and tears in his behalf. Glancing heavenward and raising his hand, he pointed up (with a look full of hope and confidence) and said: "She is up there." Falling into a light slumber, his face radiated with a smile, as if communing with unseen spirits. His pastor and friends visited him many times during his illness. Their fervent prayers and cheering words of hope and love were as a healing balm to his weary, drooping spirit. Upon one of these interviews, extending his hand, he said to Bro. Andrews: "I have not lived right in all things. I had a good mother. I owe it all to her;" repenting: "Glory to God." He embraced his weeping friends assembled around him, saying: "Meet me in heaven." Turning to President Miller, who kindly administered sympathy and prayers, he said: "My mother is a bright star up yonder." He asked his sister to sing her favorite hymn, "How firm a foundation," and every word seemed to fill him with rapture. As his spirit was hovering on the verge of its probation he again requested singing. At the close he was asked: "Do you feel that you are going home 'to die no more?'" "Yes," he replied with great emphasis. "Blessed be the Lord forever more—he is with me."

R. A. THOMS.

R. J. HUGGINS, son of James and Sally Huggins, was born in Barnwell district, South Carolina, February 23, 1829; moved to Thomas county, Georgia, in 1831; thence to Barbour county, Alabama, in 1836; thence to Pike county, Alabama, where in June, 1848, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and experienced a satisfactory sense of God's saving power. He was married to Sarah, daughter of J. W. and Harriet Clark, of Pike county, Alabama; moved to Coffee county, Alabama, where, on the seventh of October, 1855, he was licensed to preach, and in 1859, in the city of Eufaula, was ordained deacon by Bishop Kavanaugh; moved thence to west Florida, where he preached with no small degree of success until the spring of 1871, at which time he moved to Butler county, Alabama, where with great suffering life's work was finished. He served as a supply, successively and successfully, the Double Bridges mission in 1861-2, and the Cerro Gordo circuit in 1864-5.

Several years before he died he received a stroke of paralysis, and the last two years of his life were made up of extreme suffering; in fact about six months before his death the organs of speech became perfectly dormant. Although prostrated beneath the hand of God's inscrutable providence, incapable of making known his wants or giving expression to his feelings by articulate sounds, he overcame the difficulty by pointing to the letters of the alphabet, and not only pronounced his wants, but spoke the praises of that God in whose employment he had so long labored, and of that Christ whose pardoning mercy he had not only experienced himself, but commended to others. On the first of August, at half-past three P. M., surrounded by friends, a devoted wife and six children, the soul of this faithful, good man left a worn, frail, palsied body for a home in heaven.

J. L. SKIPPER, Pastor.

GRANDERSON G. GALLAWAY was born in Jefferson county, Alabama, January 25, 1824, and died in Montevallo, August 6, 1873. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Church, at Reedy Spring camp meeting, in the fall of 1842. His illusions to the time and place of his conversion, in the love-feast and class-room, were often of a touching character. With faltering tongue and streaming eyes he recalled the scenes of the dear old pine grove where his load of guilt was taken away.

On January 10, 1843, he was married to Miss Susan Mullendore, who, with an only son, survives him. He filled the offices of class-leader and steward in the church for nearly thirty years. His piety and zeal, coupled with a benevolent, cheerful and social spirit, eminently qualified him for his position in the church. Being specially gifted in prayer, praise and song, he was ever an active and useful worker in revivals of religion. He loved the church and the ministry; and the embassador of Christ, irrespective of name, found in his house a hearty welcome and a pleasant home. As a husband, father, brother and friend he was kind, affable and affectionate.

The last years of his life were saddened by pecuniary reverses, caused by the hand of a desolating war, and failing health, produced by exposure in malarial regions in attempting to regain his lost fortune. His last illness was peculiarly trying, being confined to his room for four months, incurring much expense and heavy pecuniary losses. But it was the Father's hand—a hand of love—whose grace was sufficient in this furnace of affliction. The day before his death he was unusually cheerful, and when, at his request, his favorite hymn, "I love thy kingdom, Lord," etc., was being sung, his face was aglow with heavenly radiance, and but for failing strength, it was thought, would have shouted aloud the praises of God. Just before the dawn of day he serenely passed from his labors to his reward. He was buried with Masonic honors at the Montevallo cemetery, to await the resurrection of the just.

R. S. WOODWARD.

REV. ABRAM PIPES was born December 13, 1789; married to Miss Elizabeth Grisham July 7, 1810; died July 19, 1873, aged eighty-three years, seven months and six days.

As the regular sun in his gradual course from his rising beam to his falling ray, so was the even and constant life of our good old friend who has gone to enjoy the bliss of an eternal home. As a minister he had served and waited in the sanctuary of his Master for upward of fifty years, walking uprightly and strengthening his declining years with the promises of the Father. He preached his last sermon for us at Douglas on the first Sabbath in July, from the comforting words: "There remaineth, therefore, a rest to the people of God."—Hebrews iv, 9. His "mortal feet" were then upon the brink of death, and his spirit fluttering for the bounds of immortality. In one short week he was upon the bed of suffering, and although not seemingly dangerous, yet he was surely making ready for the last journey. Fruit that is well ripe must fall, for nature is faithful to her laws. From the very earliest childhood of the writer he is remembered as an old, old man—bent low with years, but traveling faithfully on. He was an early settler in Louisiana, having moved here in 1813. But he has ceased to sojourn, and gone home to his Father's house. He will meet his aged companion there, who preceded him nearly three years. There they will partake of the bread without price, and drink at the fount of perpetual youth and eternal life. They leave a spotless name and a godly example to their six surviving children and many grandchildren. We cannot say more to honor the memory of our venerable and departed friends than that they loved and feared God. They heard his voice as their faithful and tender Shepherd, and we do feel that they have entered into that rest that is only known to the children of God—into that rest, that perfect rest, that delivers from the burden of years, from hoary hairs and trembling steps—into that rest so beautified by the presence of God, where there are no more tears, no more trials, no more death. "There shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever."

LAURA A. COLBERT.

ACCORDING to the Norfolk Journal tobacco-chewers have one imitator among the lower animals that is willing to come down so low as to chew the vile weed, the only instance that we remember to have seen recorded: There is a mule owned by a Mrs. Cotton, a lady living within a mile or two of Portsmouth, and driven to market every day, that has been an inveterate chewer of tobacco for many years. Whenever the mule becomes obstinate it is only necessary to give him a chew, when he becomes perfectly kind and gentle. The lady purchases tobacco for him regularly, and always keeps it on hand.

The Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1873.

GATHER THE WHEAT INTO MY GARNER.

Where didst thou reap to-day, my soul?
My soul, where didst thou reap?
The fields are white on either hand;
The ready ones about thee stand;
The Christian may not sleep.

What hast thou reaped to-day, my soul,
Worthy the words: "Well done?"
A burden sweet of garnered sheaves,
Or but a few dry, withered leaves
Marking thy "harvest home?"

How hast thou reaped to-day, my soul,
How hast thou reaped to-day?
The work is great, the field is wide,
The faithful few are by thy side;
Press on, and do not stay.

Wouldst thou not reap, my soul, to-day?
Wouldst thou not bring thy best?
The day is long, the sun is high;
Wouldst thou, then, lay thy burden by
And seek for ease, for rest?

Go, find thy work, my soul, to-day,
And, finding, do it well;
Put in thy sickle, sharp and bright;
Work on through all the morning light;
When night comes, who can tell?

American Anglicanism.

BY CHARLES F. RICHARDSON.

The excitement in England concerning the petition of four hundred and eighty-three clergymen for the appointment of authorized confessors in the English Church has already attracted considerable notice in this country, and at the same time the attention of American Episcopalians has been aroused by the meager majority obtained by the Low Church candidate for Bishop of Massachusetts, and by the belated reports of the meeting of the American branch of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament, held in this city last June. It is possible, therefore, that interest will be felt in a brief account of the progress thus far made in this country by the remarkable religious movement which is called by its friends the "Catholic revival" and is popularly known as "Ritualism."

The Tractarian movement, important as was its influence in the Church of England, was little felt in the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States. There were, indeed, a few secessions to Rome, but not more than frequently take place from other Christian bodies — the German Reformed Church, for instance. On one man, however—the late Bishop of Vermont—it made a profound impression, and inspired in some degree those studies in early church history which finally led him to adopt the advanced views which he held during the latter part of his life. Bishop Hopkins, however, like Dr. Pusey, taught Tractarianism rather as a doctrinal system than as a cultus; and toward the close of his life only did he venture to adopt the mild form of Ritualism implied in placing two candles on the altar of St. Paul's church, Burlington, the darkness of whose chancel, with the Bishop's failing eyesight, afforded a plausible excuse therefor. On his departure for Europe, however, he instructed his young rector to continue the use of these eucharistic lights.

Ritualism in England, as far as its beginning can be definitely fixed, dates from 1863. It did not appear in this country until 1865, when St. Alban's church, New York, was established. Its leading doctrines — which are, of course, the same in both countries—may be summarized as follows:

1. The system of the Christian church is essentially a sacramental one, and there can be no genuine Christianity other than that which relies upon sacraments for spiritual grace.

2. In the sacrament of the Lord's Supper Christ is really and truly present, under the substance of bread and wine, and may there be adored. The Holy Eucharist becomes, therefore, the central act of Christian worship.

3. The Lord's Supper is not only a communion, but a sacrifice; and non-communicating attendance is therefore as ellectious under certain circumstances as the reception of the elements. The Eucharist can also be celebrated in its sacrificial character for the furtherance of any pious object.

Upon these doctrines certain ceremonies depend, whose intrinsic importance, the Ritualists aver, is not great, but which, as symbols of essential truths, can in no wise be dispensed with so soon as their introduction becomes possible. Such are the use of eucharistic lights, at least two candles being necessarily lit at the celebration of the Lord's Supper; eucharistic vestments, incense, flowers, the elevation of the consecrated wafer and wine to be reverenced by the people; the mixing of water and wine in the chalice, that no portion of its contents be by any possibility lost; and the reservation of the consecrated elements for the use of the sick. The Ritualists also encourage, where they do not demand, early communions (that they may be received fasting) and the practice of sacramental confession. They introduce considerable changes, furthermore, into ecclesiastical nomenclature, calling the celebration of the Holy Eucharist mass; a choral celebration, high mass; a plain celebration, low mass; morning prayer, matins; evening prayer, vespers; the last service in the day, compline, etc. They endeavor to bring the word "priest" into general use, instead of "minister;" call their pastor "Father," instead of "Mr.;" speak of "saying mass" and "hearing mass;" and at all times term themselves Catholics, or, at least, Anglo-Catholics, repudiating the name of Protestant with something of scorn. This nomenclature, for the sake of convenience, will be used in the remainder of this article. Concerning the doctrines of the apostolical succession, the validity of orders, etc., they are, of course, at one with the rest of the Episcopal Church, while their belief in the fundamental doctrines of the so-called orthodox creed, with the exception of justification by faith and other Calvinistic dogmas, is firm.

St. Alban's church, New York, was established, as we have said, in 1865. Its rector has been from the first the Rev. Charles W. Morrill, a graduate of the General Theological Seminary, who had previously been connected with parishes in the State of New York. Father Morrill is a thorough student of Tractarian literature and has also the reputation of being a good Shakespearean scholar. The interior of the church is pleasing, although its exterior is quite plain. The walls are adorned with pictures representing the seven stations of the cross; on each side of the altar stand two large candlesticks; the pulpit is at one side of the church, and over it, during the sermon, a crucifix, with the figure of our Savior, is held. The services at St. Alban's are, as from the first, of an ornate description. The singing is by a boy choir, surpliced; and there are still, of course, acolytes, crucifers, processions, etc. This is the only church in the city where incense has been used, and in which the priest, besides the eucharistic vestments—alb, cope, stole, maniple, chasuble, etc.—wears a biretta. The crowds of fashionable people who used to throng St. Alban's are now considerably diminished by the waning novelty of its ritual, by the inconveniences of the railroad near by, and by the fact, as Father Morrill once explained, that "the church occupies a position which favors neither popery nor Protestantism." So Catholic are Father Morrill's views, indeed, that in the sermon in which this statement was made I heard him say that the Reformation and the work of Luther and Zwingle were "inspired by the devil." The financial affairs of the church are managed with great economy, its annual income being only $6,000 or $7,000. Father Morrill's assistant is the Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien, a French Canadian, and formerly an assistant minister in Trinity parish. Father Beaubieu occasionally preaches in French.

Christ church, under the rectorship of Dr. F. C. Ewer, became widely celebrated, soon after the establishment of St. Alban's, as a Ritualistic church, one Catholic practice after another having been introduced. Father Ewer's career has been a somewhat singular one. He began life as an atheist and a lawyer, but subsequently studied for the priesthood in California, supporting his family meanwhile by a position in the San Francisco custom-house. In New York, before going to Christ church, he was an assistant in St. Ann's for deaf-mutes. The story of his rectorship, of his sermons on the "Decline of Protestantism," and of his final defeat by the vestry, needs no repetition now. Father Ewer, after his withdrawal from Christ church, officiated for a time in the Church of the Holy Light (started for the blind, now defunct;) but his adherents subsequently bought O. B. Frothingham's Unitarian church, on Fortieth street, which, refitted as St. Ignatius' church, is now their ecclesiastical home. The building is not only ugly, but inconvenient, outside and inside; its only adornment being its very elaborate altar, which, with the reredos, towers nearly to the ceiling of the chancel, and is adorned with several mural paintings, a number of handsome candlesticks, and a richly-jeweled cross. Father Ewer's congregation is a fashionable and devoted one, and St. Ignatius' is the favorite resort of the Ritualistic students in the General Theological Seminary. Father Ewer has generally been without an assistant, and conducts Sunday services as follows: low mass, seven A. M.; matins, nine: high mass, half-past ten; vespers, four P. M.; compline, half-past seven. These are also the usual hours at the other Ritualistic churches.

Father Ewer's assistant at Christ church was the Rev. Thomas McKee Brown, a graduate of Trinity College and the General Theological Seminary, and still a very young man. Father Brown is now rector of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, a rather pleasing little structure on Forty-fifth street. The altar of this church was presented by a merchant as a memorial of his wife, cost more than $10,000, is of white marble, about twenty feet high, and is, save the one in St. Stephen's Roman Catholic church, the most elaborate and expensive altar in America. At high mass it is brilliantly lit with a multitude of candles, and on a feast day I once counted one hundred and eight burning at the same time. On each side of the altar are two red candlesticks, which, with their massive candles, are two or three times the height of the acolytes who stand beneath them. The music is generally good, an entire mass being occasionally performed, with female voices for the solo parts, in addition to the usual boy choir. The number of services at this church is very large, there being early mass every morning, matins and vespers daily, and high mass every Sunday and feast day. The assistant minister is the Rev. McWalter B. Noyes, formerly of St. Alban's. At this church attend the Sisters of St. Mary and the girls of their young ladies' school. The favorite missal in this church is the "Treasury of Devotion," which contains various litanies—of the Holy Child, of the Most Holy Trinity, of Our Lord Present in the Holy Eucharist, etc.—for use at compline and other services. Over the principal entrance is a marble statue of St. Mary the Virgin. In connection with this church—as with St. Alban's and St. Ignatius', and St. John's, St. Paul's and St. Chrysostom's chapels (Trinity parish)—are numerous guilds (for men and women,) sewing societies, altar societies, etc., through which a great amount of parish and mission work is done.

These three churches are the only ones in New York which can distinctively be called Ritualistic. One other, the Church of St. Sacrament, led a brief existence, in a little Broadway hall, until its rector, Father Bradley, seceded to Rome. At Trinity, however, eucharistic lights are used; St. Chrysostom's chapel is ritualistically inclined; there are ritualistically inclined; there are ritualistic churches Bishop Potter regularly holds confirmations, although he occasionally betrays a lack of familiarity with the confirmation service, which renders some prompting necessary on the part of the priests. The average attendance at St. Alban's is about one hundred; at St. Ignatius' and St. Mary the Virgin's about one hundred and fifty.

In the General Theological Seminary there has of late years been quite a body of Ritualists among the students (there were eighteen last year,) who attend early mass, confess, go into retreats, and hold special religious services in their rooms, using incense, etc. Some of them belong to the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament, and at least one of them so injured his health last Lent by excessive fasting that he was obliged to abandon his studies and go home. Between the two parties there is considerable hostility and no little difference in their manner of worship. The faculty, too, is divided—the Low Church party being led by Prof. Buel, and the High by Prof. Seymour, dean ad interim. The Ritualists in the last class from the diocese of New York got ordained without difficulty; but the Bishop of Pennsylvania refused ordination to one of his candidates, in consequence of his advanced views.

In New York is the home of the Sisters of St. Mary, whose chaplain is Dr. Morgan Dix, rector of Trinity. On East Forty-sixth street is their convent, where is also their school for young ladies. Their chapel is in the same building. They wear a black habit, closely patterned after that of the Roman sisters, and strictly observe the canonical hours. In each recitation-room hangs a crucifix, and some of the girls in the school are said to wear blessed crosses. The Sisters of St. Mary also direct the House of Mercy, on the bank of the North river, whose chaplain is Dr. Seymour, dean of the Theological Seminary, and have lately established a branch house and school at Peekskill.

Turning away from New York, we find, as yet, a smaller development of Ritualistic practices elsewhere; although it is impossible to judge thereby concerning the spread of sacramentarian doctrines. In Massachusetts, for instance, which has always been considered a Low Church diocese, the Ritualistic candidate for Bishop lost his election by only a handful of votes, and actually got, indeed, as a correspondent of one of the Boston dailies subsequently showed, a majority of the votes of clergymen having churches under their charge. In Boston, however, there is but one distinctively Ritualistic church, the Church of the Advent, whose rector is the Rev. Father Grafton, S. S. J. E. This church has long been celebrated as a High Church establishment, the late Bishop Eastburn having for many years refused to hold confirmations in it. Under Father Grafton's care it is filled with goodly numbers, although its interior decorations and ritual are far inferior to those of the New York churches. I once saw an Episcopal nun—of what order I do not know—lie prostrate on the floor of this church during the entire time occupied by the consecration of the elements. Boston has a branch of the Evangelist Fathers of St. John, whose monastery is at Cowley, England. This branch was established in 1871 by the superior, the Rev. Father Benson, who came to America for the purpose.

Catholic ritual is used in one church in Philadelphia, St. Clement's, which has had a somewhat varied career under the rectorship of the Rev. Dr. Batterson and others. Baltimore is getting to be a stronghold of sacramentarian doctrines, and it is possible that even now there are more Ritualists in that city than in New York. In Newark, too, is a church with a very advanced ritual, which attracts more people than one usually sees at St. Alban's or St. Mary the Virgin's. But of other cities and towns we have not room to speak.

It is not generally known that the coryphæus of the Ritualistic party in the American church is, in many respects, the Rev. John Henry Hopkins, Jr., now of Plattsburg, New York. "He taught the whole of us," once said one of their priests to me; and his influence has been especially strong in the General Theological Seminary, where he lately narrowly escaped being elected professor. The bishops who are understood to view the movement with more or less favor are Bishops Neely, of Maine, Doane, of Albany, Whitehouse, of Illinois, and Quintard, of Tennessee, the last of whom took a prominent part in the late anniversary of the Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament, in this city, and was the celebrant at one of the early masses. The Confraternity, whose superior general is Father Ewer, has now sixty-five priests-associate, and reports that eucharistic vestments are worn in sixteen out of forty-one dioceses. The names of its members it keeps secret.

It has, of course, been impossible in a single paper to consider the whole growth of Ritualism in the wide field occupied by the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, and the incompleteness of this article will therefore, I hope, be pardoned.—Independent.

"FAITH LATIMER," an admirable infant class teacher, says in the National Sunday School Teacher of the uniform lessons for the little folks:

"Last winter, when the lessons were upon Revelation, although it was predicted such lessons could never be adapted to infant classes, an indiscreet mother said to a very little girl: 'Lucy, why do you talk so much about heaven every day?' 'Because my teacher does, and I love to think about it.' 'Your teacher does not know any more about heaven than I do.' The astonished child answered: 'Yes, mamma, I know she does. I'm sure she has been there.'"

A VENERABLE MATRON of the old school, in the whaling burg of Peterhead, Scotland, hearing that a comet was expected to appear, which would perhaps destroy the world, uttered the following lamentation: "What will the puir things awa to Greenland de when they come hame frae the fishin', and fin' that there's nae warld left till come tee?"

Wesleyan Methodism.

The final draft of the ministers of the Wesleyan Conference was read and confirmed on Wednesday, August 13. Among the appointments we note the following: F. J. Jobson, D. D., book steward; Benjamin Frankland, B. A., and Benjamin Gregory, editors; G. T. Perks, M. A., W. B. Boyce, Luke H. Wiseman, M. A., general missionary secretaries; William Arthur, M. A., honorary secretary; Charles Prest, general secretary home missions; John Rattenbury, agent of the Auxiliary Fund, which is in behalf of worn-out ministers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers; Gervase Smith, secretary of the Metropolitan Chapel Building Committee; George Osborn is theological tutor of the Richmond Branch of the Theological Institution; Rev. W. M. Punshon, LL. D., is chairman of the Second London district.

The Connectional Insurance Office is gradually drawing into its lists all the Wesleyan churches and parsonages. The company insures nothing but church property.

Among the ministerial dead of the year past are Thomas Jackson, who lived to ninety years; Thomas Waugh, eighty-eight; Daniel Macafee, eighty-two; William Shaw, seventy-seven; and eleven others, whose ages ranged from seventy-four to ninety. Of the ministers who retired permanently from the ministry Dr. Stamp had traveled fifty years, John Lomas fifty-three and William Piggott fifty-one; the majority of the other superannuates had seen forty years of service.

Rev. Samuel Coley, M. A., has been appointed to the theological tutorship in the Headingly Branch of the Theological Institute. He is a representative Methodist in every sense of the term. Brilliant yet scholarly, of a most genial Christian spirit, and with what the Watchman thinks inheres in Wesleyanism—"occasional broad flashes of light and merriment, gentle touches of pathos, and a quiet appreciation of humor." Mr. Coley will mold many and many a future minister after his own heart.

The Wesleyan Sunday schools of Great Britain now number 5,869, an increase for the year of 77, and of scholars 666,706, an increase of 12,189 scholars. There has also been an increase of two day schools, and 4,867 day scholars. The Conference sanctioned the formation of a movement which has long been discussed and urged—a connectional Sunday school union.

The official statement made in the Conference shows that 276 of the circuits reported a decrease in members, and 359 an increase. The totals are: Number of members in society, 348,580, a net increase of 1,730; the number on trial, as reported at the March district meetings, is 20,844.

SERVING GOD AND MAMMON.—A recent publication has a passage satirizing a class of professed Christians in our day, who are the true descendants of those "Pharisees, hypocrites," that in our Savior's time devoured widow's houses and for a pretense made long prayers. It is as follows:

"Walk," the old lady began, "wall, my dear, some people have very curious notions about gettin' religion. 'There's my neighbor, Deacon Jabe Sniffin, who's makin' a fortune tradin' horses. Wall, he thought he 'sperienced a change, but he didn't want to 'sperience a change of business. That was touchin' a tender point—might interfere with profits, you know. So he thought he'd consult with Deacon Aminadab Tweedle, who kep' a store, and did up the sugar and whisky over night. 'Now, look a here; you don't s'pose, Bro. Tweedle,' he began, drawling the words through his nose—'you don't s'pose them little stories, sort o' lies like that you and I tell in the way of trade, will be reckoned up agin us on the day of judgment? Sarcumstanced as we air, we can't help it, you know. I don't s'pose it will make no sort o' difference at all in the sight of the Lord, long's the heart's all right; now does it, Bro. Tweedle?'"

"If the father generally talks 'money, money!' at home; he generally rears a family in worship of the almighty dollar. If he talks mainly horses, games and races, he breeds a batch of sportsmen. If fashion is the family altar, then the children are offered up as victims upon the altar. If a man makes his own fireside attractive, he may reasonably hope to anchor his own children around it. My neighbor Q. makes himself the constant evening companion of his boys. The result is that his boys are never found in bad places. But, if the father hears the clock strike eleven in the clubhouse or the playhouse, he need not be surprised if his boys hear it strike twelve in the gaming-room or the drinking-saloon. If he puts the bottle on his own table, he need not wonder if a drunken son staggers in, by and by, at his front door. When the best friend that childhood and youth ought to have becomes their foe, the homes become the 'starting-post' for moral ruin."

A STORY is told of a French gentleman who, having lost the bulk of his property through the rascalities of friends in whom he trusted, lost his mental balance, and for the remainder of his days found his only delight in riding in omnibuses and passing fares from passengers to the driver, taking care when change was returned to add to it a sou or two from his own pocket and watch the effect on the receiver. In nine cases out of ten, as the story goes, the passenger, counting over his change and finding, as he supposed, that the driver had cheated himself, would look bewildered for a moment and then pocket the change with a quiet chuckle.

"A COFFIN," said an Irishman, "is the house that a man lives in when he is dead."

Religious Intelligence.

THE six missionary societies which are operating in Liberia all report success, and several of them are extending their labors widely among the unmixed heathen population.

JOE SMITH, JR., retains his father's mantle as a Mormon, and lives at Plato, Illinois. He has a large following, and they call themselves Josephites. They are described as Mormons in everything but the polygamous attachment.

A LARGE NUMBER of the exiled German Jesuits have settled their headquarters at Dillon Hall, about nine miles from Liverpool. Others are settled at Stonyhurst College. Many others have either come or are coming to this country.

DR. MULLENS, secretary of the London Missionary Society, has left for Madagascar, where he expects to spend a year in looking after the interests of that flourishing mission. There are sixty native young men now studying for the ministry in the training school in Madagascar and forty are studying to become teachers in the normal school.

AN ELABORATE table of statistics, recently compiled by the Rev. C. C. Goss, gives the Presbyterians of New York city the lead in church membership, their number being 55,773; next, the Episcopalians, with 13,163; then the Baptists, 11,352; Methodists, 10,322. The compilation shows that Methodism has been at a standstill relatively since 1835. Its record, however, is much more satisfactory in the towns and cities around New York.

THE Swiss National Council has rejected by 70 votes against 23 the three appeals which have been made against the sentence of banishment passed against Bishop Mermillod. It is said that Switzerland and Italy are in negotiation with a view to cooperation in the event of Ultramontane troubles. Several of the bishops of France have united in a letter to Bishop Lachat, of Switzerland, assuring him of their sympathy and approval in the resistance that he is making to the Swiss government.—Independent.

THE missionaries of the American Board at Guadalajara, Western Mexico, continue to meet with much encouragement. More than $200 of Bibles, Testaments, etc., have been sold by them within a short period. A Protestant weekly paper, which has been in operation but a month, is already better supported than any other paper in the city. It is expected to pay for itself at once. Their helpers, they are assured, do not work for pecuniary gain, but from real sympathy with the movement, and many of them have made actual sacrifice of money or position in order to render aid to the missionaries in their work.

THE Bishop of London is perplexed over another Romanizing development in his diocese. A vicar and church wardens have made application to erect a "Baldacchino" in a certain church, St. Barnabas. A "Baldacchino" is a canopy often raised in Catholic churches over the altar, generally of costly materials, and in this case it is proposed to expend over $3,000 in this aping of the Catholic Church. It has no spiritual significance, but is intended as a simple confession that the Catholic Church is the true church. It is another step of the surrender which the Church of England is making to the Church of Rome. The Bishop has not the courage to boldly say no, but has referred the matter to the chancellor of his diocese.

REV. JOHN C. FITNAM, Protestant Episcopal missionary to New Mexico, writes that at Taos the Martinez chapel, with all its paraphernalia of altar, crosses, pictures of saints, images of saints, etc., was opened for his use, and in it he read the first Protestant Episcopal service, in Spanish, ever read in the beautiful valley of Taos, with its 7,000 inhabitants, many of whom anxiously seek for a safe refuge in the Episcopal Church against the errors, exactions, oppressions and other crimes of Rome. The universal cry among the people is that the Romish priesthood make merchandise of the sacraments and rites of their church. There have been a few Bibles distributed in past years in this country, and they are carefully preserved and read.

THE Missionary Record, in giving a summary of the labors of the late Rev. James Watson, missionary of the United Presbyterian Church in Jamaica from 1827 till 1868, reports the present condition of the Western Presbytery of Jamaica, of whose congregation he is virtually the founder. In 1828 a little church was formed in Lucea, the germ of this presbytery, into which Mr. Watson gathered 13 persons of color, one negro and seven white people. Two years later Mr. Watson said: "I have in Lucea alone received the names of upward of 400 negroes as catechumens or inquirers—the one communicant being multiplied 400 fold." The congregations now number seven, the out-stations 22, the native evangelists five, school teachers 17, scholars 1,771, communicants 1,296, and attendants on public worship 1,954. These numbers, together with the moral and social improvement, which no arithmetic can compute, shows the power of one good missionary thoroughly in earnest.

THE subject of confession is still exciting controversy in England. The three bishops of London, Worcester and Manchester have all spoken their minds about it. The former admits that an occasional use of confession is warranted by the Prayer-Book; but contends that the habitual practice of it would be contrary to the letter as well as the spirit of the church formularies. The Bishop of Worcester pronounces the petition of the 483 clergymen an attempt to undo the great work of the Reformation; and the Bishop of Manchester says that "he has always regarded the practice of habitual or compulsory confession as most demoralizing to the individual conscience," and that there is nothing he would "more profoundly deplore, as a taint likely to vitiate the whole social atmosphere in which we live, than the naturalization of such a system in the Church of England." His lordship attributes what he condemns to "a morbid and enervating sensationalism." All the bishops agree, however, that the remedy is rather in the hands of the laity than of the ecclesiastical authorities. Before their lordships were fairly through, up spoke the bold Archdeacon Denison, and said "that he regarded the present time as a glorious opportunity for the Reformed Church to come to the front. He considered it a dangerous thing, especially in a country where people liked plain speaking, to tell them that the Scriptures or the Prayer-Book did not mean what they said. He was thankful to say that priests by thousands were teaching and practicing private confession, and that the laity by tens of thousands were rejoicing in the comfort which was thus afforded."—Independent.

CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.—A correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, writing from Simla, says: "I lately mentioned the results of missionary enterprise in Bengal as ascertained by the late census. The results briefly amount to this: that there is now a total Christian population under the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal amounting to 93,698 souls, of whom 70,000 are born and bred in India, and 50,000 are pure natives. The report of the missionary Conference at Allahabad has just published the statistics for all India. Unfortunately it deals only with the Protestant Christians—pure natives—who number 221,161. The most remarkable feature disclosed by the missionary statistics is the rapid progress of proselytism during late years. Between 1851 and 1871 the number of Christians has more than doubled in Bengal, while the communicants have increased nearly threefold. In central India the native church has multiplied by nearly 400 per cent.; in Oude by 175 per cent.; in the north-western provinces it has nearly doubled; in the Punjaub and Bombay it has increased by 61 per cent., and the total increase for all India is 61 per cent. The increase during the previous ten years, from 1851 to 1861, was only 53 per cent. The missionaries calculate that, assuming a uniform increase of 61 per cent. for each ten years, the number of native Protestant Christians in India will amount in 1951 to 11,000,000, and in A. D. 2001 to 130,000,000. They very prudently admit, however, that such calculations are liable to unforeseen contingencies. But they have established in a startling and unexpected manner that Christianity is a really living faith among the natives of India, and that it is spreading at a rate which was altogether unsuspected by the general public. The number of native ordained ministers has risen during the ten years in question from 97 to 226, and the number of communicants for all India has more than doubled. The report very honestly shows, however, that the missionary work in India is an educational quite as much as a proselytizing enterprise. In 1871 no fewer than 122,132 pupils attended the mission schools; and these institutions are every year growing more popular, as is proved by the increase since 1861, when the attendance stood at 75,975. On the whole, it is felt that the missionaries have done wisely in taking up the gauge of battle regarding their alleged want of results, and that they have proved their case in a quite unexpected manner. It is only to be regretted that their Protestant zeal excluded the Roman Catholic missions, which are at least as successful, and are believed to have an even more numerous following."

PROF. REINKENS was consecrated missionary bishop of the Old Catholics on Monday, the eleventh of August, by Mgr. Heykamp, the Jansenist Bishop of Deventer, and his assistants, Verhey and Hordenwyk.—Profs. Reusch, Knoodt and Langen were present, and there was a large attendance of the Dutch clergy. Profs. Schulte and Friedrich and Dr. Dollinger were unable to be present. Monsignor Casparus Johannes Rinkel, hitherto priest of the Jansenist church at Krommenie, was also consecrated as Bishop of Harlem. Monsignor Heykamp, in an address he delivered on the occasion, said it was not sought to establish a new church or to alter the basis of the church of Jesus Christ. The duty of the new German bishop was to maintain what otherwise would be lost—to seek the outcast and be to them a father. It was his duty not only to watch over pure doctrine, but to inculcate true religious principles. Two records were made of the consecration, in presence of the whole congregation—one in the Dutch and one in the German language. The first-named will be forwarded to Rome, while the latter is destined for the archives of the Old Catholics in Germany. Prof. Reinkens stipulated at his election that the vow to be taken by his flock, priests and laymen, should not be a vow to obey him, but, in the spirit of the ancient church, a promise to love him and revere him. While he believes that the authority of the church should be of love, rather than of compulsion, he believes, at the same time, that the authority of the government is to be respected, and he has issued a pastoral letter, in which he describes the position of the Old Catholics and gives his views of the episcopal office. He asserts that a bishop should teach obedience to the secular authorities as a religious duty and as a question of conscience, and that he who does not is a traitor to his office. This is a view of the relations of Church and State which Prince Bismarck will certainly indorse as orthodox. It is conspicuously different from the doctrine preached and practiced by that jaw-breaking saint, Archbishop Ledochowski, of Posen. The refusal of this prelate to answer before the courts a charge of violating the new ecclesiastical laws was reported in our last issue. In his absence the authorities have proceeded against him for contumacy, and he has been sentenced to pay a fine of 200 thalers. The government allowance of $2,000, hitherto made toward the support of the strictly clerical seminary of the Roman Catholics at Fulda, has just been withdrawn. These and other facts show that the government is vigorously enforcing the new laws.—Independent.

The Financial Storm.

There is a mystery about these occasional financial disasters which sweep over the country. It is mysterious to those at least whose studies and pursuits are not in the direction of commerce and monetary transactions. There are, however, some things connected with these business convulsions which are calculated to interest and instruct. We can see that the world is most intimately connected, and that the most distant points are affected. There is a mutual dependence, and when the crash begins it travels with the velocity of an equinoctial gale across continents and oceans. The business welfare of one city involves the prosperity of a hundred others, and thus we are led to realize how close and strong are the ties of interest which connect mankind. Scarcely any class of people escape untouched. From the richest to the poorest there is trouble. In some cases the rich are utterly impoverished, and reduced in a day from the pinnacle of prosperity. On the other hand, some grow rich under the pressure which impoverishes others, and not a few flourish and fatten on the dismal spoil and almost universal wreck.

In such times an extraordinary amount of rascality is brought to light. Defalcations are uncovered which before were not expected, and dishonest tricks and corrupt speculations are made bare. The depths of fraud and villainy, and the wide prevalence of monetary corruption exhibited, are alarming. As an offset, there are no doubt some very remarkable illustrations of sterling integrity. The occasion which exposes the bad also tests and brings into view the good. There are some men in the world who will not lie or cheat, and who will, at any cost, maintain clear consciences and an untarnished name. The ultimate result may also be good. There is so much that is unreal, corrupt and every way false and dishonest in the present methods of business, and in the financial operations of the country, that the only wonder is these upheavals do not more frequently occur. In the natural world the storms seem to be necessary for the general good, and although partial wreck and devastation follow in their path, the widest effect is, on the whole, beneficent. Thus we may hope in these great monetary disturbances. While they may be largely owing to false and dishonest plans and methods, they are absolutely needed to hold the fraud and gambling in check, and to readjust the principles and tendencies of trade, and to purify the business atmosphere of the country.

Whether these tribulations will lead anybody to religious seriousness we cannot tell, but we have thought a general religious awakening might follow in the wake of this financial tornado. This was the case some years ago, and it may be reasonably expected now. The mind is awake, there is anxiety, there is trouble, disappointment and sorrow. Religion is the only refuge, and thousands under a realizing sense of the vanity of earthly fortune may now begin to seek happiness in something more satisfying and enduring. Evidently God intends to rebuke not alone the scandalous dishonesty and the unscrupulous and mad pursuit of riches, but also the general mammon worship, covetousness, excessive greed and worldliness. Safe investments are not in earthly values of any kind. Riches do make to themselves wings, and he is a fool who trusts in them. In such times it would be well for all to review their stewardship in reference to the money and property which God has intrusted to them. The stewardship of many a rich man has come to an end during the past few days, so far as the use of great wealth is concerned. He has been stripped of all, and turned out of this stewardship. People who have felt unable to give much have been compelled to lose a great deal. With many the opportunity of consecrating wealth to God is now gone forever, and many more who might have given something have lost even that and the blessing which was in it.

Letter from Washington.

BY DR. TUDOR.

MR. EDITOR: The National Republican, one of the dailies of this city, says in this morning's issue: "This city of Washington, which was the disgrace of the country, has blossomed into a beauty and a loveliness, so that it is to-day the most attractive city in the Union." This statement approaches, in my judgment, the exact truth, in respect of both the disgrace and the beauty. A resident, as I was, of Washington for five years during the "disgrace" period, and returning after an absence of two years, the improvement, like the growth of a child, is to me perhaps more of a marvel and a charm than to those who have remained. For example, I find street after street paved for miles, where two years ago there was no paving of wood or cobblestone, but there were only country dirt roads, with paved sidewalks, for a densely-built population. This, however, is but a single item illustrating in advance the many and great improvements which I have noticed, and which, dating with the organization of the new Board of Public Works two years ago, must inevitably date a new era in the material prosperity of the national capital.

It seems evident that the plan of Washington, as laid out by its founder, contemplated a capital to contain millions of people. Streets and avenues, of greater width than those of any other city in the world, comprise with the alleys an area equal to about one-half of that contained within the entire city limits. Until recently these streets and avenues have lain, as already intimated, in dust and disgrace, with the exception of the great artery, Pennsylvania avenue, and a few sections immediately adjacent of a few streets intersecting, paved with cobblestone. The present generation of citizens of Washington would be exceedingly grateful to former generations and administrations if they had, by gradual and effective improvements from year to year, diminished the expense which now falls so heavily upon the taxpayers for work which it became evident must be done, or the mules and the bats would take the city. The city government has not been, indeed, unenterprising in the past, but its enterprise has been dwarfed and crippled through defect of adequate co-operation and appropriation upon the part of the general government, which owns four-tenths of all the property within the limits of the district, and which originally proposed to bear a proportion of the cost of improving the streets and avennes and keeping them in repair. In seventy years—from 1802 to 1872—the amount expended by the city of Washington for the improvement of the streets and avennes was nearly $14,000,000. During the same period the total amount expended by the general government for this purpose was only $1,500,000. In the two years just passed the appropriations by Congress for the purpose above named have reached the sum of $3,250,000, and by the District Legislature $4,750,000. A comparison of the figures above stated will show that earnest work must have been in contemplation, and the results achieved abundantly show that work in development and progress. The location of Washington, and the plan by which the city was laid out, fit it to be the rival of Paris or any other great city in the grandeur and convenience of its thoroughfares, and the imposing relief of elevation and view which its buildings, public and private, may enjoy. The present reorganization of the city in grading and ornamentation contributes almost perfectly to these effects. Now that it is quite settled that Washington is to remain the national capital, every American must feel interested that the city shall represent the taste, prosperity and judicious pride of the republic. Men and measures change, but the beautiful city will be the same to every administration.

The first thing that strikes an observer, acquainted with the topography of the city as it was, is the immense amount of effective grading that has been done. The crossing of Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue is the Agora or grand market and meeting-place of the business and travel of the city. If now the reader will put himself at the corner named, looking northward, he will see what was a succession of steep hill and brief level in Seventh street, for a mile and a half or two miles, reduced to a gently inclined plane; and so on many streets, if he will remove north, south, east or west, and continue his observations, he will witness excavations, in some cases of enormous depth, which scientifically accommodate the purposes of thoroughfare, but have left residences high and dry upon difficult banks, where before it was but a step or two to the bed of the street; while in other places inevitably, where ground has been made, dwellings have been left low and obscure that were formerly on the sidewalk. In the streets thus graded about one hundred miles of carriage way have been paved with treated wood, round block, compound wood and concrete, concrete, Belgian and concrete, and other descriptions of pavement. The improved patent pavements have by this example been decidedly approved.

Further in the way of improvement and ornamentation, the waste places formed by the intersection of the broad streets and avenues have been laid off in small parks, now green with grass, and sparkling in the evening with jets from beautiful fountains. The sidewalks of the streets are the widest in the world, paved with brick on the curb, and affording space for almost every dwelling to have a grass plat in front of the door. At a convenient distance, at once between carriage way and dwellings, shade-trees have been planted, in some cases along the city passenger railway tracks, as on Canal street and Esplanade in New Orleans—twelve thousand in number—maple, linden, elm, tulip-tree, ash, sweet gum and other varieties. At various points handsome circles have been described, set in green, and inclosed with iron railing, like Tivoli Circle in New Orleans, only the circle here at the corner of P street and Connecticut avenue is of four times the area of Tivoli. About eight thousand feet of iron railing in all have been erected in the course of the improvements. Rock creek, the stream that divides Washington from Georgetown, has been spanned at several places by stalwart bridges, so that you pass into Georgetown almost before you know it, and indeed you can well believe you are in the same city of Washington from the corresponding improvements that are in lively progress in the sister city of the district.

The new sewerage of the city is an important feature of the work that has been done. For an effective system unto this end the city has been divided into seven sewer districts, named according to locality, and the ample sewerage now in progress will be adequate to carry off the deposits that formerly conducted into the canal, south of Pennsylvania avenue—made it often so offensive as to threaten pestilence, and so unsightly as to disgust every beholder. The Tiber creek sewer is one of the largest in the world, varying in diameter from twenty-four to thirty feet. For lateral sewerage the pipe sewer has been used almost exclusively. Keeping pace with the enterprise of the Board of Public Works, one thousand two hundred and forty-two buildings of brick and stone, dwellings and other, and one thousand one hundred and twenty-six of frame, have gone up, while the grand public buildings, such as the capitol, the general postoffice, patent office and treasury, have sprung into a far bolder relief than they possessed before.

While we are bound to contemplate all these works of liberal progress with admiration, it cannot be overlooked that they have, in some cases, entailed hardships and seeming oppression in the way of taxation, and the grumbling and complaint, amounting sometimes almost to riot, which they have occasioned, is simply an historical fact. Yet it is also remarkable that perhaps the most popular man, with all classes in the district this day, is the man who less than two years ago—I may say, from personal knowledge, not more than one year ago—was hunted and haunted by abuse, hatred and threats of summary assassination for the part which he was held to be performing in the general upturning and forward movement in progress. He was considered the ringleader in all the mischief, the hard taxation and the unsettling of affairs to which people had become used, and they were for letting well enough alone; the ringleader he was held to be, not only in the conventional sense of that term, but also as the "ring" is technically understood in these days of corruption and greed. If it were necessary, I would not only disclaim the insinuation of such a charge in these lines, but also defend him against the narrow-mindedness and the servility of judgment which brands every man of public spirit, and even, in some cases, the benefactor of his species, as a leader or a member of the "ring." But it is not necessary. Ward political meetings, now held nightly in this city, laud, applaud and honor him. He is certainly a man of genius, vigor, purpose and courage. To him, as vice president of the Board of Public Works, the city is more indebted—to his determination, comprehensive foresight, talent for affairs and hearty enthusiasm—for its present beauty and outlook of prosperity than to any other living man. So they all say now. His name is on every tongue, and name and title are as follows, viz.: Hon. Alexander R. Shepherd, Governor of the District of Columbia.

To his prompt courtesy I must acknowledge my indebtedness for sundry items and particulars in this letter.

Not Very Well.

We give below some statements from a cotemporary concerning the Cincinnati Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The results of a bold profession, and frequent preaching of entire sanctification and the national camp meeting specialty, are a little singular. Less missionary money, class meetings declining, a lax enforcement of discipline and a lack of success in arresting the unconverted, at the same time that entire sanctification has been professed with boldness, frequently preached, and a camp meeting held for the single purpose of promoting it. We do not understand the relation of entire sanctification to this state of things. A deep experience of the power of holiness should quicken the whole church, and increase the efficiency of every department. We give the statements, however, as we find them:

There were $2,000 less than for the year preceding. This fact was so startling and painful that after the eloquent address by Secretary Eddy and Bishop Wiley, it was proposed to raise this deficiency by $120 shares. The collection proceeded under the management of Dr. Moody, until at a late hour the amount was pledged, the preachers present taking seventy of the shares. It was a very doubtful expedient, and is likely to embarrass collections hereafter. The preachers have found monetary stringency nearly everywhere, but have made earnest efforts to maintain usual collections for benevolent purposes. The statistics are not all in yet, but enough are returned to show that less progress has been made than was hoped and expected by many.

The bold profession and frequent preaching of entire sanctification have followed as the legitimate and direct result of the national camp meetings at Urbana, and similar methods and preaching have characterized the many camp meetings that have just closed within the bounds of the Conference. But the effort to arrest the unconverted has been less active, and hence the apparent lack of success. May it not be that the church is only preparing for a great and glorious revival?

There was much said by the presiding elders in their written reports of their districts on the subject of class attendance, and a committee on this and kindred subjects of practical discipline was appointed, and reported in favor of a much more stringent enforcement of the rules.

Filthy Communications.

We have regarded Bishop Haven's voluminous indecencies on amalgamation and miscegenation, lately appearing in the Northern Methodist papers, as unfit to be quoted or noticed. For the sake of our common Christianity we have declined to insert his dirty letters. Our cotemporary of the Pacific Methodist gives the following estimate and extracts:

We do not desire to seem as if we were pursuing our Northern Methodist brethren, but the following utterances from Bishop Haven are of such a character as demand some notice at our hands. The "Bishop of Atlanta" is writing a series of letters for Zion's Herald from Charleston, South Carolina, comparing the salient points of that locality with those of antipodal Boston. These letters have the freedom of thought and audacity of expression which have characterized this Bishop for many years, somewhat intensified by the aggressive position in which he finds himself during his episcopal reign at the South. He gives the keynote of the campaign in unmistakable language. If this last letter from which we quote were not so outrageously coarse and obscene in its insinuations we would like to give it entire; but it is unfit for publication in our columns, therefore we have chosen such sentences as plainly indicate the purpose and desire of this Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are least objectionable in a moral point of view. It is a little remarkable that his attention is so much given to the negro women; we do not remember to have noticed that he is extravagant in his praises of "tinted Apollos;" but "tinted Venuses" arouse his imagination and excite his admiration strangely. This letter has been published nearly two months, and we have not yet heard a word of condemnation from the press of the Methodist Episcopal Church; there has been a tacit if not positive agreement to its policy which is strangely at variance with the laws of nature. Here are the extracts:

"I can pardon a little to the devil of slavery when I see what fine specimens of humanity it produced. If you want to see the coming race in all its virile perfection, come to this city. Here is amalgamation made perfect. * * * What exquisite tints of delicate brown; what handsome features; what beautiful eyes; what graceful forms! No boorish, Hanoverian blood here, but the best Plantagenet. * * * The best old Beacon street wine of humanity is theirs, and soars to the rich quality that flashes in these eyes and veins and figures. It is an improved breed—the best the country has to-day. It will be so reckoned in the boudoirs of Newport and the court of Washington ere many years. * * * Let the white gentleman make the less white lady his wife, and let her not degrade herself by any voluntary associations of sin. Her mother's purity can never be transmitted in guilty relations. The lighter are not always the more lovely. Some quite dark skins are very rich in tone, and black but comely is not an unknown trait in Charleston. One knows not but the blackest is of the best blood, for pureness of Africanism does not go according to color. The best old family stock is in these shapely features, that are as dark as Erebus."

Preachers In Charge.

Dr. Winfield, of Arkansas, is presiding elder of the Little Rock district, and being about to enter on his fourth round—that round of rounds—addresses a few words through the Western Methodist to the preachers in charge, which will be found appropriate to all the districts in all of the Conferences. We quote as follows:

Up to this time very little has been done to meet your collections. All of you have promised to bring up your Conference collections, and to use your utmost endeavors to obtain fifty cents per member, in all your charges, for the missionary cause. I sincerely hope, dear brethren, you will not forget these very important interests. Please see that all your class-books are correctly renewed, and all dead branches stricken off. Please don't report members to Conference that have been dead for years, and those that have removed to Texas from two to five years ago. Have your church registers and circuit records all ready to turn over to your successors. See that all our property is properly deeded, and that every board of trustees have their report ready, as demanded by the Discipline. Do try and get all the official members to the next Quarterly Conference. Urge all the local preachers to come, and those unordained to bring their license, and those desiring ordination to come prepared for examination. Be careful to receive all who are qualified into the church, and leave no church trials or other unnecessary work for the preacher who is to follow you. Have a good plan of your circuit ready to hand over, and your statistics all ready for Conference. I will furnish the blanks to all of you.

STEWARDS.

My dear brethren, the finances of our district are dreadfully behind. With two exceptions, they are worse than any district I ever traveled. Your preachers have labored faithfully, and under many disadvantages and severe pressure. No other men would have worked on such pay and such fare. Only three months and we will have to start to Conference. Will you allow us to leave you with less than half our salaries? Will you permit us to go to Conference in debt? Will you not put forth an extra effort to bring up all arrearages? What say you? What say the members of our church? Shall your preachers be paid? Answer in view of your obligations to God and his ministers. Your conference will be adjourned from time to time till you settle.

Climate of the City of Mexico.

Rev. Dr. Carter, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, writes to the Methodist of the climate as follows:

The climate of the City of Mexico is enchanting. If we were to go up in a balloon from New York to the altitude of the spot in which we are writing, nearly a mile and a half above the level of the sea, we would find the air inconveniently cool; but this is counterbalanced here by our proximity to the equator. It has been said by some one that it is never warm enough in the City of Mexico to take off the coat, and never cold enough to button it up; and this is almost literally true so far as we can judge in a five months' residence. It is easy to wear a cloak; its weight is hardly felt, and ecclesiastics are almost invariably thus imbited; but to go without one is more agreeable. Unfortunately the constant sameness of the temperature has driven out of polite society that prolific subject of conversation—the weather—which is so often a boon to young men and maidens who are not apt talkers. It is quite unfashionable here to make any remark about the state of the atmosphere unless, perchance, the streets are flooded by the rains, and you feel obliged to confess that you are drenched to the skin. We are just now in the midst of the rainy season, which commences in June and continues until October. The sun, however, often shines until twelve o'clock at noon, and if cloudy there is usually no rain previous to that hour, after which the intermitting showers render it always safest to be armed with an umbrella.

But the climate is enchanting. You may open your windows, and you are comfortable. You may shut them up, and you are comfortable. You may sleep at night under a single sheet, and you are warm enough; or you may add an extra coverlet, and you are not too warm. And so, they tell me, it is the year round. Winter is no winter; grates, registers and heating-pipes are unknown; chimneys are northern barbarities unnecessary even in Mexican kitchens, from which the smoke finds an easy egress by some convenient hole in the roof. Some people like variety—the summer gliding into fall, the winter melting into spring. They had better not come to the City of Mexico.

Here, then, in such a climate you can enjoy such a place as the Alameda. You are not obliged, in the luxury of a walk, to take an involuntary sweat-bath, the consequence in these July days of a ramble in the Central Park. You can sit for an hour beside one of its fountains and listen to the music of the band without being haunted by the fear of sneezing; or you may saunter through its avenues, and the balmy air seems to be always of just the right temperature.

For Oregon.

It will be seen from the appointments of the Columbia Conference that the Rev. Thomas B. White, of the Louisiana Conference, has been appointed presiding elder of the Willamette district. We believe Bro. White proposes to leave for Oregon in a few weeks. It is with deep regret that we give him up. For many years he has been a faithful and efficient laborer in Louisiana, filling important appointments and endearing himself to the people at large and to his brethren of the ministry. For several years we were intimately associated with him during his pastorate in New Orleans, and learned more than ever to love and esteem him. We earnestly commend our brother and his family to the Southern Methodists of the Pacific slope, and, above all, we pray that the good hand of our God may be with them in their journey, and in all the experiences which await them in the land whither they go.

GETTING ALONG.—It is not to be expected that Father Hyacinthe should all at once get clear of the errors of popery. The Old Catholics still cling to many of the follies and superstitions of Romanism. Perhaps they will get free after awhile. They are certainly moving toward the truth. The Christian Union chronicles the present status of Father Hyacinthe in such terms as these:

Father Hyacinthe has got along so far as to deny the corporal presence of Christ in the sacrament. In one of his recent sermons at Geneva he affirmed, in explicit language, that the true Catholic doctrine of the eucharist had been grossly corrupted and materialized, citing even later Catholic theologians to show that no material or physical change whatever was wrought by the act of consecration in the holy elements. They were spiritually converted into the body and blood of Christ, through which, as instruments or means, the souls of the faithful communicants were fed with spiritual food in the partaking of that sacrament.

FRATERNAL LETTER.—From the following extract from the London Methodist Recorder it will be seen that the British Conference has directed a fraternal letter to be sent to our General Conference in 1874.

The Macclesfield district suggested the propriety and desirability of appointing in future a fraternal deputation to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South of the United States of America.

The memorial committee reported that the subject of official intercourse with the Methodist Episcopal Church South would come before the Conference on a notice of motion, by the Rev. Dr. Punshon, to the effect that a fraternal letter should be sent to the General Conference in 1874. The Conference resolved that such a letter should be sent, and appointed a committee for its preparation.

THE fever at Shreveport is apparently declining. There were five deaths from it on Tuesday, September 30. We sincerely hope that it will now rapidly disappear. All that can be done for that afflicted community should be done at once. The destitution and suffering there for the necessaries of life are truly heart-rending. Rev. John Wilkinson, pastor of our church at Shreveport, was taken sick on the twenty-fourth; but we have heard nothing further, and presume that it was a temporary indisposition, or, if the yellow fever, that he has had a mild attack.

THE HEALTH OF THE CITY.—The dengue has about run its course, we should think, as we hear of few new cases. Of the yellow fever we may be regarded as practically clear. The deaths from this disease have steadily declined for some time, until the last report would indicate that no apprehensions need be entertained about it.

THE financial troubles have been upon us in full force during the past week, and business matters are still at a dead-lock for the most part, but we are told that there is some improvement, and that things are likely to return to their wonted condition in a short time. We sincerely hope it may be so.

THE highest inhabited spot in the world is the Buddhist cloister of Hanle in Thibet, where twenty-one priests live at an altitude of sixteen thousand five hundred feet. The Brothers Schlagintweit, when they explored the glaciers of the Ibi Gamin, in the same country, encamped at twenty-one thousand, the highest altitude at which a European ever passed the night. Even at the top of Mont Blanc Prof. Tyndall's guides found it very unpleasant to do this, though the professor himself did not confess to feeling so bad as they. The highest mountain in the world is Mount Everest (Himalaya,) twenty-nine thousand feet, and the condor has been seen "winging the blue air" five hundred feet higher.

Circular Letter of Bishop Miles, of the Colored M. E. Church.

TO THE PUBLIC: It is known to the Christian world that in the year 1870, on the fifteenth of December, the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America was regularly organized. It was organized by the aid and under the guiding counsels of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. It was no schism. In the providence of God it originated in the very necessities of the case; and in the same Divine Providence I was appointed and consecrated Bishop of said church. I have traveled extensively over the entire South, and have endeavored, in the fear of God, to carry out the design of the organization, and to accomplish what Mr. Wesley contemplated when he first organized Methodist societies—that is, the spreading of scriptural holiness over all these lands. My people, and myself with them, are in perfect sympathy with the people among whom we have always lived, and with whom we expect to live and die. We are no politicians, but we know and feel that our interests, social, temporal and spiritual, are in all respects identical with the interests of the white people of the South. We believe that there should be no antagonism of races. We are in the same ship, and one-half cannot be scuttled without the sinking of the whole vessel. We believe, therefore, that our people should be educated. We must have our own schools, and must, as soon as possible, have those schools conducted by men and women of our own race. We must have an educated ministry, and consequently must have schools in which to educate our ministers. We have never yet, as a people or as individuals, sought to have our schools, our ministers or our churches mixed up of different races. Our church is a colored church. By special law our membership is confined to the one race. I myself urged the passage of this law at the very origin of the church.

But we must seek assistance in the great work committed to our hands. At the last Kentucky Colored Conference I was appointed a committee of one to take the necessary steps for the establishment of a school for the education especially of colored ministers. It is not, however, expected to confine our work to this class of persons alone, but to extend the means and the blessings of learning to all of our race that may desire it. In accordance with my sense of duty, under this appointment from the Kentucky Conference, I have purchased in the city of Louisville valuable grounds for the sum of $8,500. With handsome improvements already on the ground, we hope soon to make a beginning in this great work. We need not less than $50,000 to carry out all our plans. I therefore address this circular letter to all of our friends, both white and colored. I confidently ask Southern white people to help us. We look to you as our friends. We beg that, in view of our wants, of the conservative character of our church, of the deep interest which all good people must feel in our success, and of the glory of God and the prosperity of his church, you will help us. We ask the rich to help us. We ask the patriot to assist us. We call upon all good Christians to give us something.

The claim is as urgent as human want can make it. The salvation of our race is the prize at which we aim. I beg, then, that the soliciting agents, whom I can commend for honor and integrity, for prudence and piety, may be welcomed by the liberal of all classes, and that such means will be afforded as the necessities of the case demand.

The agents appointed by me are the Rev. J. W. Bell, pastor of Center Street church, Louisville; Rev. W. P. Churchill, pastor of Hopkinsville station; Rev. R. E. Marshall, presiding elder of the Hopkinsville district; Rev. Alexander Austin, pastor of Winchester station. These brethren I most heartily commend and indorse as worthy your entire confidence, and I assure you that whatever you may give will be most faithfully applied to this great charity.

W. H. MILES.

ST. LOUIS CAMP MEETING.—The St. Louis district camp meeting closed on Sunday night, September 7. The results are very gratifying to the church, and especially so to those who had upon them the burden of its preparation and conduct. The results of moral and Christian effort cannot be measured by statistics, and yet, even in the facts and figures, the recent camp meeting was a gratifying success. We have good reason to believe that between sixty and seventy persons experienced in their hearts the saving grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, about half of whom offered themselves for membership in the church at once, others preferring to unite with the pastoral charges most convenient for them, or with other churches.

The church-membership was greatly revived, and to many a cold, backsliding heart the joys of salvation were restored. How many out and out backsliders were reclaimed it would be difficult to ascertain.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

A SOLDIER OF SEVENTY YEARS.—At the Warrenton Springs camp meeting, says the Richmond Christian Advocate, we had the pleasure of greeting the Rev. Joseph Carson, one of the oldest Methodist preachers in the world. He had his family with him, occupied a cottage, and entered with true zeal and relish into all the services of the meeting. It was really a privilege to converse with this honored servant of Christ, and to hear him tell how fields were won in the heroic days of the church. He has been a preacher of the gospel for seventy years and is now nearing his ninetieth year, but he is hale and hearty, and, except for great deafness, is in possession of all his faculties to a remarkable degree. He was regularly in the pulpit during the day services, and even ventured out at night, though it was quite damp and cool, to hear Bishop Marvin.

JUST AS IT SHOULD BE.—Many of our correspondents are kind enough to keep their book and ADVOCATE business separate. They never write about the business of the two on the same sheet. Although they may inclose the two letters in the same envelop, they are dated, signed and addressed separately, and distinct from each other. This enables us to attend more promptly to each. When the business is mixed the book-keeper of one department must content himself to wait till it has passed through the other department—order filled, goods shipped and letter answered—before the business of his department can be attended to; and as the book-keepers and clerks of the two branches of business are separate, and file their letters separately, it must be apparent to every man of reflection that much perplexity results from writing about the business of both on the same page. When money is remitted it should be distinctly stated what for; and if for two or more purposes, how much for each. Write nothing in business letters except that which has reference to business.

THE WEEKLY WATCHMAN, LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS.—Under contract with E. B. Hutchkiss, editor and proprietor, the subscribers of the Watchman will be furnished with the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE during the time of the suspension of said paper, being thirty-six weeks further, as agreed upon, or until notice thereafter.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL FURNITURE. Mr. Nath. Johnson, No. 491 Hudson street, New York, keeps on hand a full line of church and school furniture, and calls particular attention to the Ne Plus Ultra desk, for which he claims many advantages.

WE SEE that Procter & Gamble's EXTRA OLIVE SOAP is becoming very popular in our city. Its quality, we know, is superior, and being nicely perfumed, we are not surprised that consumers prefer it, and that it has a large sale.

COLGATE & CO.'s new perfume for the handkerchief, "CASHMERE BOUQUET," will be appreciated by all who have enjoyed the delicate and peculiar fragrance of their toilet soap of the same name, which is so universally popular. je21 1y

MR. E. E. F. ROSS, our resident advertising agent, is now on a brief tour through the West and North, and we commend him to the attention of our patrons, and shall be thankful for courtesies extended to him. They are assured that Mr. Ross has no other business, but devotes his entire time to the paper, and is entitled to all the consideration of one of its business corps.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

HAMILTON'S preparation of Buchu and Dandelion cures that most distressing malady, Piles, by increasing the digestive function of the stomach, and by securing a proper secretion and excretion of bile for the lubrication of the bowels. This prevents constipation, and constipation is the immediate cause of Piles. There is common sense in this treatment. Go to Fredericksen & Harte's or E. J. Hart & Co.'s drug stores and tell them you want Hamilton's Buchu and Dandelion. They can tell you all about the remedy, and sell it to you also. oc2 2m

DON'T THROW AWAY YOUR MONEY. To the Public.—For over twenty-six years Dr. Tobias' Venetian Liniment has been sold. Every bottle has been warranted, and not one has been returned. Thousands of certificates of its wonderful curative properties can be seen at the depot. It will do all, and more than it is recommended for. It is perfectly safe to take internally. See oath with every bottle. It cures cholera, croup, dysentery, colic, sea-sickness, chronic rheumatism, sprains, old sores, cuts, etc. Depot, No. 10 Park place, New York. se25 4t

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DR. TUTT'S VEGETABLE LIVER PILLS.

THE STARTLING DRAWBACK ON nearly all medicinal agents has ever been that in their process of purgation and purification they have also debilitated the system. To obviate this difficulty physicians have long sought for an agent that would

PURGE, PURIFY and STRENGTHEN

At One and the Same Time.

Their research has at last been rewarded by a discovery which fully realizes the fondest desires of the medical faculty, and which is justly regarded as the most important triumph that Pharmacy has ever achieved. This important desideratum is which purifies the blood and removes all corrupt humor and unhealthy accumulations from the body, and yet produces no weakness or lassitude whatever, but, on the contrary, tones the stomach and invigorates the body during the progress of its operation. It unites the heretofore irreconcilable qualities of a searcher and purger and a purifying tonic.

DR. TUTT'S PILLS are the most active and searching medicine in existence. They at once attack the very root of diseases, and their action is so prompt that in an hour or two after they are taken the patient is aware of their good effects. They may be taken at any time without restraint of diet or occupation. They produce neither nausea, griping or debility, and as a family medicine they have no rival.

Price, 25 cents a box. Sold by all druggists.

FROM A RECENT ANALYSIS BY Prof. W. O. Atwater, of Yale College, the following table will show the chemical composition of YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Albuminoids | 12.45 | Sugar | 11.06 |
| Gum | 5.21 | Starch | 55.62 |
| Fat | 8.59 | Cellulose | 2.96 |
| Ash | 2.12 | | |

It will be seen that the Albuminoids (albumen, gluten, casein, etc.) constitute nearly thirteen per cent. "These," says Voumans, "are the flesh-forming principles—the true elements of nutrition."

It is particularly valuable to all requiring a highly nutritious and at the same time easily assimilated diet, and hence is used as an article of daily consumption in climates which occasion rapid waste of the system. "Almost all Asiatics, Africans and (aboriginal) Americans use it as their chief nourishment."—Louis Figuier, in his work on the Vegetable World.

In Hermetically-sealed YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN all the nutritive qualities of the grain are preserved. The grain is cut from the ear and placed in the canisters with the rich juices (or milk) which exude from it, and is then sealed air-tight and the canister subjected to steam heat, which coagulates the albumen. In this condition it will keep for years. It will be seen by this that all the nutritive properties of the grain are preserved, and the most nourishing article of food in the domain of nature placed within the reach of all.

The Child's Corner.

CUDDIE'S COMPLAINT.

BY REVERE B. COMPTON.

I'm tired of all the children—
Pink and ugly they
Look at me and laugh at me
And chatter all the day.
The clock ticks down to three o'clock and then
And scurried up the walk and home
I can't at all go out to play
And so I'm really tired today.

I'm really tired of playing
With all the things at home
And really tired of play
I wish the boys would come
They stay so really sick at school
I think that Pete has missed a rule
Or Ray forgot, and laughed some more
Just as he did one time before.

And May—the last baby—oh
Always all the while to look after I'm ashamed of her, but really she
Where no little child is wrong,
And mamma sews and sews and sews
And cluck to-go the old chime goes
She's made May and me a dress
Isn't better for her than I guess—

I hear the wind a-blowin
And shakin' at the rain
And see the people goin
So fast—it's getting late.
If papa'd only come, I'd give—
That's him at the door, I do believe
The china keeps still, and I hear May call
And I'm not so really tired at all.

Grandma's Bear Story.

AN ACTUAL OCCURRENCE.

BY ELINOR KENDIG.

Grandma liked old-fashioned ways and things, and never would consent to have a "gassy coal stove" in her room, but insisted on keeping her own old "Franklin" there, with its big folding doors ready for a fire inside of them, summer as well as winter, for, as she said: "There is often a cool evening in summer, when a little fire is pleasant." She always had plenty of company such evenings, for when twilight came the little ones flocked in there from their outdoor play, delighted to cuddle down before the pleasant open fire and listen to grandma's stories of old times. When the "Franklin" doors were wide open the bright fire-light glanced in every corner of the room, so that grandma's fingers, aided by the practice of many years, could easily guide her knitting-needles around the little stocking that was always her evening work.

"Grandma," said Jason one evening, when they quieted down after a very noisy romp, "Grandma, tell us about the time when you were a little girl and used to go after the cows through the woods, and chased the bear."

"Oh," said grandma, "will you never be tired hearing that old story? You must know it all by heart by this time; you had better tell it to me."

"Oh, no, no, grandma; please do tell us that one," cried the other children, knowing from experience that coaxing would bring grandma to terms.

And grandma commenced: "When I was a little girl it was all woods around here; there were no houses except the log-house we lived in, and there was not another one nearer than the Cooper settlement, which was three miles away. I remember the day we came here. I was ten years old then—about as old as some of you are now; my brother Alex. was two years younger than I. My father had come on a few weeks before the family, to build a house for us to live in. He and Uncle John had cut down trees and built a house of the logs, and had made a chimney of wooden slats. The side next the fire was plastered with clay. The hearth, of large, flat stones, was not laid yet, but father built a roaring fire on the ground at the bottom of the chimney, and soon there was ready a nice bed of coals for mother to put the supper over. Uncle John had caught a nice spotted trout in the creek to have ready for our suppers when, all tired and hungry, we reached our new home. Mother put the fish in the frying-pan on the hottest coals, and some potatoes to roast in the ashes, and a short-cake in the bake-kettle. Oh, nothing will ever taste so good to me again," said grandma, "as the supper did that night. We were all so hungry, and so happy, and so glad to be all together again. I can remember just how the fish smelled as I sat on the board floor, with my feet hanging down to the bare ground where the stone hearth was to be, watching mother as she moved the frying-pan from one place to another on the coals, so that it would get the best heat.

"I remember, too, looking up through the roof that still lacked several boards at one end, and seeing the great branches of the forest-trees waving against the blue sky far above our house. They seemed so high, so far away, that I thought heaven would be very near if one could but climb to their tops."

Grandma here lapsed into a reverie which lasted so long that the boys became impatient, and were greatly relieved when she roused herself with a sigh, and continued: "There were but few Indians here then; they had mostly gone farther west; those that still lingered along our creek lived by hunting and fishing. They would not work, and they would steal; so we were all glad when they wandered off in search of their tribe. I think they were Cayugas. The deer and bears were mostly gone, too; they retreated, as did the Indian, before the white man. Father and Uncle John shot two deer and a bear the first year we lived here, but they never saw any after that first year. I never saw a bear in the woods but once, and I'll tell you about that now.

"My brother Alex. and I had to go for the cows every night. They were pastured in the woods, and sometimes strayed a mile or two from the house. One of them had a bell on her neck, so that, hearing it, we might know in what direction to look for them, as they always kept together—two cows and a little black heifer.

"One night Alex. and I were so busy at play that we forgot all about the cows until we were startled by father's voice asking us where they were. Great was our consternation to find that it was past sundown, and getting darker every moment. We begged of father to go with us; we were afraid. But he said: 'No, this will teach you a lesson you will not forget; you must go alone. There will nothing hurt you.'

"We hurried off through the woods, starting at every shadow we saw and every sound we heard. By the time we found the cows it was so dark that we could not have told old 'whiteface' from the other, only that she had the bell. The black heifer was missing: we hunted awhile, and, not finding her, concluded to go back without her, as it was getting so dark we were afraid we could not find our way home. We started the cows along, and had gone but a few steps when Alex. said: 'Halloo! there's the black heifer. I'm glad she's come; father would have scolded us for leaving her.' When the heifer heard his voice she stopped, turned, and looked at us, as if she was inclined to come toward us instead of going home; but we shouted at her with all our might, for we didn't want to lose her again, and she turned and trotted after the cows. Several times she stopped in the same way, and we had to shout and drive her along. I remember that Alex. said: 'Nan, what does ail that heifer? Seems to me she acts queer.' When we came to the cleared land the heifer stopped again, and when we tried to drive her farther she growled at us, and, turning suddenly, climbed right over the top of a high rail fence, and we heard her run, growling, off into the woods.

"'It's a bear,' exclaimed Alex.; 'let's run!' and run we did. We raised the cows home at such a rate that the jingling bell brought mother out of the house to wonder what in the world those children were racing the cows for: it would just ruin the butter.' But telling our adventure soon cut short her reproofs; she hurried us into the house, and fastened the door and windows as soon as father and Uncle John had started off with guns and lantern to see if it really had been a bear. Sure enough, by the light of the lantern they found bear-tracks just where we told them to look, and they tracked it a couple of miles into the woods, then, losing the track, they came home. A few days after we heard that a neighbor, who lived several miles away, had shot a young black bear, and we always felt sure it was the one Alex. and I tried to drive home with the cows."

Grandma paused, but the children said: "Oh, don't stop; do tell another story; tell about the rattlesnake that Uncle Alex. killed." But grandma said: "No; no more this time. Good night."

But Jason was not to be dismissed in such a summary manner. "Was that a true story, grandma?" he said.

"Certainly it was true," grandma answered; "it happened right here on this farm, more than fifty years ago, when I was a little girl," and grandma sighed again and wiped her spectacles thoughtfully, remembering that she was the only living member of the family who began pioneer life in western New York.—Christian Union.

Farm, Garden and Household.

STAKES FOR TOMATOES.—Thomas Meehan, the horticulturist of Germantown, Pennsylvania, says he has for several years noted the relative advantages of the different ways of cultivating tomatoes, and he concludes that the best practice to adopt is to proceed as with Lima beans—that is, set the stakes before the plants are put out. These stakes need not be over six feet high, and may be set about four feet apart each way. As the plants grow tie them up to the stakes; but that will not be required over half a dozen times during the season. Twenty plants in this way will yield as much fruit as double that quantity on any other plan, and in quality there is no comparison.

The common field plan of leaving tomatoes to grow as they list, spreading everywhere over the ground, may be, as truck-growers say it is, the way in which the heaviest weight of fruit can be had in proportion to the labor spent; but in this way the fruit is more acid. But whatever system is adopted, do not set the plants until the soil is warm, or they will be stunted and time lost.

BREEDING PEACEABLE BEES.—At a recent meeting of the American Bee Keepers' Association, at Indianapolis, it was asserted that it had been found that bees are peaceable and quiet, and transmit these characteristics to their progeny. Mrs. Tupper had found that an improvement in this respect might be accomplished by rearing queens from those mothers whose workers were peaceable. In this, as in all else, qualities are hereditary; and we should pay more attention to this point. She had one queen from Lombardy whose workers were uniformly gentle and good-tempered, and, without an exception, one hundred queens reared from her, produced workers of unusual docility. When this disposition can be secured it is worth laboring for, and is of more value than markings or color. By attention to this for generations we may secure a race easily without sacrificing any valuable traits.

BLEEDING AT THE NOSE.—This is commonly a harmless affection, although individuals have repeatedly been known to have died from it. In childhood and early youth it is idiopathic, dependent upon active congestion. In old age it is symptomatic, and the result of passive congestion. When habitual its suspension betokens disease or danger.

Various means are adopted for its control—raising both arms over the head and holding them for a time is usually successful. The best remedy, when it can be obtained, is a bunch of common tansy held to the nose, and the aroma snuffed up into the nostrils. How it acts we do not know, but we are certain it stops the nose-bleed.

SEVERE PRUNING.—The evil effects of severe summer-pruning on fruit-trees are now clearly recognized. All pruning, winter or summer, is an injury to vitality. Frequently the injury is so slight that the tree soon recovers, and, some other advantage being gained, pruning on the whole may be a benefit. It is well, however, to always keep in view the principle that pruning always weakens, in order to do as little of it as possible consistently with what we wish to accomplish.—Gardeners' Monthly.

WHITEWASH THAT WILL STICK: To five gallons of whitewash made of well-burned white lime add a quarter of a pound of whiting or burnt alum pulverized, half a pound of loaf sugar, one quart and a half of rice flour made into a thin and well-cooked paste, and half a pound of white glue dissolved in water. Apply warm. Previously scrape off all old scaly whitewash. This is in the nature of kal-somine, and gives most brilliant and lasting effects.

IT IS STATED that Max Müller, Froude and Charles Kingsley are all brothers-in-law, having married the three daughters of a rich London merchant.

MACHINERY, TIES, ETC.

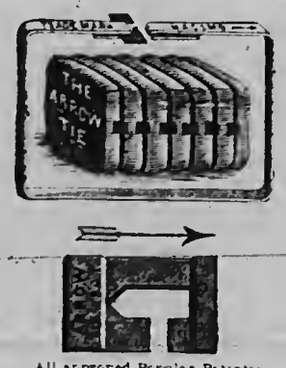
THE DUBOIS FLANGE COTTON GIN.

By the Flange the Cotton is kept in contact with a feeder, and with the flange it takes it to the seed, without allowing them to be taken up by the return motion of the roll, as in other Gins.

The Flange prevents hulls, stems, sticks and hard substances from being cut, consequently making a better sample out of roughly-picked cotton than other Gins.



We have sold more from this point than any agency of any other Gin for the crop of 1872-3, consequently we can furnish more and better references, and they are warranted to come up to all that is said of them.

We keep constantly on hand all sizes, from 40 to 80-SAW STANDS, left or right. Prices & per Saw.

With a full Corps of Assistants.
Session Begins September 15, 1873,
AND ENDS JUNE 17, 1874.

To Southern Methodist parents I would call attention to this institution. Convinced that here the Southern people would find every inducement in the way of economy, comfort, health and accomplishment for the education of their daughters, my wife and myself recently consented, at the solicitation of the proprietors, to assume its control. We are Southern people, and had been teaching in Alabama and Mississippi eighteen years previous to our removal to Kentucky. We have other a thousand pupils in the South. Desiring a favorable location and opportunities for doing good, we readily consented to removal. Send your daughters to Crab Orchard Springs. Our college building is the finest south of the Ohio river. Our equipments exceed those of any other in the Gulf states. It is lighted with gas, will be warmed by steam, with water pipes running through the entire building, has numerous bath-rooms, and every other convenience of a modern city hotel. The building has been newly equipped—every room elegantly carpeted and furnished. Only two pupils in a room.

Full board and tuition, only $250 per scholastic year, without any extra charges.

We challenge the strictest inquiry. Send for pamphlets, containing every information. We are Methodists, and wish to obtain the patronage of our Methodist brethren. Address

SWAIM'S CELEBRATED PANACEA

HAS LONG ATTRACTED THE NOtice of the most eminent physicians by its great efficacy in curing what were considered incurable cases of disease, where the patients have been almost destroyed by SCROFULA, etc., and Prof. Valentine Mott, of the New York University, Profs. Gibson, Dewees and Chapman, of Philadelphia, and many other physicians of celebrity, gave, over their own signatures, letters recommending it and certifying to its great merits. It has been occasionally advertised, and thousands of families throughout the United States recommend and use it. The Laboratory is under the direction of Dr. FRANKLIN STEWART, who has devoted his attention and skill in its careful preparation during the past twenty-five years, and not a bottle put up that is not worth many times its cost to the patient. It is perfectly safe for the most diseased and debilitated, and in all cases where the Blood is not pure it should be used freely.

Prepared only at SWAIM'S LABORATORY, 113 South Seventh street, below Chestnut, Philadelphia.

New Orleans Markets.

From the New Orleans Price Current.

The river is 11 feet 11 inches below high-water mark.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the investigation ceased:

|---|---|
| Louisiana and Mississippi | bales. 1 |
| Total | 19 |

On Saturday the sales reached 1,000 bales at previous rates, and on Monday 1,500 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. On Tuesday 1,000 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. On Wednesday 1,500 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. On Thursday 1,000 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. On Friday 1,000 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. Monday's sales were 1,000 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. Tuesday's sales were 1,000 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. Wednesday's sales were 1,000 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. Thursday's sales were 1,000 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. Friday's sales were 1,000 bales at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling.

Buyers were unwilling to pay the full prices of the week, and the demand continued to decline throughout the day, but operations being restricted by short supplies several lots of planting cottons up their samples, the same were purchased to-day at 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. Good ordinary sold at 15c., strict good ordinary at 15½c., low middling at 15½c., strict low middling at 15¾c., and strict low middling to middling at 15¾c. Additional strength was imparted to prices by an advance of ¼d. at New York and 1/16d. in middling uplands at Liverpool. On Tuesday the market was up their samples, the same were purchased to 16c. for middling and 16¼c. for strict good middling. Good ordinary sold at 15c., strict good ordinary at 15½c., low middling at 15½c., strict low middling at 15¾c., and strict low middling at 15¾c. The demand ruled moderate at previous prices. Additional strength was imparted to prices by an advance of ¼d. at New York and 1/16d. in middling uplands at Liverpool. On Tuesday the market was active throughout the day and 1,500 bales changed hands at prices showing a further improvement of ¼c. per lb. for middling and strict low middling and ¼c. per lb. for other grades. Among the sales to-day we noticed low middling at 15½c., strict low middling at 15¾c., and strict low middling at 15¾c. The demand ruled mostly on these descriptions. The supplies of the lower grades are limited and quotations for them are a great extent nominal.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 4,376 bales, against 2,598 the corresponding time last week and 1,270 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 21,654 bales against 9,993 to the same date last year, and the decrease in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates as compared with last year is 7,430 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries as compared with the same date last year, there is a decrease of 50,000 to Great Britain, of 7,000 to France and of 2,000 to other foreign ports. THE New Hope and Pleasant Ridge camp meetings for the Kosciusko circuit, Mississippi conference, will begin on Friday night before the second Sunday in October next. Ministers to be selected from the adjoining circuits. Conveyance to the camp ground from Lake Station, Mobile and Ohio railroad, will be furnished on Friday to ministers coming by railroad.

D. G. W. ELLIS, Pastor.

Appointments for Quarterly Meetings.

NOTICE.—The Publishing Committee of the ADVOCATE give it as their opinion that the insertion of the notices of Quarterly Conferences once or twice was sufficient and as the space in the paper is valuable, they passed a resolution recommending that they be not inserted more than twice more. Our friends who are interested in these appointments will see that we have opened, as we propose to be governed by the resolution in future.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS, Oct. 1.—The continued heavy rains have damaged the cotton crop throughout the entire lower Rio Grande valley. The worm has made its appearance on a number of plantations in this vicinity. Some fields look as though a heavy frost had visited them, while those on the low lands are covered with several inches of water, rendering it impossible to gather the crop.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 1.—No deaths and no new cases for the last twenty-four hours. All apprehension over. The last person reported under treatment is doing well. The people who left here are returning to their business, and the yellow fever scare is at an end. There is no need of apprehension of danger in visiting Montgomery.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The reception of the delegates of the Evangelical Alliance at the Young Men's Christian Association to-night was attended by an immense crowd. The flags of all nations were displayed, and the names of Calvin, Knox, Wycklif, Bunyan and Edwards were in gilt letters over the platform. Rev. Dr. Adams delivered the opening address, welcoming those present, from this country and from abroad, in the name of the Christian people of this country, as fellow-citizens of the saints of the household of God.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 2.—At a meeting of the Hebrews $1,200 was subscribed for the Memphis and Shreveport yellow fever sufferers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Evangelical Conference opened by prayer this morning at Madison Square church. The formal opening for business took place later, at Steinway hall. The hall was crowded to excess with delegates. They swarmed out on the lobbies and stairs at either end of the block through which the hall extends. The large platform was so crowded, as early as ten o'clock, that there was hardly standing-room. Oriental delegates in white tarleton were conspicuous objects in the vicinity of the chair.

HON. WILLIAM E. DODGE called the meeting to order and said:

"You are here assembled from all parts of the world—from countries having institutions and laws quite different from ours. As for us, we seek no alliance with the State. We only ask protection and the full enjoyment of religious liberty. (Great applause.) We trust that many of you will have the opportunity of visiting our far Western lands, and beyond our inland seas, and of seeing the marvelous extension our country is undergoing. When we visit your countries we are deeply interested in looking over the works of centuries—your grand cathedrals and your cities of renown. When you come here we ask you to look at what has mainly been accomplished in a single century.

"The object of your meeting has been discussed for a long time, and the country is alive to this convocation. Not only our own, but other lands are viewing you with intense interest. The eyes of God and man are on us. (Applause.) Let us hope that the blessing of God may be upon us. Everything possible has been done for your comfort. I give you the sentiments of all our hearts—a most cordial welcome to our country, our homes and our hearts." (Applause.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—A telegram was received by the President yesterday, from General Emory, commanding the United States troops at New Orleans, asking if it would not be advisable to send five thousand rations to the Shreveport sufferers, and the President replied directing him to send them at once, without waiting for official forms.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 3.—There were forty-one interments yesterday.

An appeal for aid to the different States says: "The fever is increasing daily. Business is suspended.

"The charitable societies are exhausted. Money is what we need to pay the nurses, buy food, bury the dead and shelter the orphans and helpless."

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The vessels which arrived from Europe to-day have $500,000 of bullion. It will be deposited in the sub-treasury on Monday.

The Evangelical Conference was again crowded to-day. A sub-meeting was organized at Dr. Crosby's church, and a short prayer delivered in French. Dr. Charles Hodge, of Princeton Theological Seminary, addressed the conference.

The call for a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen on Monday, to tender the hospitalities of the city to the Evangelical Alliance, has thus far received but three signatures. The Board of Aldermen refused to sign, asserting that the Evangelical Alliance was a sectarian body, and should not receive recognition by officials representing all sects.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 5.—Forty-eight interments yesterday, including 26 from yellow fever. For the week there were 240 deaths, of which 146 were from yellow fever, against 98 deaths last week. Total number of deaths since the disease appeared, 502; all of which, save a few, occurred in the infected district.

The German Buraderbend earnestly appeals to German societies and Germans generally for aid in nursing their sick and burying their dead. Contributions to be sent to F. Shilling, treasurer.

Helena, Arkansas, has been rigidly quarantined against Memphis.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The President has requested the Secretary of War to direct the Commissary General to send ten thousand rations to Memphis, Tennessee, for the yellow fever sufferers.

Liberal sums were collected in the churches yesterday for Memphis.

A telegram has been received here from the Howard Association at Shreveport expressing gratitude for the action of the government in sending rations for the sufferers there.

HOUSTON, Oct. 6.—A committee of Galveston and Houston physicians, just returned here from Calvert, unanimously pronounce the prevailing fever there genuine yellow fever. Forty-two cases, all told, have been reported.

SHREVEPORT, Oct. 7.—A light frost was visible in the vicinity yesterday morning, but its effects have not been felt here upon the epidemic, since no marked change can be reported for the past twenty-four hours.

The same number of new cases have been reported from the city to-day as were reported yesterday, while the suburbs report but a slight falling off. By this time the city proper has been pretty well gone through by the disease, and the chastisement now falls upon the suburbs principally, but with the disease of a generally milder type than it was in the city proper. Yet even there, when a family is attacked, rarely a single member escapes being taken down.

All the physicians report a majority of their patients doing well.

Interments to-day, eight, to seventeen yesterday.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 7.—The state of the fever is deplorable, and the disease is spreading with alarming rapidity.

The undertakers are crowded with orders. Nineteen nurses arrived from New Orleans on Saturday.

Twenty thousand dollars were subscribed by the citizens for sanitary purposes.

The mortality on Sunday was greater than it has been since the fever appeared. All who are able are leaving. The malady is pronounced true yellow fever. There were fifty-four interments yesterday.

Rev. Mr. Bowman, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, died from the fever.

FOREIGN.

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 23, via Havana.—A farewell banquet was given to ex-Minister Nelson by Mr. Barrow. Sixty guests were present, among them the President of the republic, the members of the cabinet, Mr. Foster, the present minister of the United States, and the chiefs of foreign legations.

President Lerdo made a speech, complimenting Messrs. Nelson and Foster, and praising the government and people of the United States.

Congress, on the twentieth, adopted an amendment to the ninth article of the constitution to the following effect: A deputy elected to Congress, before taking his seat, must swear without reservation to support the constitution of the republic and laws of reform, and all other laws passed in accordance therewith; to perform the duties of the office which the people have conferred upon him with a single eye for the good of his country and the prosperity of the union, accepting the gratitude of the nation if he is faithful, and submitting to its condemnation if he fails to observe this obligation. The passage of the amendment is an important victory for the friends of the constitution, who make up the Liberal party, and indicates that liberal laws will continue to dominate in the Congress of 1873.

MADRID, Oct. 1.—Dissensions in the ranks of the Carlists are increasing. The leaders Dorregarry, Roda and Lizzaraga have left their commands and arrived at Bayonne.

A number of Carlist deserters are surrendering to the Republican troops in the province of Lerida, with the hope of receiving amnesty.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Sir Edward Landseer, the celebrated painter, is dead.

MADRID, Oct. 6.—The Carlists are fast losing in the northern provinces. They are utterly demoralized, and the men accuse their leaders of treason. General Morianes, commander of the Republican troops, is energetically advancing against them.

The siege of Carthagena is proceeding actively. The firing is very sharp on both sides. Many of the insurrectionists desert daily and surrender to the Republican forces.

MADRID, Oct. 7.—A column of two thousand insurgents made a desperate sortie from Carthagena to-day, but was driven back with heavy losses in killed and wounded. On the arrival of the government fleet off the port, the city will be attacked on all sides simultaneously.

A dispatch was received at the ministry of war to day from General Morinez, announcing a great victory by his troops over a large body of Carlists, near Agurzeuza, in the province of Navarre. Many of the insurgents were killed, and a large number taken prisoners. General Morinez says the route of the insurgents is complete, and his forces are in close pursuit of them.

From the Work.

PHILADELPHIA CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The camp meeting on the Philadelphia circuit is over. Everything passed off well, and better behavior I never witnessed. A good arbor was built and the debt paid off. The first sermon was preached on Friday night, and the exercises closed the next Thursday morning. We had a good time. Old-style Methodist singing and shouting were among the characteristics of the meeting from the beginning to the end, while the old woods re-echoed the hallelujahs of new-born souls to God. I think not less than forty (some think fifty) professed faith in Christ. The most of these were already members of the church. Nine adults and ten children were added. The church and all who took part in the services were greatly revived.

AUTAUGAVILLE, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: Some weeks ago I held a meeting of nine days' continuance at Ivy Creek, which resulted in several conversions and ten accessions. In this meeting I had the assistance of my presiding elder, Dr. A. H. Mitchell, from Saturday morning until Wednesday night. Considering all the difficulties in our way, the meeting was a successful one. I have just closed a meeting of six days' continuance at Mount Zion, an old church which was thrown away two years ago, and was considered dead, which has resulted in twenty-seven conversions and thirty accessions. These, with the original members and a few others who have removed their membership from other places to that, give us there now forty-nine members. This has been one of the best meetings I have ever attended. Among the accessions are five heads of families, and some of them the most prominent men in the community. I had the assistance of Bro. L. S. Rice, an exhorter in our church, and of some very efficient lay members, male and female. And, after all, this is the very best kind of help in a revival meeting.

W. A. MONTGOMERY.

MOUNT CARMEL CIRCUIT.—Mr. Editor: We have closed to-day a very interesting meeting at Santee church. We begin here last Saturday. Bro. Hoover, a local minister from Summit, was in attendance and rendered efficient service during the meeting. Bro. E. J. Taylor, from Enon circuit, arrived on Wednesday and continued with us until the meeting closed. The altar was generally crowded with seekers, and frequently the power of God in the congregation was so great that many wept, while some shouted aloud his praises. At the close of the meeting we received thirteen into the church according to our form of Discipline. Not only at Santee, but at other points on the Mount Carmel circuit has the church been built up. We had a very good meeting on the fourth Sunday in last month at Blackjack church, on Dry creek. Five were added to the church, and the membership encouraged and strengthened.

Our quarterly meeting was interesting, the attendance was large, and the presence of God was with us. The presiding elder was there, and labored with more than ordinary zeal.

On the fifth Sunday in last month we held a protracted meeting at Good Hope, in Covington county, where the religious interest was but little behind what we experienced at Santee. Four members were received into the church of God, and the spirits of the membership generally revived.

THE Tropics, a newspaper published in Tuxpan, Mexico, contains the following sketch of the Washington colony. It was settled by Confederates at the end of the war.

The colony is situated on the Tuxpan river, in the upper part of the State of Vera Cruz, and about one hundred miles north of the city of Vera Cruz. The Tropics says:

"During the existence of this colony, many others settled at different points on the river, and opened small farms on the Tuxpan lands; others purchased lands from haciendas and engaged in the cultivation of cane. Many came, and in a short time returned. Since the failure of Washington colony there has been no organized colony, and there is now no established colony at Tuxpan. All who have applied themselves energetically have succeeded, and are doing well. Among them are some cultivating from sixty to one hundred acres, and erecting steam machinery. One large mill and engine are now in operation, and three others, of somewhat less capacity, will be erected during the present season.

"We can safely say, without the fear of being accused of exaggeration, that the American immigrants are rapidly progressing, notwithstanding the many disadvantages with which they have to contend, and the number is being augmented by the arrival of every vessel from Galveston. On the fifth of September a schooner from Galveston and Rockport arrived with forty passengers, and on the fourteenth another from Galveston with eight, nearly all of whom will become actual settlers and will engage in sugar-planting. Besides these, a few weeks since a large party arrived by overland from Texas, all of whom, we believe, are settled.

"Very nearly all the Americans here are from the State of Texas."

Hot Springs of Arkansas.

BY A. L. P. GREEN, D. D.

As to the medicinal property of the water we can only judge of that by the effect produced, which, in many instances, is truly wonderful. Take, for instance, a case of which I have some knowledge, having interested myself in raising a little purse to pay for his humble board. He had been thrown into a wagon, which was coming to the springs from Little Rock, as you would throw in a worthless, filthy bundle; he was almost naked, and the miserable garments that he had on him were cemented fast to his body by the discharges from his ulcers. He had on him something more than eighty ulcers, some of them as large as a man's hand. He could not be admitted into any regular bath, but was carried to the hillside bath, which is a small excavation in the cavernous rock, filled with water from a hot spring close by. He was tumbled into this pool, and in two weeks he was walking about, the lesser ulcers already healed, and in six weeks was cured, with scarcely a scar to be seen. A kind and merciful God has given to these waters the power of healing the most loathsome diseases. This fact, when it shall be known throughout the land, will bring unnumbered thousands here, for here they can find health, soundness of health, and nowhere else in the world. Persons suffering with all kinds of diseases are here seeking relief; many are cured, others partly relieved, while some go away without being benefited.

I was told before I came here that consumptives would be injured by these baths; while the facts, so far as I can gather them, are to the contrary. I am told that persons who are affected with heart disease are damaged by the bath. I buried one of this class the other day. He took a bath and died that night. All diseases of the skin are either cured or more or less relieved. I met the other day a black boy who said to me: "Don't you know me? Don't you know Tom, who used to work for you?" Poor Tom, when he left my house, was so eaten up with scrofula that he was an offense to the sight. He came here and tumbled into this hillside bath, not able even to obtain the advice of a doctor. He is now a well, slick, healthy negro.

There should be some provision for the poor, and I suppose if once the title to the property is settled there will be. At present it is a sight which will not soon be forgotten to go to this hillside bath when the poor, moneyless, afflicted come to the bath. You will be filled with wonder, disgust and astonishment. And it is worthy of note that while the rich will give a dollar now and then for their relief, yet it is true that the poor help each other. A man that has use of one leg with his crutch will help the man who has no use of his legs at all; and it is sad to find many of them full of vulgarity and blasphemy; and yet they are more inclined to help each other than were those in the porches of the pool of Siloam; for some person will help the meanest of the men into the pool. Here you have such as the following: some poor fellow outside wants to get into the mud-hole, as they call it, while some one already in the bath will curse him, and tell him to wait a little while till he should come out, and that he would drag his rotten carcass into the bath; and it is sometimes dragging, sure enough; and while poor, diseased men have this roll-hole, as they call it, poor, unfortunate women have no provision made for them at all, though I am told that some of them visit this same pool at the dead hour of night. There are beside this general bath several small holes where persons go and take a foot-bath. There is water enough running from these springs to bathe many thousands every day; and the water may be carried in pipes to almost any distance; and it does not lose its virtue when carried in a close pipe. The time will come when all of these springs will be utilized.

With respect to the moral aspect of the place, I should say it is not good. The Methodists had the misfortune to have their house of worship burned some time ago, and have not found themselves able to rebuild. The Catholics have a house and a priest, and I suppose a small congregation. The Episcopalians have a house, but no regular preacher, and but few members. The Presbyterians have neither house nor preacher. The Baptists have a small house, badly located, but no regular preacher. The Methodists have a preacher and a congregation, and worship in the Baptist church. The preacher is a young man of talents and usefulness, but feels himself fettered because he has no house. His Sunday-school is a union school, so that our Sunday school literature cannot be admitted, and badly do they need it. This is a great drawback these days; the time was when the church prospered without a Sunday school, but that time has passed. There are a number of good and pious people in this valley, but the multitude pay no attention to church matters. I think if the Methodists had a comfortable house for worship, and located; that an active, working minister might do great good. I have preached for the people almost every Sabbath since I have been here—sometimes in the Episcopal church (it has not been dedicated,) but mostly in the Baptist church. The congregations have been good generally, while quite an interest has been manifested to hear the word; but there has been nothing like a revival among the people. I was called on to bury a young man the other day who was intensely a stranger. I was only able to get his name by reference to the register; no one knew where he lived, where he was from; his age had to be guessed at; we could not tell whether he was a single man or man of family; and as to his moral character no one knew a word.

There is a wide field for pastoral work among the hundreds who are sick in this valley. The country generally is such as would suit, it seems to me, a man of moderate means. In the depression, and along the watercourses, there are small tracts of good land, where abundance of grain, fruits and vegetables might be raised, and these springs will always furnish a good market for any surplus. The country is healthy, and the climate a pleasant one, and the lands can be bought low, very low, and railroads are beginning to open the country up to the rest of the world. I wish, doctor, that you had the time to spend a few months here, and with the rest and the baths I think your wasted sight would be restored. I have written a long letter, and you can take any liberty with it that you wish.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

The Shah on Religious Liberty.

The Shah, while in England, replied to the addresses sent him on the subject of religious liberty in Persia. The following is his reply to the Evangelical Alliance:

"BUCKINGHAM PALACE, July 5, 1873.

"I am commanded by the Shah to acknowledge the receipt of your address, praying for his majesty's continued protection of the Nestorian community, and that toleration may distinguish the laws and administration of his majesty's government. His majesty is pleased to think that such toleration is already universal in Persia, no one, whether Christian or Jew or Parsee, being subjected to persecution or ill treatment on account of his religion. His majesty will continue in this course of even-handed justice, regarding all classes of his subjects with equal care and solicitude. His majesty is gratified by the expression of your good wishes.

MALCOM."

His reply to the addresses presented by the Parsee inhabitants of Bombay and London is as follows:

"BUCKINGHAM PALACE, July 5, 1873.

"To Mr. Nowrozjee Furdoonjee, 15 Salisbury street, Strand:

"I am commanded by his majesty the Shah to acknowledge the receipt of your memorials, praying for the application of measures which are calculated to improve the condition of the Zoroastrians in Persia. His majesty will give this subject his best attention on his return to Persia, and if he finds that your co-religionists are subject to any undue severities he will take care that redress is afforded them. His majesty is aware of the high character which is borne by the Parsee community, both in England and India, and he is glad he numbers among his own subjects so many of that enterprising and loyal race. His majesty is gratified by the expression of your good wishes in regard to him.

MALCOM."

The following letter, in relation to the Jews, was addressed to Sir Moses Montefiore:

"BUCKINGHAM PALACE, July 5, 1873.

"I am commanded by his majesty the Shah to acknowledge the receipt of your memorial, praying that favor and protection may be generally extended to the Jews in Persia. His majesty has always manifested solicitude for the welfare of his subjects, without distinction of class or creed, and he will take care that no injustice or undue severity is shown to the Jewish community, whom you rightly characterize as loyal, peaceable and industrious citizens. His majesty thanks you for the good wishes you have expressed in regard to him.

MALCOM."

THE POET WHITTIER CONFUSED. An amusing story is told of the poet Whittier, who is as modest as he is gifted. He was in the city not long since, and went to hear Rev. E. H. Chapin speak a lecture, somewhere up town. The clergyman was eloquent, as usual; his discourse, interlarded with highly-wrought passages of rhetoric, closing with a stirring poetical quotation, so well delivered that the Quaker bard applauded with the rest. Some one sitting next him inquired: "Do you know, Mr. Whittier, who is the author of that extract?" "No; I do not. It sounds familiar, and I like the sentiment." "Why, the lines are yours, Mr. Whittier. You must remember them. They are from your famous anti-slavery odes." "So they are," said Whittier, after a little reflection, and blushing like a school-girl caught reading her first love-letter. "I really did not recall them. Indeed, they sounded so much better than they ever sounded before that it is not strange that I failed to recognize them." The poet, thoroughly sincere, did not recover for some time from the embarrassment of outwardly acclaiming his own composition; but has now come to regard it as so good a joke that he tells it of himself.—New York Letter to Chicago Tribune.

Mass Trade at Rome.

BY REV. EDWARD CORNET.

The mass trade at Rome is a very considerable branch of industry. Masses are bought and sold as any other merchandise in the market; but, to avoid any sign of simony, the money made by the traffic is called an alms. Of course the priest celebrates the mass by duty and by devotion, but the faithful for whom the mass is said must offer some retribution to the priest as a mark of piety. This is nothing but the mask with which the Romish Church hides her subtlety. In her solicitude for the virtue of her priests, the holy church allows them to accept this retribution with all meekness as an alms. Thus that which is nothing but simony becomes an act of Christian virtue, for it is the privilege of papacy to change each vice into a virtue.

The number of masses which come into the Roman market is countless, and it brings a great deal of wealth to the divers religious corporations. The richness of a funeral, for example, depends on the number of masses said, and vanity combined with devotion work to the greatest benefit of the priests.

We will try to show how the trade is carried on. There is the wholesale and the retail trade, and there are contractors always ready to deal with any individual or family who need the services of the church. When a contractor is called upon, he inquires first about the number of masses to be celebrated; then he makes a price for the whole. Often there is a debate between the parties; the applicant finds the price too high and he tries to beat it down. But it is not an easy thing to obtain; the contractor has his reasons—that is, "the times are hard, and it is no easy matter to find priests nowadays to undertake the job. After all, if the applicant is not satisfied, he can seek somewhere else for better conditions. Indeed, each one must live by his trade, and also it is the duty of the faithful to sustain the clergy." However, in spite of all his protestations, the contractor comes down with his price, because, in fact, he fears competition. A contractor, who often is the principal of a religious corporation, always seeks to secure a large number of masses, for then he will hold the market and he will be sure of large profit.

Before a mass be said it often passes in the hands of several parties; thus it happens that a mass for which is paid to the first contractor $5 will be said by some priest for the mere sum of five cents. Oftener the contracts are sold in second-hand to some sacristan, who sells them to the wandering priests—that is, those priests who till the streets of Rome and who come from every part of the world. Each morning these priests wander from church to church, inquiring of the sacristans if there is any job for them. As the sacristans must have their profits, they offer very low prices, so low that sometimes the priests will go away to seek better fortune. But generally they accept the offered price, but then, in order to compensate, they will try to get several contracts and perform all the jobs at once. The Roman theologians have not yet settled the question of the validity of such masses, but those who celebrate them and who profit by them count them excellent merchandise.

Sometimes the place where the masses are to be said is stipulated in the contract; but as it is not always convenient, for the profit of the contractor, to comply with that condition, the Pope has reserved to himself the right of dispensation. This dispensation, of course, is not obtained without a compensation; and then the contractor has to give a part of his profits to the Pope.

There is something better still. The Pope has also the right of discharging the contractor from the obligation of celebrating masses paid for. A church or a convent, for example, receives the price of ten thousand masses; they will celebrate four or five thousand; for the other part they will apply to the Pope, who, in virtue of his power, and under pretext that there is impossibility of fulfilling the contract, decrees that a priest shall celebrate one mass, which, in virtue of the intention, will account for the five or six thousand masses unsaid, but not unpaid.—Sometimes, when the profit is large, the Pope takes upon himself the trouble of celebrating the mass.

Such is the trade the Romish Church makes of one of the most sacred of her ceremonies. Indeed, it is the doctrine of that church that masses have the virtue of delivering souls from the torments of hell and of purgatory. When the priest officiates at the altar, the angels go down and lift up to heaven the soul of the dead, no matter how good or how wicked and degraded he may have been during his life. Scandalous traffic based upon a falsehood! What a condemnation it will bring upon those who, following such simony, dare to call themselves the disciples and representatives of the Savior!—Christian Intelligencer.

SILENCE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "PATSY'S FIRST GLIMPSE OF HEAVEN."

Silently falleth
The pitying snow;
Bountiful rivers
All silently flow;
Silently shineth
The sun in the sky;
Silently twinkle
The great lights on high;
Silently groweth
The corn in the field;
Silently, quietly
Deep wounds are healed;
Silently loving,
A strong heart is won;
Silently working,
A good deed is done.

Noisily waketh
The thunder's loud roar;
Noisily breaketh
The foam on the shore,
Loud is the cannon
And fierce is the strife
When man against man
Is warring for life.
Hatred is loud,
And contention doth cry:
But softer than summer
Is Pity's low sigh.
Words that are cruel
Are heeded by all;
But no man regardeth
When soft breezes fall.

Earth's loudest babbles
Will cease before long;
Goodness is silent,
And silence is strong.
The temple was builded
Without any clamor—
No voices of workmen,
Nor sounds of the hammer;
The kingdom of Heaven
In silence is growing;
The nations, like rivers,
Unto It are flowing.
We hear of the wicked,
Their vice and their woe,
But the prayers of the saints
Have no record below.

Infant Baptism,

AND THE DUTY OF PARENTS TO BRING THEIR CHILDREN TO CHRIST BY HOLY BAPTISM.

MR. EDITOR: Is infant baptism taught in the Holy Scriptures? Was it practiced by the apostles and the fathers in the primitive church? Now we propose to investigate this subject briefly.

If we turn to well-authenticated historic evidence we may trace it, commencing at the opening of the fifth century, back to the apostles.

Sozomen, A. D. 443, in his Ecclesiastical History, says: "Infant baptism was the custom of the church."

Augustine, A. D. 388, speaking of infant baptism, says: "The whole body of the church holds in the case of little infants baptized."

Pelagius said: "Men slander me, as if I denied the sacrament of baptism to infants."

Chrysostom, A. D. 380, says: "For this cause we baptize infants," etc.

Ambrose, A. D. 374, says: "By which those infants that are baptized are reformed," etc.

Basil, A. D. 360, says: "But any time of one's life is proper for baptism, be it day or night, be it but an hour or a minute."

Gregory, 260 years after the apostles, in speaking of baptism, says: "Hast thou an infant child? Let not wickedness have the advantage of time."

Optatus calls baptism a garment, and says: "It is not too big for infants, nor too small for men."

Cyprian, 150 years after the apostles, says: "But in respect to infants, they may be baptized at any time."

Origin, 110, says: "Infants, by the usage of the church, are baptized."

Tertullian, 100, admits infant baptism as the custom of the church.

Clement of Alexandria, 92, speaks of "raising an infant from the font."

Irenæus, 82 (he was born within about twenty years of the apostles' time, and was a disciple of Polycarp,) says: "All infants and children and boys and youth and old men" are proper subjects of baptism.

Justin Martyr, 40 years after the apostles, says: "Many who have been Christian disciples from childhood."

Hermas Pastor (it is generally believed was written in the apostolic age) says: "For all infants are honorable before God, and the first persons with him."

Thus the fathers conduct us back to the apostles, and in their ministry we have the record of ten baptisms, two without families—Paul and the eunuch. Five are records of large assemblies, as Pentecost. Three are of families—the families of Stephanas (First Corinthians i, 16,) Lydia (Acts xvi, 15,) and the jailer (Acts, xvi, 33.)

In the ministry of the apostles, whenever the head of a family was converted to Christianity, it is expressly stated that the family thereof was baptized, and the word for family is carefully selected to express the idea of father, mother and children. The Greek word used in these family baptisms is oikos, and means the family proper, and excludes servants, attendants, etc. Oikia, which is a different word, includes in its meaning servants, attendants, friends and any others who may be attached to a family. This word is not used in speaking of household or family baptism. See Dr. Summers on Baptism. The learned inform us that the Peshito Syriac translation, the oldest in the world, and believed by the best critics to have been made while the apostles were still living, in the case of Lydia, says: "She was baptized, and her children." In the case of the jailer it says: "And immediately he was baptized, he and the children of his household, all of them."—Louisville Debate, page 85.

This seems to be conclusive that the apostles practiced infant baptism. No custom was more common among the Jews in the time of the apostles, and for ages before, than the baptism of proselytes, including families and infants. The apostles were educated to household and infant baptism, and what could have been the construction which a Jew would have placed upon the language of Paul and Luke when they spoke of baptizing households? As including infants certainly.

The commission, as given in Matt. xxxiii, 19, is: "Go ye, therefore, and teach (or disciple) all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Here the command is, disciple, baptize; the class is, "all nations." Do infants belong to the class? If so, then the command extends to them as well as to any others of "the nations." But it is objected to this rule that if it extends the command to baptize to infants, because they belong to the class, "all nations," then it would extend to thieves, murderers, swearers, etc., because they belong to the class, "all nations." But do thieves, murderers, etc., sustain the same relation to Christ's kingdom that infants do? In Matthew xix, 14 it is said: "But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Mark x, 14: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God." Whenever it can be shown that thieves, murderers, etc., have any such relation to the kingdom of heaven as is here affirmed of little children, then will this objection have some force; not before. It is objected that there are essential parts of this commission which cannot be affirmed of infants; therefore they are not embraced in it. The commission embraces teaching, faith, salvation, damnation. An infant cannot be taught, it cannot believe, it cannot be damned; therefore it is not a proper subject of baptism. The objection is this: Children cannot repent, believe, be saved from sin, or be exposed to damnation. It will not be denied that Jesus Christ was baptized, and it will not be contended by any that he was not a suitable subject for baptism. But not one of these items of the commission could be affirmed of him. Could he repent? He was without sin. Could he exercise saving faith? He is "the author and finisher" of it. Himself the object of saving faith, could he be saved from sin? "He knew no sin." If, therefore, no one is a proper subject of baptism, but he who can repent, believe, be saved from sin, etc., then Jesus Christ was not a proper subject. The objection would thus prove a falsehood, and therefore is in itself false and sophistical.

Again, the same objection would disprove infant circumcision. What did circumcision stand connected with in the Scriptures? We read, Acts xv, 24: "Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law." In Galatians v, 3: "Every man who is circumcised is a debtor to do the whole law." Romans ii, 25: "Circumcision profiteth if thou keep the law." Could an infant at eight days of age "keep the law," and be "a debtor to do the whole law?" If the inability of the infant to exercise the faith, repentance, etc., of the commission proves him to be ineligible to the baptism connected with these, would not the inability of the infant to "keep the law," be "a debtor to do the whole law," etc., prove him ineligible to the circumcision connected with these? Thus the sophistry of this objection is shown.

In the commission, Matthew xxviii, 20, Christ said: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." What had Jesus commanded with reference to infants and his kingdom, which things they were to teach to these proselyted to Christ? In Matthew xix, 14 he said: "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The Savior made this declaration to define the relation of infants to his kingdom, and thus assigns the reason why they should not be kept from him. Now Christ had commanded to let "little children come to him," and in the commission he tells us to teach all things whatsoever he had commanded, including necessarily the bringing of little children to him. This cannot mean anything but the recognizing of their covenant relation to Christ, and the giving to them the token of that relation—baptism.

In Luke ix, 47, 48 it is said that Jesus "took a child and set him by him, and said unto them, Whosoever shall receive this child in my name, receiveth me." Matthew xviii, 5: "Shall receive one such little child in my name, receiveth me." Mark ix, 36 says Jesus "took him in his arms," showing that it was an infant child. Now what does Jesus command here in reference to little children? It is that his people shall receive them in his name. This is recognizing the child as Christ's subject, and treating him accordingly.

In these passages two things are made manifest:

1. The rights of infants are asserted in Matthew xix, 14: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." They are citizens, subjects.

2. The duty of the church to them is announced in Luke ix, 48: Receive them in the name of Jesus Christ. This implies their baptism, beyond doubt; else what does it mean?

With these facts before us we have no hesitation in affirming that if anything is made obligatory by the law of Christ's kingdom, by direct command, it is the baptism of infants—the duty of parents to bring them to Christ in baptism, and the duty of the church to receive them.

God in his wisdom and goodness created man an intelligent creature and a moral agent, and in his infancy helpless and entirely dependent upon his parents. In view of this condition God has implanted in the heart of the parents the strongest earthly attachment known to the human bosom—the love of parents to their children. This affection, controlling their wills, forces the parents to brave danger of every kind, to throw themselves between their children, danger and death. Hear King David, in Second Samuel xviii, 33: "O my son Absalom! my son, my son, Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!" Again, observe the anxiety of a mother as she watches over her suffering child. There is not anything too hard for her to do; toil and pain become pleasure, as she believes it will relieve her suffering child. Now in connection with this affection God has required the parents to "train up their children in the way they should go;" and then the promise: "When they are old they will not depart from it."—Proverbs xxii, 5. The apostle, in Ephesians vi, 4, says: "Bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." What are we to understand by this? Assuredly to bring them up in the church, as this is the place where they are to be nurtured, fed, instructed and admonished or warned. And according to the teaching of holy writ parents are required to exercise faith for their children while in their minority; not that they will be lost if dying in infancy, but it is a duty, resting on the parent for the good of the child when it comes to the years of accountability. In the case of the Syrophenician woman's daughter, when she wished her healed (Matthew xv, 22-28,) she said: "Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil," etc. "Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour." Again, in the case of the daughter of Jairus, in Mark v, 22-42: "When he saw him (Jesus) he fell at his feet, and besought him greatly, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death. I pray thee come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed," etc. "One came and said, Thy daughter is dead; why troublest thou the Master any further?" etc. "Jesus said, Be not afraid; only believe," etc.; "and straightway the damsel arose." Also in Luke viii, 41-55. Again, the child who had a dumb spirit (or lunatic,) Mark ix, 17-27: "Master, I have brought unto thee my son," etc., "but if thou canst do anything, have compassion on us and help us," etc. "Jesus said, If thou canst believe, all things are possible," etc. Matthew xvii, 14-18; Luke ix, 38-42; and the nobleman's son, in John iv, 50, 51: "Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed." These children were all healed on the faith of their parents; but the question arises: Why are the parents required to exercise faith for their children, and where is the advantage or benefit, since all children dying in infancy are saved through the merits of Christ, irrespective of their parents? The advantage is identically with that of bringing "them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord"—for the good accruing to them in after-life, and to the world at large. This is a common principle in the temporal affairs of this life. The parents are the guardians or trustees for their children in all temporal matters while in their minority—make contracts and invest for them, so that they may be benefited by it when they come to their majority. Man is here for the purpose of developing character, and the sooner it is commenced the more perfectly the moral character will be developed; and if the auspicious moment is neglected, then an immoral character is developed and the soul lost. Hence, "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it."—Proverbs xxii, 5. Oh, the responsibility resting on parents! May God give them wisdom to know, faith to believe, and grace to enable them to perform the duties resting upon them toward their children.

Corresponding to these responsibilities, God has given the parents the confidence of their children in their early life, so that the parents, in the infancy of the child, occupy in its mind the place of God himself—at least to some extent. To the child the parents are the highest, greatest good. They are the embodiment of wisdom, power and goodness, controlling the affections and the will of the child; so that the parents become the trestlework, as it were, upon which to transfer them over to God himself. Hence the requisition: "Bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." How is this to be done? As Christ has directed in his holy word: Bring them into the church by giving them the token of their covenanted relation and baptism. All children should be consecrated to God in baptism.

With these facts before us, we believe our case is fully made out, without resorting to the usual arguments of the covenant made with Abraham, which in the very nature of the case is unalterable, and which "was confirmed in Christ"—does, as the eternal constitution of the church, provide that infants shall be received into membership by the church, and the initiatory rite thereof given them. This is the constitution of the church to-day: That the initiatory rite, which under a former economy was circumcision, and was given to infants, has under the present economy been changed to baptism, with no change specified as to the subjects thereof. The constitution with reference to children not being changed, their rights remain the same. And that the church, founded upon this constitution, and illustrating its meaning by her administration in receiving infants to membership for nearly two thousand years before the birth of Christ, continues to this day the same church—the same in her "Head, which is Christ," the same in her constitution, in her doctrines, terms of membership, etc. From these facts, all sustained by God's word, the conclusion comes: Infant baptism is authorized by the word of God, and that it is the duty of parents to dedicate their children to God in baptism. Let parents bring their "little children" to Christ, "and forbid them not." Lay them with faith in the arms of Jesus; carefully, prayerfully place them in the church. Let bigots rave and fanatics hiss. Do your duty; and as you hope to press these dear little ones back to your heart, warm with eternal life and the joys of heaven, when the darkness of the grave shall yield to the light of heaven, and as these undying interests and responsibilities hang about you, consecrate your children to God in baptism, and train them up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

CHANGE OF PLAN.

MR. EDITOR: I believe it is pretty generally felt that the plan of our missionary operations needs simplifying. The Parent Board, at its last meeting, so decided, and proposed such modifications as in its judgment would compass the end. Bishop Marvin seems to have originated the proposed changes, and has ably defended them in a series of articles in the St. Louis Advocate. In brief, the Bishop's plan gives to the Parent Board at Nashville the entire control of all funds raised for missionary purposes by our church, domestic as well as foreign. It has this to commend it: that it is very simple, and obviates the difficulties growing out of the present plan. But is it not open to as grave objections as the present mode? I think so, and will point out two, from among several that might be urged, either of which, it seems to me, is alone sufficient to put it aside.

The first has been urged by others already, and I mention it only to give it emphasis. It is this: The Parent Board, composed of only sixteen members besides the Bishops (and to enlarge it would retard its movements,) cannot become sufficiently acquainted with the relative necessities of the different Conferences to make a fair and satisfactory distribution of the funds set apart for domestic missions. Many of the Conferences—and most likely these in greatest need—would have no representation in the board. But granting that each Conference may be represented, it requires actual observation of every part of the field to determine the relative wants of each. That the board could not make. The amount appropriated to any given Conference would depend upon the accuracy with which its representative might know its wants, and his skill and influence as an advocate. But it is said that the Bishops, who have the whole work under their eye, can supply the information necessary to judicious action. That would certainly put a very grave responsibility upon the Bishops—to base the action of the board upon their representation—one, I should think, that they would carry with reluctance. In theory the Bishops know everything worth knowing in every part of our territory; but practically, from the vast area under their supervision and the rapidity of their movements, their knowledge of many important things is necessarily very general and superficial. No Bishop, by presiding a week in an Annual Conference, and touching upon a few centers of population, can get a knowledge of the real wants of poor and sparsely-settled regions. And such, in the main, are the fields of missionary enterprise. Bishops can but seldom put foot upon missionary ground. We are told that the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) operates upon Bishop Marvin's plan, and that they find it very simple and effective. Aye; and they can hence direct hundreds of thousands to the South, to support a system of missions more political, we fear, than evangelical, and in keeping among us a set of missionaries more expert in slandering our people and keeping up sectional strife than in propagating the gospel of peace. Had the Annual Conferences there some check upon these appropriations it is likely that a larger amount would have been better applied.

The second objection to Bishop Marvin's plan is that it vests too much power in the Parent Board, and not enough in the Conference Boards. From principle I oppose "centralization" in both Church and State. Power, when lodged in human hands without adequate checks, is always aggressive. To vest too much power in any central body is bad policy universally. Besides, the highest moral efficiency is attained not by cramping, but by calling forth self-action. A plan, then, that will give each Annual Conference a sort of separate and independent management of some portion of our missionary work will develop our resources far more than to lodge the whole control in the Parent Board. I will submit a modification of our present system which, in my judgment, will do this—will obviate all the difficulties of which Bishop Marvin complains, and is, withal, very simple and direct.

Turn to page 152 of our Book of Discipline and read carefully the constitution of the Parent Society, substituting the following for Article 3 and the first section of Article 10. Some other verbal amendments may be necessary, but these alone are important:

"Article III. The board shall meet annually, to make appropriations for the ensuing year; determine what fields shall be occupied as foreign missions; the number of persons to be employed in each; estimate the sums necessary for the support of each such mission; apportion the whole amount to be raised among the several Annual Conferences; fix the amount which may be drawn for during the year; determine what Annual Conferences shall receive aid from the general treasure, and to what extent."

"Article X. (1.) It shall be the duty of each Annual Conference to organize a Conference Board of Missions, which shall appoint its own officers and regulate its own administration, subject to the provisions of this constitution. Each Conference Board shall have control of all sums raised within its bounds for domestic missions, subject to the direction of the Annual Conference; receive and forward to the Parent Board all funds raised within its bounds for foreign missions; determine the amount necessary to support its domestic mission work, and apportion the same, together with the amount to be raised for foreign missions, among the presiding elders' districts, to be collected in such manner as the Annual Conference shall direct; pay the same to such missionaries as shall be actually employed on missions recognized by the presiding officer of the Conference. Any Annual Conference, not able to supply the domestic field within its bounds, may apply to the Parent Board for aid; which board may, at its discretion, grant such appropriation from its treasure for this purpose as it shall think proper. Such amount shall be paid over to the Conference Board making application, and shall be applied as funds raised within its bounds for domestic missions." (2.) Etc.

I hope the reader will carefully study the workings of this plan before casting it aside. It introduces the following changes:

1. It places the claim of foreign missions upon its own merits before the people, and rids the Parent Board of all complications with domestic missions, except in Conferences too weak to occupy their own fields. These will be found few in number, and confined mostly, if not entirely, to the frontier.

2. It lodges in the Annual Conferences—the only bodies capable of understanding the local necessities of their respective fields—the entire control and support of all domestic missions within their bounds. This will call forth in these bodies a more earnest spirit of evangelization.

3. Instead of one, it provides for two missionary collections annually, to be taken up and kept entirely distinct.

In my view the plan is open to the single objection of adding one to the number of collections already ordered by the Discipline, if, indeed, that be an objection.

Obituaries.

FRANCIS WALTON DAVIS, infant son of Rev. James J. and Frances S. Davis, was born in Falls county, Texas, August 4, and died September 12, 1873.

J. R. BARDEN.

TIMOTHY MARION, youngest child of Joshua S. and Amanda Johnson, was born March 10, 1871, and died, near Greenville, Butler county, Alabama, August 11, 1873.

DIED, on the fourth of September, at his father's residence, Clarke county, Alabama, GEORGE CUNINGHAM, son of John and Elizabeth Cuningham, in the twenty-fifth year of his age.

The writer knew George from the spring-time of life until that germ budded into manhood. He was reserved in his manners, and had that integrity which ever characterizes the true Christian in all his dealings toward his fellow-man. He joined the Baptist Church at West Bend about twelve months ago, and those who knew him intimately saw the change—how humbly he lived at the foot of the cross. During ten days of severe bodily suffering he murmured not, but talked of Jesus when weeping and loved ones watched by his bedside and administered to his last earthly wants. A day or two before he breathed his last he told them that he "loved Jesus because he first loved him," and told them to be faithful. He asked them to sing for him, and every now and then that feeble voice joined in with that little choir, praising God in song.

B. M. A.

DEPARTED THIS LIFE, after a long and protracted illness, on the twenty-third of August, 1873, Mrs. EMILY ARABELLA HOLMAN, of Baldwin county, Alabama, in the fifty-fifth year of her age. She leaves a husband and six children—two sons and four daughters—to mourn her loss; but they mourn not as those without hope. Mrs. Holman had been a member of the Methodist Church for about thirty years, and her walk was that of the truly devoted Christian. In her death not only her bereaved husband and children feel her loss; by her kind and motherly counsels and advice, but the church and community at large, as the writer of this simple sketch can testify. She lived to see all her children grown and married but the youngest son, and nearly all members of the church which she loved. Her health had been bad for some time. She was never known to murmur or repine, but was always ready to depart and be at rest. Although we feel her loss, yet our loss is her eternal gain; for truly a mother in Israel is gone to heighten the triumph above.

T.

MARTHA A. HENDRIX was born at Monroeville, Monroe county, Alabama, September 4, 1829; was married to J. D. Philyaw, in Conecuh county, Alabama, January 31, 1849; and died of typhoid fever, in Escambia county, Florida, September 12, 1873, aged forty-four years and eight days.

During the time of her great suffering she never murmured, but bore it with all due meekness, long-suffering and serenity of mind and soul, praying at intervals that she might die triumphantly; and "she received the thing she prayed for," for she fell asleep and slept all the while that she was being conveyed across the valley of the shadow of death, without one struggle or groan. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. She was a regular communicant, and always responded when her help could be of any assistance in the cause of Christ. She was a kind neighbor, and a good and obedient mother and wife. She leaves a husband, one daughter and many relatives to mourn their loss; but a mixture of joy rises up in the midst of their sorrows from an earnest belief that she has realized that "to die is gain." Yes, she gains her three little ones who had long been absent from her; she gains and rejoices with her sainted mother. May our loss be sanctified to our good, both here and hereafter, and may it be her eternal gain.

D. C. S.

AT A quarterly meeting held at Antioch church, Simpson county, Taylorville mission, August 23, 1873, the following preamble and resolution were passed:

"Whereas, It hath pleased almighty God to call from our ranks our much-loved sister, MARTHA BUCKLEY; therefore,

"Resolved, That this conference appoint a committee to prepare a suitable obituary, and forward it for publication in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

Sister Martha Buckley was married, in 1848, to Mr. Richard Buckley, and in him found a kind affectionate husband, with whom she lived some twenty-five years and raised several children. By precept and example, no doubt, she did her duty in raising them for nobler purposes of a Christian life. Her life was marked with Christ-like piety—true to her trust in everything, and zealous in the cause of her heavenly Master. Her example is being followed by some of her children, and we are looking forward hopefully to the time when husband and children will be a bright and shining ornaments of the Christian church.

Sister Buckley suffered several years the sore afflictions of cancer. She murmured not, but bore patiently under the most torturing pains of her disease, with Christian integrity. I visited her a few weeks before her death, and was pleased to learn from her that she did not feel worthy. She claimed no favor upon the merit of her own, but all for Jesus' sake.

She died, at the time above mentioned, at her late residence in Copiah county, Mississippi, in the triumphs of a living faith, exhorting her husband and children to prepare to meet her in heaven.

J. O.

IT BECOMES my painful duty to record the death of our beloved sister, MARGARET HUNTER, wife of L. Hunter, which occurred in Richmond on the seventeenth of September, at seven o'clock A. M. As I have some knowledge of her life in Christian, having been her pastor some twenty years ago, when in charge of Felicity Street church, New Orleans, I know you will indulge me if I write at some length.

Sister Hunter, whose maiden name was Freeney, was born in Galway, Ireland, July 24, 1823. From a child she was of a religious turn of mind, always seeking and enjoying the society of the pious. She was brought up in the Episcopal Church. Emigrated to New Orleans in 1848, and married to Bro. Hunter October 1st, 1851, and while attending a protracted meeting in the Moreau Street church, held by Bro. R. Gober, she experienced that God has power on earth to forgive sin, and, to use a favorite expression of hers, felt that Christ was "formed in her the hope of glory," and from that day to the hour of her death she never doubted her interest in Christ. It seems becomes the lot of man to meet with such an exemplification of the truth of promises and power of the gospel of Christ as her life exhibited, and her mind was so well stored with the blessed promises of the Bible that she was never at a loss for a "thus saith the Lord" for any occasion.

She made an efficient Sabbath school teacher—a work in which she delighted—and in the class, prayer and protracted meetings she might justly be mentioned with those good women who helped in the gospel. Her soul yearned for the heathen groping in darkness; and, ever anxious for the support of the ministry and the general prosperity of Christ's kingdom on earth, she did all in her power for it. Always ready to give a reason for the hope that was in her, the ministers, as well as the members of the church, felt it a privilege to converse with her, and were always better for it. Many sorrowing ones have sought her sympathy, counsel and prayers, and her, their good friend, and would open their hearts to her as they could to but few. If any were sick nigh unto death, the first thought was: "Send for Sister Hunter, that she may instruct and pray for me." The day she lay cold in death, the Christians of all denominations, Sabbath school children and the adored people come into the room and burst into a flood of tears over the lifeless body, gave some idea of how much she was loved in this community. As a wife and mother she was what the Bible said she should be. After living to see all her children's names recorded on the church-book, the Lord seemed to say: "It is enough; come up higher." On the sixth of August she felt unwell, but attended prayer meeting for the last time, and in a few days she was laid upon her bed with bilious fever, to rise no more. Several times during her sickness it was hoped that the fever was broken, but soon it was seen to be still lurking in her system. She said to her husband at one time: "I don't know how long it is to terminate, but I thank God that I have always confessed and tried to honor my blessed Savior." At another time she said: "I don't know what the Lord means by this, unless he intends to make me perfect through suffering and to draw me closer to him. I want you, when you get a little stronger, to sing that hymn, 'Nearer, my God, to thee,' for I feel that he is drawing me nearer to him. Glory, glory hallelujah! God is love!" For four or five days previous to her death it seemed that her disease was conquered, but on the evening of the sixteenth it was found that she was rapidly sinking, and the usual stimulants were of no effect. When told that she must die she expressed some surprise, but said: "I have prepared for this time long ago," and after a pause: "The will of the Lord be done. If the messenger of death has come for me I am ready, but this is a mysterious providence." Her children were called, and, giving them the parting kiss and admonitions, she turned to her husband and said: "Papa, I can't realize that we are to be separated. May the Lord bless you with the sure mercies of David. Glory, glory hallelujah! I will soon be in glory!" She then asked her husband to raise her head, but she fainted and was laid quietly down. When she recovered she said: "All right, papa. I shall soon be in glory." Her last words were: "May the Lord bless you all." With the hand in her husband's, her spirit took its flight so gently that none knew when it left the body.

SUMMER.

sat beneath an ancient spreading oak close of day, the while the young May moon ose like a queen to grant a promised boon—ving at her feet his purple cloak he him, while delicious silence woke eart-echoes. Fairy ferns made tune the soft-sighing wind, and foxgloves soon vered the strath, and the sweet silence broke.
and there bloomed primrose and violet,
e daffodil and dear forget-me-not,
while the fragrant woodruff made regret at they so soon should leave the charmed spot:
the fond lovers looked with lips apart—
mer in nature, summer in each heart.

Oneida and Wallingford Communities.

t Oneida, in the central part of State of New York, and at Wallingford, Connecticut, there exist a ple known to some as the "Oneida and Wallingford Communities," thers as the sect of "Free-lovers," by themselves named "Perfectists." Founded by J. Humphrey es, a graduate of Dartmouth Col-, and afterward a divinity stu- at New Haven, Connecticut, sect first began a sickly exist- e at Putney, Vermont, the home s founder, in or about the year Here it struggled along until when it was removed to Oneida, York. At the latter place it grown in strength, both financially and numerically, until now, its branch at Wallingford, and prospective branches here and e throughout the country, it is lding an extensive but seductive pernicious influence—seductive reason of its fair exterior, and nicious because of its teachings its practices. Built upon such a ndation, its permanency might reckoned an extraordinary phenomenon, had not such organizaas been permitted to exist in the , and even for a long time to per, seemingly that their eventfall might be less expected, and refore, in the end, a hundredfold the more disastrous. In the e proportion that these communities have grown in wealth and mbers, they have increased in the dness of their publications, and the reckless hurling of their defies in the teeth of the law.

While these pernicious teachings example were remote, silence on part seemed natural; but now at it is proposed to establish other nches almost in our very midst—e no further away than the vicinity of Cleveland—it behooves us to ter our protest, and to urge the wers that be to prevent, if necessy, such a proceedure by legislative tion.

From the lips of one whose judgent we respect, and whose truthness we do not question, we have me information regarding these Perfectionists," which he obtained hile on a visit to the Oneida Community, and which we here submit, lieving that it fully substantiates eu more than we have already ritten. Our informant has also furished some circulars, issued by this ct, from which we have gathered ther statements, vile and startling.

The Oneida Community consists of tween two and three hundred embers, of both sexes and all ages, cupying a farm of six hundred and ty-four acres, situated four miles om a station called Oneida, on the ew York Central railroad. The embers all live in one large three-ory brick building, one hundred nd eighty feet long by seventy ide. Here the family, so called, t, drink and sleep. Besides this ilding, there are several manufacturing establishments near by, wned and managed by this people. school-house, offices and extensive arns may be seen in the immediate icinity, belonging to the Community. Once upon the grounds, the isitor, looking in whatever direction he will, sees nothing but a display of cultivated taste and thrift. Enter the buildings, and on every and the same systematic arrangement prevails. He cannot detect a ingle example of carelessness, or hear one syllable of discontent. Their extensive manufactories are standing proofs of their industry; quite a large nd well-thumbed library indicates a literary taste. A conversation with he adult and adopted masculine part f the Community evinces an intelligence scarcely looked for. A glance t the children, in the nursery and bout the building, detects no difference from those of legitimate birth, nd yet, notwithstanding all these acts, there seems to pervade the hole institution an unwholesome mething which the well-disposed isitor, if unable to name, could not scape feeling.

That their manufactories of silk read in enormous quantities, rank among the very best in the world, ould not be gainsaid; that their ealings were strictly honest, no one ould pretend to deny. Their library, though containing some exceptionable books, for the most part ad been well selected. In their guments upon the right and wrong f their position they become constantly involved in dilemmas, and heir sophistry is not hard to detect. hey enter into discussions with eming reluctance, as if, forsooth, hey realized the frailty of their oundation, and yet they, at the same ime, with boldness assert that hrist is their rock, the surety upon hich they rely.

A closer watching of the children discovers an absence of the blithemeness which is characteristic of outh, and all efforts at agility seem the result of painful attempts. Our informant gives it as his decided pinion that these children evinced ntelligence inferior to that which is ormly expected in children elsehere, of the same age. The mothers, and in fact the whole female ortion of the Community, with rare xceptions, were unprepossessing in ountenance and figure, and almost epulsive in their toilets. With hair ropped short, some with one eye nd some well-nigh toothless, with allow complexions, and at the same ime smiles upon their faces, which often looked forced, and with that ngraceful Bloomer costume, what wonder that the thousands of people who annually visit this place, go away and pronounce these women ugly, and even odious? And what wonder that the smiles of these women seem forced, when, from year to year, their hearts are never warmed with that pure love which a husband bestows upon the wife, and when, during their sad moments, there exists no one to whom they may confide their griefs with hope of sympathy? If, after years of ceaseless yearning, their hearts sometimes yield, and they allow themselves to cherish an attachment for one person more than another, then they become objects for the derision of their associates, and are peremptorily rebuked for cherishing a sentiment so unbecoming a true "Perfectionist." The surprise is that, with hearts so wrinkled and warped, existence does not become absolutely insupportable. And the fair exterior, readers, is seen when visitors are thronging the premises. Who knows the misery that lies hid behind all this thrift, this cleanliness and their protestations of happiness? Who knows of the dead men's bones existing within that whitened sepulcher? Until recently we had supposed that among this people it was a custom for the men and women, by mutual consent, to live together somewhat permanently, ignoring the marriage ceremony only. But by their own words, and by their publications, this supposition is contradicted. They live together at least as promiscuously and as changeably as do brutes. The children, under, such a system, must form a common herd; the responsibility and affection belonging to the parental relation are annihilated, and that most loathsome of crimes—incest—becomes a necessary consequence. Who will wonder that the offspring of such a parentage exhibit a lack of the ordinary characteristics of childhood? Yet this very consequence, anticipated by Noyes, is made the subject of some of his publications, in which an attempt at vindication is made. In this attempt the man appeals to the Bible, and rakes up the heinous crime of Lot's daughters for one example. The base gratification of passion they term "spiritual happiness;" and upon such rottenness their religion is based. Christ is declared as their governing power, and then in another declaration they relieve him of all responsibility for the character of the human race, save for that generation he died to save. An observance of the Sabbath as a day of rest is scouted at as belonging to the primitive Jewish dispensation. Another tenet of their faith is that God is dual, and that man, as male and female, is made in the image of God. One promulgated dogma only paves the way for others more startling and more openly blasphemous. What composes their religion here is expected to comprise their happiness hereafter. That heaven is to be a place for more of their horrible practices they openly declare to be their belief. In one of their publications may be found the opinion, as coming from the hoary-headed monster, their founder, that the relation between Jesus and Mary was not that of a God and mortal, but the same as that of lovers of the present day. Yet, blasphemous as are their teachings, and damning as are their practices, the sect increases. The few gathered together here and there are encouraged by the head-center—the Oneida Community — with the assurance that, so soon as their numbers will warrant, they will be acknowledged as branches of the grand center; and in this way they hope to spread and become a power.

In New York State, not long since, legal action was taken to remove this gangrenous community; but the effort failed. Shall it be allowed to fester in the West? It augurs ill for the youth all over the land when the publications of this sect are allowed to be scattered broadcast. It glaringly exhibits the existence of a wicked and perverse generation when such organizations are suffered to exist. For our own part we think we can discern the eventual anarchy existing in such organizations, and its consequent overthrow, even if left to itself; but we only discern it in the removal of the founder's governing will by death, or, later, by the fulfillment of the truth: "The wicked shall fall by his own wickedness." We prefer, however, and insist upon, as due to the well-being of society and a decent regard for our civilization, the immediate overthrow of this organization through the prompt interposition of the strong arm of the law.—Western Christian Advocate.

Sintoism of Japan.

We are asked to state something about Sintoism, Shintooism or Sinsyuism of Japan. It is difficult, however, to make a popular analysis of it. Perhaps it may be said to teach the worship of one supreme Being, though it admits the worship of other deities and of the adoration of meritorious emperors, and other eminent persons. It does not, however, make use of any idols. This religion was founded by the Emperor Tenshow Daijin, whose name signifies "the great spirit of the celestial splendors." He reigned in Japan, B. C. 600 years, and was the first of the long line of Mikados which continue unto this day. The present Mikado is the one hundred and twenty-seventh monarch of this family, and of course of the Sinto religion. The lower order of gods recognized by Sintoism preside over "the hearth, kitchen, marriage, birth, the mountains, the valleys, the affairs of life, and all of external nature." Their names indicate a species of element worship, sun, earth, air, fire, etc., being illustrative of the nomenclature of this pantheon. The Rev. M. Grillis declares Sintoism to be "simply a cultured and intellectual atheism, with no faith, no Scriptures, no hope; and, in its lower forms, blind obedience to governmental and priestly dictates, too cold, lifeless and abstract to become a religion for common people." It is, he says, the religion of the emperor's court and of a large class of the literati. The doctrine of immortality, he says, is not taught except with respect to the deified. The total number of temples devoted to the Sinto religion is said by M. Charles Lanman to be ninety-seven, of which thirty-five are supported by the general government and the balance by the provincial authorities. The precepts of Sintoism have reference to "inward purity of heart; abstinence from whatever makes one impure; observance of the festivals and holydays; pilgrimages to holy places, which are often high mountains."

In the Sintoo temple is an altar on which rests a large mirror, emblematic of purity of worship, and the sincerity of the worshiper; and before which prayer is made to the great sun-goddess, with offering of rice, money, etc., the service being concluded by ringing a bell.

Sintoism has, however, been so much modified by Buddhism and Confucianism that it is difficult at this time to determine just what the original may have been. There are strong indications of its having been a species of nature-worship, not unlike that of the red races of North and South America. Sun-worship has been an almost universal cult. Where temples are built in tropical or temperate climates, uniformly facing the East, and by the same people in northern climate uniformly facing the South, there will likely be found other decided traces of sun-worship. This being the case in Asia, we are not surprised to find evidence of an almost universal sun-worship as an older substratum of the religions life. Doubtless this older object-worship is preserved in the great mirror and the sun-worship of the Sinto temple. It is, however, now quite as far removed from original nature or element-worship, by being compounded with, and modified by later forms of faith, as the original Vedic faith has been by the Zoroastrian and Brahmanic phases of religious thought with which it has been indefinitely blended.

The intolerance of the late governments to other religions is seen in the severity of the punishment inflicted on those who become converts to other than the Sinto faith. The convert himself was to be crucified, and death to be visited upon the grandparents, parents, elder and younger brothers and sisters, uncles, aunts, sons, daughters, grandchildren, and male and female cousins. Crucifixion has been abolished, but death may still be the result of conversion, unless the powers be overawed by foreign representations. There is great hope of further toleration than at present maintains. Foreigners, and possibly natives too, seem at a loss to discover the real purpose of the government toward Christianity. In the past, however, the Sintoists have affirmed that their opposition to Buddhism and Christianity was only because of the interference with political affairs of the representatives of these religions.—Northern Christian Advocate.

Hindoo Women.

The women attracted me most by their graceful carriage, their picturesque drapery, consisting of a full skirt and a sort of barnous, which passes over the head, almost completely vailing the face. These vary in color, being sometimes bright blue and pink and yellow, the skirt often bordered with a band of some other color, often very gaudy, but the dark skin harmonizes it all. The most artistic, to my mind, is the deep indigo blue, but it is more rare in the northwest than in southern India, where almost all the lower classes of women wear it. It is pleasant to watch the easy grace with which they walk, bearing round red earthenware or bright copper water-jars on their heads, steadying their burden with one well-shaped, small-wristed dusky arm stretched up to its full length, and covered almost to the elbow and sometimes above it with numbers of bracelets. These are sometimes silver, but oftener plated metal or red and green lac. I once heard of a school, the pupils in which were trained to walk about with tumblers of cold water on their heads; and when I saw the firm-footed, easy grace of these burden-bearing women I regretted that the practice was not universal. The pale-faced race may perhaps pride itself on its superiority in the use of the contents of its head, but these dusky daughters of the sun certainly outdo their more favored sisters in the use they make of the outside of theirs. They carry everything on their heads, jars of water, pieces of cloth, baskets of vegetables, huge bundles of sugar-cane, fuel, anything and everything, leaving their hands free for any additional burden.

They do not even carry their little black babies in their arms, but either balance them astride on their shoulders with their little hands on their mother's head, or else astride on one hip, encircled with a strong arm.

I have seen a woman with four water-jars towering on her head and her little baby on her hip, walking along with springy grace, jingling her silver anklets and toe-bells as she went.

They sometimes wear large nose-rings through the left nostril, or else a small star-like nail passed through the nose.—Fraser's Magazine.

WHAT is very alarming is that Christian men dare not meet ridicule. There is not one Christian man in five that can, unblanched, stand in the presence of all this raillery, saying: "I believe in the whole Bible, and in every single statement that it makes." Christian men try to soften the Bible down to suit the skeptics. The skeptics sneer at the dividing of the Red sea, and the Christian goes to explaining that the wind blew a hurricane from one direction a good while, until all the water piled up; and, besides that, it was low water, anyhow, and so the Israelites went through without any trouble. Why not be frank, and say: "I believe the Lord God almighty came to the brink of the Red sea, and with his right arm swung back the billows on the right side, and with his left arm swung back the billows on the left side; and the abashed water stood up hundreds of feet high?"

Stimulants.

Almost all English people are habitual tea-drinkers, and, as the tea they drink is very strong, they may be said to use it in excess. The unpleasant symptoms which tea-poisoning produces in a patient not inured by habit disappear in the seasoned tea-drinker, leaving only a certain exhilaration which appears to be perfectly innocuous. If tea is a safe stimulant, it is certainly an agreeable one, and there seems to be no valid reason why brain-workers should refuse themselves that solace. I knew a worthy clergyman many years ago who, from the most conscientious motives, denied himself ale and wine, but found a fountain of consolation in the tea-pot. His usual allowance was sixteen cups, all of heroic strength, and the effect upon his brain seems to have been altogether favorable, for his sermons were both long and eloquent, and to this day he is preaching still, without any diminution of his powers. French people find in coffee the most efficacious remedy for the temporary torpor of the mind which results from the processes of digestion. Balzac drank great quantities of coffee while he wrote; and this, it is believed, brought on the terrible nervous disease that accelerated his end. The best proof that tea and coffee are favorable to intellectual expression is that all nations use one or the other as aids to conversation. In Mr. Palgrave's travels in Arabia there is never any talk without the inevitable coffee, that fragrant Arabian berry prepared with such delicate cunning that it yields the perfect aroma. The wisdom of occasionally using these various stimulants for intellectual purposes is proved by a single consideration. Each of us has a little cleverness and a great deal of sluggish stupidity. There are certain occasions when we absolutely need the little cleverness that we possess. The orator needs it when he speaks, the poet when he versifies, but neither cares how stupid he may become when the oration is delivered and the lyric set down on paper. The stimulant serves to bring out the talent when it is wanted, like the wind in the pipes of an organ. "What will it matter if I am even a little duller afterward?" says the genius. "I can afford to be dull when I have done." But the truth still remains that there are stimulants and stimulants. Not the nectar of the gods themselves was worth the dash of a wave upon the beach, and the pure, cool air of the morning.—Hamerton's Intellectual Life.

QUITE SPICY.—Rev. D. S. Monroe, in the Christian Advocate, furnishes the following reminiscences of the late Jacob Gruber:

Preaching on one occasion, Father Gruber made an allusion to Romanism. A man in the congregation inquired excitedly: "Mr. Gruber, how old is your religion?" Said Gruber: "I got religion about thirty years ago." Said the man: "I thought it was very young, for young converts are always over-zealous." "How old is yours?" asked Gruber. With quite a boastful air he replied: "More than eighteen hundred years old." "I thought it was very old, for it has been stone-blind these seventeen hundred years."

On another occasion Father Gruber announced that at his next visit he would administer the sacrament of baptism. A rough character present inquired if he would baptize puppies also. "Bring them along," said the old man. When the appointed day arrived a large congregation assembled, and among them was the man and his puppy. After the sermon Mr. Gruber said: "We will now proceed to baptism. Any adult person desiring it, or if any parents desire their children baptized, they will bring them forward." Having attended to these, he stepped in front of the altar, surveyed the crowd a moment, and, fixing his keen eye on the man who sat holding the puppy, said in his quiet manner: "If there are any puppies to be baptized the parents will now bring them forward." Peals of laughter followed the invitation, and amid it the fellow made for the door.

A ZEALOUS Christian gentleman, traveling by railroad, addressed some pious remark to the stranger in the same seat, when he was met by an infidel reply. This led to an animated conversation, in which the Christian urged the truths of the gospel, and the stranger repelled them with the grossest cavils. He at last disclosed materialistic opinions, and denied all future existence to man. "What!" exclaimed the Christian, "do you mean that you will die as the brutes die, and that then reason, conscience, memory, responsibility, will terminate forever for you?" The infidel answered: "Yes! I do not believe that you or I have any more a distinct, rational substance conjoined to the body than a brute has." The Christian was about to rejoin very warmly with a "But, my dear sir," when a shrill Irish voice broke in just beside his ear, from the broad, red, excited face of a woman, who had leaned forward to listen: "Faith, sir, and why don't you let the baste alone? Hasn't he said he is a baste? An' don't ye know that when ye pinch a pig's tail, all ye'll get is a louder squale?"

A PHILANTHROPIC NOVELTY.—An instance is recorded in a French paper of a philanthropist who has been able to make a large fortune by assisting his fellow-creatures in distress. In a singular establishment in Paris, called the Table d'Hote des Inventeurs, this individual has sheltered and supported a large number of persons belonging to the not unfrequently indigent class of inventors. He provides food and lodging and the money necessary for the experiments required to bring the invention to perfection, and, according to its importance, is said to allow even so long a time as five years for the inventor to complete his discovery. As soon as the invention is brought into practice and proves successful the keeper of the strange asylum participates in the profits, and it appears that he has made a large fortune.

Scientific.

AS A MEANS for preserving the interior of iron ships from the action of the sea-water, Prof. Calvert recommends that a certain quantity of soda-ash be introduced from time to time into the ldige-water.

IN STUDYING the bones of whales Dr. Struthers has discovered that these leviathans of the deep are subject to rheumatism. It has been said that animals are not subject to disease until they are brought into connection with man; but this fact contradicts the theory. It is the more remarkable, seeing that whales are less subject than man to variations of temperature; and it is also evident that the cold-water treatment cannot be very efficacious in the cure of the disease.

M. L. CAILLETET, as the result of a series of experiments on the properties of liquid carbonic acid, finds that it does not conduct electricity, that it does not dissolve sulphur nor phosphorus, though it takes up a small quantity of iodine. It cannot dissolve common salt, sulphate of soda nor chloride of calcium; it only acts very slowly on carbonate of lime. Petroleum dissolves five or six volumes of the liquid acid; sulphuric ether absorbs it in large quantity. Stearine and paraffine are insoluble. Sodium has no satisfactory action, except on the trace of moisture that may be present.

THE celebrated vase of Siberian aventurine, given by the Emperor Nicholas the First of Russia to the late Sir Roderick I. Murchison, as "the explorer of the geology of Russia," and bequeathed by him to the Museum of Practical Geology, is now in position in that establishment. The vase is four feet high and six feet in circumference, and stands on a pedestal of polished gray porphyry. The difficulty of procuring a stone of such large dimensions and of polishing so hard a substance was so great that only one other similar vase was made; that one was presented to Baron Humboldt, and is now in the Royal Museum, Berlin. The materials of the vase and pedestal were obtained in the Kourgon mountains, in the province of Tomsk, and were cut and polished in Siberia.

UP TO WITHIN a comparatively recent period a belief widely prevailed that the sap of plants froze in the winter-time. It seemed so hard to believe that a frost which would penetrate a stone wall many inches thick, and freeze liquids solid under heavy protecting material, should not be able to penetrate into the stem of a tree. If several feet of wood would not keep out frost, how could a mere layer or so of woody matter but a small fraction of an inch thick prevent the freezing of the sap in the small twigs and branches of trees and plants? But what we know of life and its mode of existence leads to a doubt as to the correctness of this reasoning. Under the lowest temperature the blood must flow through our veins in order to live; and, so far as we know, there must be liquid in some form in any organized body in order to maintain life. It seemed hardly credible that the liquid in plant structure could freeze solid and yet not part with vitality. Thus far we have the two possibilities at starting. But science asks for the facts, and the evidence has so gradually yet abundantly accumulated that few advanced vegetable phytologists now believe that sap in healthy plants freezes. It is little more now than a popular fancy; unsupported, as many such fancies are, by anything but analogical facts. Sap, of course, can freeze in plants; but injury more or less serious must result. To American physiologists belong much of this advanced condition of this subject. It was pointed out many years ago in one of our scientific periodicals that bulbs grow through our deeply-frozen ground all winter, coming to the surface—that is, thawing their way—during the whole winter season. They have also pointed out that in spring the liquid sap will ooze out of a wounded tree, although the temperature of the atmosphere about it be many degrees below the freezing point. Turnips, parsnips and other roots, taken out of frozen ground, can be bent and twisted any way, but would be as stiff as an icicle if frozen through. When taken out of the ground they will often get frozen stiff; but after they thaw they then become worthless, showing that they cannot freeze without speedy destruction. Still, though the fact that sap-vessels cannot freeze without injury or death to the plant structure is well settled, no one in America, so far as we know, has offered any acceptable explanation why it is so and why the popular belief is not right. But in a recent number of the Gaea is an article (translated for the Popular Science Monthly for May) by Prof. Z. Mohr, in which a series of interesting experiments are detailed. He shows that the pupæ of insects remain unfrozen; but, if cut across or in any way injured, the "humors" freeze at once. Also that a cabbage-leaf, on the plant flaccid, because its juices are not frozen, becomes stiff—that is, the juices freeze—as soon as the leaf is detached from the plant. In short, in Prof. Mohr's language, "freezing expands water, and the cells containing the water must burst." But he found that all forms of water do not freeze at the same temperature. "The minuter the particles of a liquid body are the further they can be brought beneath the thawing point or freezing point without injury;" and he found that the smaller the cells of a plant the greater the degree of frost it would endure before its liquids froze. Tuns, a potato-stem, a geranium, or anything with large cells, freezes very readily and is soon destroyed; while our Northern pine-needles, with small cells, can endure a very low degree. We are not quite sure that the reasoning will admit of no exceptions. There are some pine-trees in sub-tropical countries which freeze and become fatally injured thereby at not very low temperatures.—Whether their cells are so much larger than those with which most of us are familiar we do not know; but Prof. Mohr's paper is the first to put this freezing of sap question on philosophical grounds.

Religious Intelligence.

THE English Baptists are extending their mission in Africa by establishing a new station on the great mountain of Cameroons.

THE Board of Missions of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church have decided upon South America and the West Indies as the best field for beginning the work of establishing missions.

A TELEGRAM from Topeka, Kansas, says that the delegation of Russian Quakers (menuling Mennonites,) who have been seeking a place to establish their colony, have selected Harvey county, Kansas.

THE car of Juggernaut, says a Calcutta correspondent, has just received eight victims at Goopto, in the Hooghly district. The unfortunate wretches were all women, and six of them were crushed to death.

THERE are five evangelical missionary stations among the working people of Paris that are reported as in successful operation. The working people are beginning to cry out against the domination of the Catholic priests.

A CONFERENCE of the delegates of the various Old Catholic congregations already established in Switzerland met at Olten recently. The main question to be discussed was the relation of the Swiss to the German Old Catholics and the wisdom of establishing a Swiss bishopric.

CHINA.—In an article contributed to the Missionary Field, Bishop Alford gives his personal knowledge of China and missionary work. He states that his repeated investigation of Chinese missions has led him to conclusions from which we quote as follows: "1. Mission work in China is sound and real. As for numbers, had our missionaries thought fit to baptize indiscriminately, and to admit to holy communion without examination, the number of professing Christians in our China missions might have amounted to ten times what it is. But applicants were tested, and they only who gave marks of pure motives, of true repentance and of sincere conversion were accepted. 2. The work is a growing work, growing generally in proportion to the strength and efficiency of the missionary agency. It is wonderful how the Foochow mission has expanded through the country districts; so that we can number, under the charge of two European missionaries and one native missionary clergyman at Foochow, eighteen branch stations within a radius of about a hundred miles. Foochow, Shanghai, Hong Kong and Peking need more missionaries. And I believe that, if we would hold the ground, extension is a necessity. Retrogression, even in appearance, emboldens the adversary (and he is 'legion' in China) to besir himself to drive the missionary out of the land. 3. Without depreciating the value of the European agency, and gladly testifying that the European and American missionaries in China are generally men of unusual ability, judgment and enterprise, let us rejoice in the native agents. Let us pray to God largely to increase the number of native clergy and native catechists. Europeans cannot preach as they can. Europeans cannot penetrate to the places they can visit. Europeans cannot discriminate Chinese character as they can. Europeans cannot live on Chinese food nor bear Chinese climate as they do. No matter how long a missionary may have been in China; however well he may be supposed to speak the language of his hearers; however much he may live like them and dress like them, there must ever be a great gulf—national, at least—between an Englishman and a Chinaman—the one a sort of unintelligible mystery to the other. The Chinese need a Chinese ministry. Englishmen cannot, in their own persons, supply the need. It is our duty to intrust the sons of China with these precious gifts, even as we ourselves have been intrusted with them. They are responsible to God (not to us) for the use they make of these benefits. Our responsibility is to give them what we have received. Our credit is at stake in the faithful communication of the gift, not in the use they make of it. Set the Chinaman free, clad in the panoply of the gospel of Christ, and I believe that God will bless our faithful obedience to his command."

ELEMENTS OF A HOME.—I never saw a garment too fine for man or maid; there was never a chair too good for a cobbler or cooper to sit in; never a house too fine to shelter the human head. These elements about us, the gorgeous sky, the imperial sun, are not too good for the human race. Elegance fits man. But do we not value these tools of housekeeping a little more than they are worth, and sometimes mortgage home for the mahogany we would bring into it? I had rather eat my dinner off the head of a barrel, or dress after the fashion of John the Baptist in the wilderness, or sit on a block all my life, than consume all myself before I get a home, and take so much pains with the outside that the inside was as hollow as an empty nut. Beauty is a great thing, but beauty of garments, house and furniture is a very tawdry ornament compared with domestic joy. All the elegance in the world will not make a home, and I would give more for a spoonful of hearty love than for whole shiploads of furniture, and all the upholsterers of the world could gather together.—Theodore Parker.

AS A RICH and pretentious shoddyite was looking at some paintings which he purposed to buy, the dealer pointed to a fine one and said: "There is a dog after Landseer." "Is it really?" exclaimed the purchaser. "What is the dog after him for?"

THE Advance says that at the Christian Labor Union "Mr. Trask tried to get a hearing for his anti-tobacco ideas, but was called to order by a man who wanted the floor to talk against hair-dyes."

Who is the oldest lunatic on record? Time out of mind.

Treatment of the Skeptics.

There are always some honest doubters—some who are troubled with certain difficulties in the line of Christian evidence, and who are entitled to a most considerate and careful treatment. They are, however, in little real danger, for if they are sincere light will be sure to dawn upon them. "Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness." God will not let the diligent and humble inquirer perish. If he is a true inquirer he will at least study the Bible and pray. To him the Savior's words apply: "If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."

There is a large class, which embraces the most of what is called modern skepticism, that is not honest in the higher sense of a sincere purpose to know the will of God and to do it. The cause and root of all skepticism nearly, whether ancient or modern, is in the moral rather than in the intellectual nature. The Scriptures so represent the matter, and hence the unbeliever is always condemned. He that believeth not is condemned already, and the wrath of God abideth on him. In Christ's time there was a clamor for more evidence, for a sign from heaven, and with apparent desire to know the truth; but the skeptics were denounced as hypocrites, as not having the love of God in them, and as morally perverse and rebellious. It was true of the rich man's brethren, and is true of modern skeptics as well: "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

It will be seen by reference to such passages as bear upon the subject that the inspired writers constantly aim to expose the moral animus, the hardness of heart, and the obliquity of character out of which unbelief grows. It is dealt with as a sin, the sin of sins, and the ground of final condemnation. It is the fool who says in his heart there is no God; it is the basely wicked who defiantly exclaim: "What is the Almighty, that we should serve him? and what profit should we have if we pray unto him?" Christ exposes the skeptics who were about him in such terms as these: "Ye are of your father, the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do;" "He that is of God heareth God's words; ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God." Paul gives his account of unbelief, covering the ground of all skepticism, when he says: "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them."

Modern skepticism and ancient are one and the same thing in the moral cause, and it must be dealt with in reference to this fact. The relation of skepticism to science is probably as old as the world. Progress in science may have developed some new points of supposed opposition to revelation, and have started some difficulties not heretofore considered, but in character they are such as have been in the field for thousands of years. "For after that in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." So it has been and will be to the end. "The world by wisdom knew not God." Science may be made the ally of religion, and her discoveries will in the end subserve the cause of truth and salvation. But men will never find God by the mere study of nature, and they may always pervert science to the purposes of unbelief and enmity to the gospel. So far as we can see, skepticism is a very old disease, well explained and illustrated in Scripture, and its cure is of necessity a moral one.

The evidences of Christianity are abundant for those who really wish to know the truth and to do God's will. Its evidences are in the gospel itself, and in the centuries of experience, and in all the good that Christianity has done. If these things have no effect, if there is no humble waiting upon God in prayer, no spiritual discernment and no moral appreciation, we do not think a discourse on evolution, protoplasm or force would have any marked influence. "If our gospel is hid, it is hid to them that are lost." The trouble is moral, and not intellectual, and must mainly be met by moral and spiritual means. These sinners, represented as modern skeptics, must be treated as all other sinners. The foolishness of preaching will doubtless save some of them; the awakening Spirit alone can convince them of the sin of unbelief, and they must be saved by the processes, spiritual and evangelical, which are ever at work to regenerate fallen and lost souls.

Heaven forbid that this nonsensical panic about modern skepticism should lead Christian people to think that the gospel is about to be overthrown, or that this sin of unbelief and infidelity is anything better or worse than the old forms of enmity and opposition to the gospel. The greatest calamity that could happen would be for our preachers to be set to preaching science, to the neglect of the conscience-piercing doctrines of the word of God. Let it be as it was, and as Paul puts the subject most forcibly: "For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom; but we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." The gospel, if faithfully proclaimed, will convert skeptics and save the world, so far as men are willing to be saved. Christ and him crucified is the saving doctrine for all sinners, and for every aspect of rebellion against God.

Sunday School Teachers.

Sunday school teachers occupy positions of great influence and responsibility. They are authorized to expound the Scriptures to the children, and to instruct them in the doctrines and duties of religion. They have charge, in a measure, of the religious instruction and training of their classes, and can bring a personal influence to bear which can scarcely be exerted by the pastor, and is often not equaled by the parents themselves. It is vitally important that those who have so much to do with the formation of the religious character of the young should be safe and competent guides, pure in character and sound in the faith. We cannot always secure capable teachers, and superintendents and pastors must needs employ those to some extent who are lacking in intelligence, but they should be on their guard against mischievous errors. The church should be sure that the children are not being led astray from the truth, and that those who teach are safe instructors in matters of doctrine and experience. The greatest danger is not that our children learn nothing of their teachers, but it is that through ignorance and error they shall be taught things pernicious and damning. Teachers should, in view of their high calling, qualify themselves by study and prayer, and those who are responsible for their appointment should satisfy themselves that they are fit to be intrusted with the care of immortal souls. Do our pastors, superintendents and parents know much about the matter and manner of the teaching? There is occasion for care and vigilance. We commend the following views from the Independent to the notice of all:

The question of subjecting all candidates for the Sunday school teacher's office to a rigid examination is being vigorously discussed in England. While we are unlikely to bring before a board of examiners, for a formal trial of their qualifications, those who offer themselves to teach in our Sunday schools, none should be accepted as teachers who are not known to have essential fitness for that position. The church is really responsible for the teaching in its Sunday school. The superintendent, as the representative of the church at the head of the school, is responsible for those who are teachers under him. He ought neither to accept nor retain any teacher who is not known to him (so far as one can know another) as possessed of a right spirit, and as duly informed in the truth which is all-important to efficient service for Christ with precious souls. The superintendent cannot evade responsibility in this thing. If a bad spirit is displayed by his teachers, or if pernicious doctrines are taught by them, he is to blame for it. For what is he made superintendent, if it is not to be responsible for the teachers over whom he is set in charge?

Shallow Repentance.

The following thoughtful and timely article from the Southern Christian Advocate should be read now while we are in the midst of our autumn revivals and camp meetings:

There is reason gravely to apprehend that, with many who come into the church as fruits of our revival meetings, the work of repentance has been too superficial to meet the requirements of Scripture, or to be of any saving benefit. Their unchanged worldliness; their tolerance and extenuation of conduct, inconsistent alike with the word of God and the promptings of a renewed heart, justify the apprehension that the foundations of a new life have not been wisely laid, and that they are altogether ignorant of those painful experiences which precede the new birth.

Sound conversion, and a succeeding steadfast Christian life, must be the superstructure of a spiritual edifice whose foundations have been firmly laid in intelligent and thorough convictions of the "exceeding sinfulness of sin." Clear conceptions of the enormity of sin—working in the spiritual nature an intense loathing of it in every form—are indispensable to an adequate apprehension of the necessity for pardon and purification, and must precede such earnest and resolute seeking after God as results in the complete renovation of the moral nature. The conditions of salvation are unalterable; and while constitutional peculiarities, and the prevailing customs of the times, may modify outward manifestations, every soul that enters the kingdom of God on earth—in this, as well as in former days—must pass through the distressing experience of a hearty repentance. There is no royal road to the favor of God. Every pilgrim, in every age, reaches it by the same route. "Repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ" are divinely announced as indispensable to the soul's deliverance from sin and ultimate salvation in heaven; and the experiment—by whomsoever made—of realizing a genuine, saving, religious experience, without the pungent conviction for sin, which is involved in true repentance, is doomed to disastrous failure. And yet there are multitudes in the church to-day who are vainly hoping for eternal life without having ever tasted the "wormwood and gall" of genuine repentance. The repugnance of the carnal nature to these bitter experiences has led them to adopt a sort of commercial view of religion, and to conclude that, in consideration of certain external performances, and abstinence from certain evil practices, the award of the faithful will be theirs in the end. Of the spiritual change needful to fit them for the favor of God—and of which repentance is the initial movement—they know nothing. "They being (willfully) ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves to the righteousness of God." The relation of repentance to the work of salvation is vital, it is integral in that work, and cannot be omitted or slurred without fatally vitiating the whole process. Hence the necessity for emphasizing this doctrine in our preaching, and especially in our private instructions to those who present themselves as seekers of religion.

It is very well to quote the "exceeding great and precious promises" of God's word to the wretched penitent, when the "fallow ground" of his heart has been thoroughly broken up by the plowshare of truth, and when, at the revelation of the enlightening Spirit, a view of his dreadful corruption has led him to abhor himself. But to press these upon the unrepentant or partially awakened sinner is to mislead him to the ruin of his soul. A nominally religious life, entered upon without an initial experience of the painful throes of genuine repentance, is one of the most effective devices of satan for deluding unwary souls to their final and utter undoing; and there is reason to fear that in these times the adversary is having no little success in his destructive work. The short-lived fidelity of many who make a profession of religion, and attach themselves to the church, is attributable to this faulty start. They have not heartily repented. They have had no vivid realization of the heinousness of sin, and hence have easily lapsed into their former course of life, as soon as the transient impulses under which they acted have subsided.

We are not sure that the ministry is free from complicity with this grave evil. We are the spiritual guides of these souls, and in most instances they conform their course to our teaching. If we fail to insist in our instructions, upon unreserved co-operation with the Spirit in this preliminary work, we incur a fearful responsibility. If, from indolence, or impatient eagerness to count converts, we hurry awakened souls over this critical stage in their struggle for acceptance with God, we make ourselves accessory to the damage, perhaps ruin, which results to them. Let us beware lest the doom of "doing the work of the Lord deceitfully" (negligently) fall upon us. Let us strive, by faithfulness and care in our work, to escape the denunciation pronounced upon those prophets and priests of whom the Almighty said, through his servant Jeremiah: "They have healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace."

REMEMBER that you are wanting to God as often as you hesitate to sacrifice to him everything.

Evangelical Alliance.

We take from the press dispatches the following account of the proceedings on last Sunday night, the fifth instant:

The Academy of Music was crowded this evening to hear addresses by members of the Evangelical Alliance, Felix R. Brunnow, president. After the singing of a hymn, commencing:

"Come, thou almighty King,"

the Dean of Canterbury conducted the devotional exercises, which consisted in reading the one hundred and forty-third Psalm, and a prayer for the removal of differences that have made the Protestant name a by-word and the breaking down of every wall of separation, but has kept those apart who belong to one church.

Hon. W. Brown said the grand assemblage of Christians of every clime present was prompted by the still grander millennial idea, and he hoped when they departed they would carry away a stronger resolution to fight as soldiers of Christ.

Rev. Robert Knox, LL. D., of Belfast, Ireland, was the first speaker. He struck the key-note of the meeting by an eloquent appeal to abide in Christ. Rev. Nanayan Sheshedirai, a converted Brahmin, and member of the Free Church of Scotland, was the next speaker. He wore his turban and flowing robe. He gave an account of the project in hand of founding a Christian colony in Bombay presidency; of an evangelical conference to be held at Allahabad, of ministers from all parts of the world, and of the founding of a native Christian alliance in India. In conclusion he predicted that the time would come when all the world will be brought to God and peace reign upon earth. The president here observed that if the promise of the conversion of the natives was being realized in India, why not among the American Indians?

Rev. Dr. Coulia, of Geneva, delivered an address in French on the relations of Christianity and modern progress. Rev. Dr. Hoge, of Richmond, Virginia, spoke briefly on union in Christ as the true bond of alliance. He said if all Protestants of the world united for political power, or for gaining new influence by aggregating of numbers and wealth, their bond would be a rope of sand. He differed with those who sought union by making little of peculiar doctrines, for the doctrines of the Bible make up the symmetry of Christian character, and union under Christ as head, and resting upon his word, is true union.

Rev. W. H. Freemanlee, of London, spoke hopefully of the reconciliation of the human race to God.

He said we dwelt too much on inner life, and should project Christianity upon our outer life. Christ is king not only of our private, but of our commercial and public life, and our State life, and if we separate any part of our public life from him we do him injustice.

Rev. W. F. Stevenson, of Dublin, spoke of alliance and the great gathering of this evening as proof of those that were long kept asunder by obstructions. Were brethren loving Christ, they could not but love one another.

Rev. P. L. Orrioux, of Paris, spoke of the diffusion of evangelical principles in France. He related how a Catholic senator, imprisoned during the Commune, sent to a Protestant pastor the day before he was shot for a Bible with which to prepare himself for death, and how the Catholic Archbishop, also condemned to death, sent for an Episcopalian minister.

Dr. Forbes had a consultation with him, and it might be said he was prepared for death by him. (Applause.)

Rev. Dr. Rigg, of London, spoke of the meeting this evening as the most wonderful Evangelical Alliance gathering ever known, and yet was but a feeble index of the concentrated attention lent upon this spot by millions in both continents at this moment. He referred to the touching statement from France just made, and said he believed there was an upheaving in hearts pinioned by the principles of Romanism.

General Clinton B. Fisk, of St. Louis, said, as he listened to the various speakers this evening, he felt by turns that he could be a Church of England, Baptist or Presbyterian, and if these meetings continued they would have to batter down all their distinctions.

The doxology was then sung, and the proceedings closed with a benediction by Rev. Dr. McCosh.

The proceedings of Monday, the sixth, were as follows:

At the afternoon session of the Alliance, at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, Prof. Arnold Haygot spoke some time on the subject of geology and the Bible. The next paper, on Christianity and humanity, was read by Dr. J. Williamson Nevin, of Lancaster, Pennsylvania. The discussion was very deep and philosophical. At the conclusion he was greeted with hearty applause.

Prof. Edmund Speiss, of the University of Jena, was next introduced. His subject was theology and philosophy. The speaker spoke in broken English, but, nevertheless, his address was not devoid of interest. He dilated at some length on the different races and religion, and their relation to each other. He ended by hoping the whole world would at some future day become united in their religion.

A gentleman in the aisle of the church then rose and proposed the following question to Principal Dawson: "Is there a necessary antagonism between the Darwinian theory and Christian church?" Upon rising Principal Dawson said that it was rather a hard question, and that it would take a well-prepared treatise to respond satisfactorily. He remarked, however, that he would do his best. He said:

"In science we don't hold that we can do anything without matter and force; we must possess either. Scientists hold to creation, and the Spencerian philosophers hold that they can produce living bodies from dead matter. This they have not, however, as yet fully proved. The Darwinian system is as follows: That all forms of vegetable animal matter are the result of undesigning force. Darwin reasons as to the possibility of the development of species, but does not produce any scientific facts. There may be a modified variety of truth in the Darwinian system as to the various varieties of the races, but that man was produced from an ape does not at all accord with scriptural revelations."

The speaker treated this subject in a highly scientific manner, and drew several philosophical conclusions. He answered several questions put to him by Dr. Hodges, the celebrated theologian, relating to the subject, satisfactorily.

A missionary from China, Dr. Aiken, spoke for some time on the similarity of some portions of the religion of barbarous nations—especially those of China—to the forms of the Catholic Church.

Another reverend gentleman spoke enthusiastically in opposition to the Darwinian system. The conference then adjourned.

A meeting will be held at Association Hall to-night. The proceedings will be conducted entirely in French.

There will be four meetings to-morrow, at one of which Henry Ward Beecher makes an address.

The meeting of the Alliance at Association Hall, to-night, was very thinly attended. M. Bovet, of Paris, presided. Rev. D. S. Choff welcomed the French delegates in behalf of the American branch of the Alliance, closing with the hope that France will soon enjoy the blessings of general education and morality.

Prof. Chartier responded, after which speeches were made by MM. Decappel, Lirleer, Fisch, Bregner and Rochlein. M. Decappel declared that Catholicism was the great enemy of France, and the preaching of pure scriptures the only hope of that nation.

The recommendation of Mayor Havemeyer that the hospitalities of the city be extended to the Evangelical Alliance passed the Board of Aldermen to-day. It was opposed in the Board of Assistant Aldermen by Mr. Chancey, but passed that body also.

Western Virginia Conference.

The Western Virginia Conference held its session at Ashland, Kentucky, beginning September 17. The day of closing is not given. Bishop Marvin presided, and William Gaines Miller was, as usual, secretary. Fourteen were received on trial; three into full connection; four readmitted; one received by transfer (W. B. Kavanaugh;) R. E. Walden was elected and ordained deacon; eleven local preachers were elected, and ten ordained deacons; S. F. Burgess and J. Martin were elected and ordained elders; J. S. Jenkins, S. P. Cummiug, B. Hull, L. Chevront, S. F. Burgess, located; four supernumerary; J. A. West, superannuated; Robert Fox died—the secretary will be so good as to forward us the memoir; J. E. Williams was expelled; members, 11,657; increase, 254; local preachers, 17; decrease, 9; infants baptized, 272—last year, 282; adults, 522—last year, 540; Sunday schools, 180—last year, 185; teachers, 1,313—last year, 1,816; scholars, 7,157—last year, 7,952; necessary for claimants, $1,000—last year, $1,200; collected, $639.99—last year, $449.56; for missions, $860.47—last year, $535.67. The next session is to be at Philippi, Barbour county, West Virginia. The secretary speaks in enthusiastic terms of the session, and of "our Western Bishop." Dr. McFerrin gives us an interesting account of his visit.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Illinois Conference.

The Illinois Conference held its session at Pana, September 3-8. Bishop Marvin presided; Colla Murchison was secretary. Five were admitted on trial; three discontinued, viz.: A. P. Drake, M. Crews, A. W. Sites; six admitted into full connection; J. D. Charles, readmitted; W. J. Bullivant, R. F. Hays, E. C. Harper, received by transfer; four traveling preachers elected and ordained deacons; four local preachers were elected and three ordained deacons; two traveling preachers were elected and ordained elders; one local preacher was elected and two ordained elders; two are supernumerary; two superannuated, viz.: W. C. Blaudell, J. G. Gray; Richard Gillespie had left, and his name is left off the roll. Members, 5,507—decrease, 164; local preachers, 67—increase, 1; infants baptized, 208—last year, 164; adults, 300—last year, 341; Sunday schools, 77—last year, 89; teachers, 526—last year, 553; scholars, 3,593—last year, 4,103; necessary for claimants, $200; collected, $190—last year, $103.58; for missions, $426.86—last year, $405.07. Next session is to be held at Murphysboro, Illinois.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE UNIVERSITY.—It will be seen, says the Galveston Christian Advocate, by the stirring appeal from the pen of Dr. Mood, on another page, that the Texas University will open at Georgetown on the sixth of October, under the most favorable auspices. The first condition has been met. One hundred and seventy thousand dollars has been secured, and, with excellent buildings and a well-selected faculty, it commences its career at once. What has been so well begun must be pressed with vigor to its final consummation.

The convention which inaugurated the enterprise called on the church to make up the sum of $500,000. This will secure for the University a commanding position among the leading institutions in the land. The noble offerings made by the citizens of Williamson county may enable the University to meet the present educational demands of our State, but we must move step by step with the development of this fertile and prosperous country. Several thousand acres of land have been donated. Will not our men of wealth avail themselves of this opportunity of investing the abundance God has given them in an enterprise which will yield ample interest when they have parted with their earthly estates forever?

Our Superintendent for Mexico.

The appointment of Rev. Joel T. Daves as superintendent of our Mexican mission has been announced. Our chief and only objection to this arrangement is that the Louisiana Conference cannot afford to lose so valuable a member. Looking at the subject, however, in a more unselfish light, we should be thankful for the privilege of making this important contribution to the Mexican enterprise. Bro. Daves enters the field with a deep sense of the responsibility resting upon him, and in obedience to a call of Bishop Keener which was wholly unexpected. We suppose he will leave in a few weeks. Let all the church, by prayer and generous giving, hold up his hands and cheer him in his labors. Bro. John, of the Galveston Christian Advocate, referring to the appointment, says:

Bishop Keener has appointed Rev. Joel T. Daves superintendent of missions in Mexico. It is a wise appointment. Bro. Daves commenced his itinerant labors in Texas, and in some sort we may claim that he represents us in the new field to which he has been assigned. He may be confident that the sympathy and prayers of his old associates in ministerial labor will be with him in his important work.

Relief for Memphis.

The ravages of the yellow fever in Memphis are truly awful. Those who can render any assistance should do so at once. The occasion is one of great urgency. We are aware that our people have contributed freely to the Shreveport sufferers, and that the financial troubles are still at their worst in New Orleans, but there are some, perhaps many, who can contribute to the aid of Memphis. The following telegram was received on the sixth from our brethren in Memphis:

MEMPHIS, October 6, 1873.

Rev. Dr. Parker, Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate:

The yellow fever grows worse and worse in our city. Seven hundred and more deaths to date. Seventy-one burials yesterday. The sick are poor, and their families in great want and distress. Other cities and towns are responding nobly to calls for help; but much assistance will be necessary for several weeks. Do call upon our brethren and friends throughout the church, both as congregations and individuals, to render assistance. Send contributions to Major J. J. Busby, chairman of the Citizens' Executive Committee, or to R. W. Blew & Co., publishers of the Western Methodist.

W. C. JOHNSON,
Editor of the Western Methodist.
E. C. SLATER,
Pastor of the First M. E. Church.
GUILFORD JONES,
Pastor of the Hernando Street Church.
S. B. SURATT,
Pastor of the Central Church.

Death of Rev. John G. Deskin.

BRO. PARKER: Rev. John G. Deskin, a superannuated preacher of the Mississippi Conference, died in great peace, at his home near Satartia, Yazoo county, Mississippi, on the fifth instant. An obituary will doubtless be published in due time.

A. M. CAMPBELL, P. C.

SATARTIA, September 30, 1873.

FINANCIAL MATTERS in New Orleans and throughout the country are in an unsettled condition. Such a disturbance in monetary affairs has scarcely occurred in the lifetime of our oldest citizens. Thus far but one of our banks has been compelled to go into liquidation; the others are regarded as safe, and we have heard of no failures among our merchants. There are various conjectures as to the future—the gloomy, the hopeful and the moderate. The worst may not yet have been reached, and some are of opinion that congressional legislation will be required before the banking business of the country can be fully relieved.

SENSIBLE.—The Interior, alluding to the discussion of the question of union between the Northern and Southern churches, says:

The Southern Presbyterians are evincing a great deal of vitality, as are the Methodists. Our Southern exchanges give accounts of numerous revivals and additions to the churches in almost every part of their field. We think it is better that they and we cease a discussion in which it is clear we cannot agree, and severally betake ourselves to the work of evangelization. We shall at least rejoice in each other's success.

OUR LATEST DISPATCHES from Shreveport announce frost in that region and abatement in the fever. We are glad to learn that the pastor of our church, Rev. John Wilkinson, is up and about again.

THE FEVER in Memphis is increasing, and the suffering there is truly deplorable. There were heavy frosts there on the nights of the sixth and seventh, and we may hope for a gradual decline in the epidemic.

THE Boston Transcript recalls the remark of a quaint old clergyman of the last generation, in that city, who used to say that bread is the staff of life, but bread and butter is a gold-headed cane.

WHEN is charity like a bee? When it begins to hum.

Yellow Fever.

This terrible scourge prevails in emphis almost as badly as in reveport. We find the following otice of the fever in the Western ethodist of October 4:

We regret that we cannot report
y abatement of yellow fever in emphis. The disease still rages ith violence in the infected district, d cases occur here and there in arious portions of the city. The llowing exhibit of the mortality om day to day, we think, approxi-ates correctness—probably an adtion of one-fifth to the figures ould bring out the whole truth:

Of those who have died we menon Hiram D. Connell, an excellent itizen, a deacon in the First Pres-yterian church, and of high stand-g among the Odd Fellows of the ty and the State; also J. J. Suter nd W. H. Timberlake, well known that order; Dr. A. Crone, a prac-cing physician in the infected disrict; Frank Tuft, clerk of the First ircuit Court; John F. Titus (died the country, after leaving the city,) on of the late Colonel Frazer Titus; harles H. Newsom, son of Mr. John ewsom, city treasurer, who was mong the deceased of the previous eek; Benjamin L. Radford, brother f the well-known citizen, W. L. adford, Esq.; Alexander J. Stuart, lerk in the Union and Planters' ank; Miss Ella McMahon (died at Humboldt,) a teacher in the Market treet public school. We mention lso Mrs. Mary E. Clemmers, a Methlist sister, with a church letter from aducah, Kentucky, who was buried y Dr. Slater, on Tuesday last—the nly member buried by him, though e has attended funeral services for a umber of other persons. Mr. Eu-ene Magevney, one of our oldest and ost prominent citizens, was buried n Wednesday last, with the ceremo-ies of the Roman Catholic Church.

THERE is a kind of unexpectedess about absent-minded people hich is exceedingly pleasing. We ay be permitted to mention here he recent performance of a country lergyman of this State who has a abit of forgetting things during his ermons, and, after seating himself, uddenly rising to utter them, with he preliminary remark: "By the ay." He had got half way through n eloquent prayer when he hesita-
, forgot what he was doing, and towed himself upon the clerical fa without closing. But in a mo-ent his memory returned, he jump-d up, and, pointing his finger at his ther surprised congregation, sol-mnly observed: "Oh, by the way—Amen!"—New York Tribune.

Books and Periodicals.

THOMAS CHALMERS. A biographical study. By James Dodds. Revised by Attieus G. Haygood, D. D. Nashville, Tennessee: Published by A. H. Redford, agent, for the Methodist Episcopal Church South, 1873.

Another valuable volume for our Sunday school libraries and for all readers. We find it hard to lay the book down when we have taken it up. Chalmers was a grand man, great in intellect, in scholarship, in oratory, and great as a Christian. The title of this work is happy and true—"a biographical study." Chalmers furnishes one of the noblest subjects for a study, and the author has performed his part admirably. 243 pages, 12mo. For sale at the Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville and New Orleans.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE for the weeks ending September 20 and 27 contains the following notable articles: The Trevelyan Papers, Edinburg Review; Madame de Maintenon and the Last Years of Louis the Fourteenth, Temple Bar; Johann Friedrich Schiller, Blackwood's Magazine; French Clerical Doings, Pall Mall Gazette; The Ashantee War, Economist; Iceland Politics, Saturday Review; The Force of Impudence, Globe; Life in the Ice Kingdom, Spectator; Marie-Amelie de Bourbon, Queen of the French, Temple Bar; Prince Bismarck's Next Stroke, Spectator; An Italian Cathedral, Good Words; Whitby, Spectator; Rome and its Adversaries, Saturday Review; A Rag on the Thames, Saint Pauls; with the conclusion of Mrs. Oliphant's "Innocent," an installment of "The Parisians," by Lord Lytton (Bulwer,) poetry and miscellany.

THE ALDINE for October has the following beautiful illustrations: 1. Nutting; 2. Elizabeth Valley, Essex County, New York; 3. The Eve of St. Agnes; 4. Salmon Brook; 5. Falling Leaves; 6. Ah, the Cool Rush Through the Dry-Tongued Trees; 7. The Old Harsen-Manslon, New York; 8. Opulence and Indigence; 9. Flight of Wild Geese; 10. Angelica Kaufmann; 11. Poor Pussy; 12. The Hinter See, Upper Bavaria.

THE SOUTHERN METHODIST HOME ALTAR. A guide to Christian perfection. Edited and published by Rev. William Baker, McMinnville, Tennessee. Price, $1.25 per annum. The September number is filled with profitable reading, tending to lead the believer to higher experiences in the divine life.

WE HAVE RECEIVED No. 8 of Half-Hour Recreations in Popular Science. Boston: Estes & Lauriat. This number contains a lecture by Huxley on Yeast, and one by Prof. John H. Tice on Matter and Force.

CLARKE'S DOLLAR INSTRUCTOR FOR THE REED ORGAN. Ditson & Co., Boston. Very simple, clear, comprehensive. The volume contains eighty pages of instructions, exercises and music.

THE SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR for October is a fine number of this always excellent publication. Published at Athens, Georgia, at $2 per annum. W. L. Jones, editor and proprietor.

WHY I AM NOT A CAMPBELLITE, a tract by Dr. Summers, is first-rate, and should have a general circulation. In some sections it should be scattered broadcast.

THE Sunday Magazine and Good Words for September have been received. Good numbers, and worth a basket full of ordinary magazine literature.

THE LITTLE CORPORAL for October is filled with good things for the young. Published by John E. Miller, Chicago, at $1.50 per annum.

OF THE October periodicals not heretofore acknowledged we have received Old and New, Lippincott's, Scribner's and the Galaxy.

The Romanists in Brazil.

According to the census taken by the Brazil government in 1870, the smallest number of children in the schools, to the entire free population, was in the province of Goyaz, and was one in two hundred and eight; the highest number in attendance was in Ceara, which was one in forty-six.

The Foreign Missionary quotes Rev. Mr. Schneider as saying of Brazil:

"Romanism here is the State religion; for over nine hundred years it had undisputed sway; and what has it done for the people, for their moral, intellectual and spiritual welfare? * * * If I am correct in supposing that in most civilized communities there is one child that ought to go to school for each seven inhabitants, the above table shows us that even in Alagoas only one child goes to any school for nearly every seven that ought to go; and that in Bahia, one of the most advanced provinces in many respects, only one attends school for nearly every seventeen that ought to. Let it be noted, too, that in this calculation the slaves, of which in all Brazil there are universally conceded to be over a million, do not enter. What a blessing it would be if the Romish Church, which makes such strenuous efforts to educate the youth of the United States, would expend but a tithe of those efforts and means in this land of darkness, which, in some places, may almost be felt. Nearly as great a disparity between those who ought to be educated and those who really are, exists in the United States of Colombia and Chili. The educated are the exception and not the rule; and this can be easily understood when it is borne in mind that the instruction of the masses has ever been frowned upon or neglected by their spiritual rulor.

"The state of morals in these countries is sad indeed. Rome has had ample time to show better fruits in this direction than what are found in any country in South America. Some ten generations have passed away since this vast territory fell under papal rule; but the moral improvement of the people has been slow indeed."

JUST AS IT SHOULD BE.—Many of our correspondents are kind enough to keep their book and ADVOCATE business separate. They never write about the business of the two on the same sheet. Although they may inclose the two letters in the same envelop, they are dated, signed and addressed separately, and distinct from each other. This enables us to attend more promptly to each. When the business is mixed the book-keeper of one department must content himself to wait till it has passed through the other department—order filled, goods shipped and letter answered—before the business of his department can be attended to; and as the book-keepers and clerks of the two branches of business are separate, and file their letters separately, it must be apparent to every man of reflection that much perplexity results from writing about the business of both on the same page. When money is remitted it should be distinctly stated what for; and if for two or more purposes, how much for each. Write nothing in business letters except that which has reference to business.

THE WEEKLY WATCHMAN, LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS.—Under contract with E. H. Hotchkiss, editor and proprietor, the subscribers of the Watchman will be furnished with the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE during the time of the suspension of said paper, being thirty-six weeks further, as agreed upon, or until notice thereafter.

IN ALL febrile cases, sour or sick stomach, and sick headache, Rogers' effervescing citrate of magnesia will be found to be a very acceptable purgative and aperient. It is put up in six-ounce bottles, and can be used at all seasons of the year. Prepared by Arthur Rogers, 193 Spring street, New York.

THE PRINTER'S INK manufactured by Messrs. S. Collins & Co., 26 Frankfort street, New York, has given more general satisfaction than any we have ever used, and we take pleasure in recommending the above firm to the patronage of our readers.

MESSRS. BOOSEY & Co., New York, publish all the national songs of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales—words and music. Four volumes; $1 each, or beautifully bound in cloth, gilt, $2.

E. C. BRIDGMAN, No. 5 Barclay street, New York, advertises for plucky agents to sell modern United States and State maps.

THE United States Publishing Company, of New York, advertises for agents to sell Dr. Deems' "Jesus."

WANTED, by Redding & Co., publishers of Masonic works, New York, agents to sell a new work.

NAVRA & OFFNER, No. 174 Canal street, dealers in cutlery and China and crockery-ware.

MR. E. E. F. ROSS, our resident advertising agent, is now on a brief tour through the West and North, and we commend him to the attention of our patrons, and shall be thankful for courtesies extended to him. They are assured that Mr. Ross has no other business, but devotes his entire time to the paper, and is entitled to all the consideration of one of its business corps.

OF ALL the choice condiments that belong to the well-furnished table, as chow-chow, piccalilli, etc., none is so much prized as a standard relish for soups, fish and meats as the Halford Leicestershire Table Sauce, at once the best and cheapest of them all. se13 4t

WE SEE that Procter & Gamble's EXTRA OLIVE SOAP is becoming very popular in our city. Its quality, we know, is superior, and being nicely perfumed, we are not surprised that consumers prefer it, and that it has a large sale.

COLGATE & Co.'s new perfume for the handkerchief, "CASHMERE BOUQUET," will be appreciated by all who have enjoyed the delicate and peculiar fragrance of their toilet soap of the same name, which is so universally popular. je12 1y

LET ALL ameliorate the dreadful effects of Yellow Fever by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator. Let it be given in large doses, that it may have an immediate effect upon the Liver and remove the accumulating bile. It will save from death those afflicted, and relieve them of much suffering. oc9 1t

TEN DOLLARS A DAY.—Employment for all. Patent Novelties. OLIVER L. FELTON, 119 Nassau street, New York. oc9 8t

HAMILTON'S preparation of Buchu and Dandelion cures that most distressing malady, Piles, by increasing the digestive function of the stomach, and by securing a proper secretion and excretion of bile for the lubrication of the bowels. This prevents constipation, and constipation is the immediate cause of Piles. There is common sense in this treatment. Go to Frederickson & Harte's or E. J. Hart & Co.'s drug stores and tell them you want Hamilton's Buchu and Dandelion. They can tell you all about the remedy, and sell it to you also. oc2 2m

DON'T THROW AWAY YOUR MONEY. To the Public.—For over twenty-six years Dr. Tobias' Venetian Liniment has been sold. Every bottle has been warranted, and not one has been returned. Thousands of certificates of its wonderful curative properties can be seen at the depot. It will do all, and more than it is recommended for. It is perfectly safe to take internally. See oath with every bottle. It cures cholera, cramp, dysentery, colic, sea-sickness, chronic rheumatism, sprains, old sores, cuts, etc. Depot, No. 10 Park place, New York. se25 4t

DR. TUTT'S VEGETABLE LIVER PILLS.

THE STARTLING DRAWBACK ON nearly all medicinal agents has ever been that in their process of purgation and purification they have also debilitated the system. To obviate this difficulty physicians have long sought for an agent that would

PURGE, PURIFY and STRENGTHEN

At One and the Same Time.

Their research has at last been rewarded by a discovery which fully realizes the fondest desires of the medical faculty, and which is justly regarded as the most important triumph that Pharmacy has ever achieved. This important desideratum is which purifies the blood and removes all corrupt humor and unhealthy accumulations from the body, and yet produces no weakness or lassitude whatever, but, on the contrary, tones the stomach and invigorates the body during the progress of its operation. It unites the heretofore irreconcilable qualities of a strengthening purgative and a purifying tonic.

DR. TUTT'S PILLS are the most active and searching medicine in existence. They at once attack the very root of diseases, and their action is so prompt that in an hour or two after they are taken the patient is aware of their good effects. They may be taken at any time without restraint of diet or occupation. They produce neither nausea, griping or debility, and as a family medicine they have no rival.

The Child's Corner.

CARRYING WATER.

BY A. H. FOX.

There, now! hoist the jugs up,
One on either horn;
Shake your sides, old horsie,
And earn your dinner of corn!
A little nudge in the saddle,
A twitch of the bridle, or so,
A brown, bare foot in the stirrup,
And ready! off they go!

Chestant is very majestic,
With eyes as grave as a judge;
And he uses his kingly discretion
Whenever it comes to the lodge.
With Joe he's as stiff as a lobby,
—And yawns a regular yawn!
You'd think him an idiot of a horse,
But he's only "letting on."

With Maggie—that's quite different—
He pricks up his ears and goes;
I think he rather likes to feel
The touch of her sunburnt toes;
And he likes her red cheek close to his ear,
And the stroke of her dimpled hand.
Oh! a braver little rider
Ne'er rode in all the land!

Down through the breezy orchard
They are trotting briskly now;
And Maggie gathers an apple,
And Chestant gathers a bough.
And on, where the crispy stubble
Burns in the August light,
And the men are wiping their heady brows,
And blading with all their might.

With a smile and a nod they greet her;
The jugs are lifted below;
How good the cool, fresh water tastes,
Only the harvesters know.
The jugs are passed from mouth to mouth
With many a word of cheer;
And they puff and drink as if their throats
Had thirsted for a year.

Our Maggie looks on brightly,
As she waits in the shade of the stack,
Fanning herself with a big green leaf,
Pushing her sun-bonnet back;
Then father tightens the girth for her,
And a few kind words are said,
And he hangs the jugs in their place again,
And Chestnut turns his head.

Little Corporal.

Alone and Eleven O'Clock.

I was sitting alone in the little back parlor, writing a letter, all the rest of the family in bed, when the clock struck eleven. "Oh," thought I, "it is growing late; I will finish my letter in the morning."

Just then I heard a scratching noise, which appeared to be between the shutter and the window-panes. In vain I looked up, for I could see nothing; so after a time went on writing, saying to myself: "Another line or two and then I will go."

Hardly had I put pen to paper before the noise returned. "A mouse," said I, but on a little consideration it seemed to be a very unlikely place for a mouse. Again I went on with my letter, but it was but for a minute, for the noise once more disturbed me.

"Surely," said I, "it cannot be the canary; I hope it has not been left out of its cage;" so, getting on a chair, I looked in the cage and found poor Jessy at the bottom with her head under her wing. Again I took up my pen to write a little more of my letter.

All at once the noise came louder than before, and I really thought that a man's hand on the outside was feeling about, trying to unfasten the window. Up I jumped at once, unfastened the outer door and ran into the yard, but no man was to be seen. I looked about the premises and examined the window without making any discovery; so, coming into the house again, I put aside my writing-desk and went to bed.

For a full hour I lay awake, wondering what it could possibly be that had given me so much trouble, and still thinking that it must have been the hand of a robber. Indeed, when I was in bed, I fancied that I yet heard the noise. In the morning I again pondered the matter over in my mind, but to no purpose. It was altogether a mystery that I could not unravel. At last I went to Betty and asked her opinion. "Oh, sir," said she, "it was nothing in the world but the jessamine-tree; it always does so when the wind blows!"

On examining the window again I saw a long, loose branch of the jessamine rubbing up and down the panes, and now and then tapping at them, just as the wind happened to blow. Out of this jessamine-bough I had made a mouse, a canary-bird and the hand of a robber. Really, really, I did feel ashamed of myself!

Some good, however, may come out of this affair if my readers will learn from it the folly of giving way to foolish fears and fancies, and the wisdom of exercising a sound judgment.

The only cure for our foolish fears is confidence in our heavenly Father.

Who trusts in God may calmly close his eyes,
As safe, when night and darkness round him rise,
As though a thousand armed men in rows
Were standing round and guarding his repose.

A PECULIAR COUNTRY.—We are sure that our little boys would consider that a very peculiar country in which were neither horses nor dogs. And that our little girls would agree with their brothers in so thinking when told that in the same land there were no dear little kittens nor rabbits. And boys and girls together would exclaim in amazement when told that in this queer country were to be found neither sheep nor cows nor goats nor chickens nor woodpeckers nor robins nor pigeons—in short, none of the animals which we are in the habit of seeing daily. Neither are there any lions, tigers or elephants in this strange country.

But among the birds we hear of honey-suckers, cockatoos and brush-tongued lories. And among four-footed animals we are told of such singular creatures as the duck-billed platypus (all readers of the Swiss Family Robinson will remember this animal as the "beast with a bill,") wombats, opossums and kangaroos.

Ah! that last name has betrayed us! All our little folks will now see that this queer country is Australia.

It is true that all our domestic animals are at present found in Australia, because they have been taken there by the settlers; but when that big island was first explored it possessed no animals that are familiar in Europe and North America, and only one or two kinds that had ever been seen on the islands which were but a short distance from its own shores.—Ethel C. Gale, in Little Corporal.

AFTER THE EVENT.—A Fable.—A swallow's nest fell from the eaves of a farm-house, and the barn-yard poultry and the hedge-birds gathered about the ruins, and went into committee on them. "I knew it was going to fall—I felt sure it must the last time I went on the roof," chirped a sparrow.

"Stupid thing—building its nest up there," hissed a goose.

"I could have taught her how to lay eggs without getting them smashed, if she had only come to me," quacked a duck.

"And I could have taught her how to hatch them—I have had to hatch yours, Neighbor Duck," clucked a hen.

"Gobble, gobble, gobble—If people choose to be fools they must take the consequences," said a strutting turkey-cock, puffing out his feathers.

"My friends, you are very kind to take so much interest in my affairs," twittered the poor swallow; "but if you were so sure that my house was going to fall, isn't it a pity that you didn't tell me so a little sooner?"—Good Things.

COOKIES ON THE LOWER SHELF.—Some one asked Charlie whom he liked to visit best—Aunt Jane or Aunt Mary.

"O! Aunt Mary, of course," said he, "'cause she keeps her cookies on the lower shelf."

Last Sabbath, when I heard the Rev. Dr. S. preach, I thought of dear little Charlie's longing for cookies, and they put away on the upper shelf or locked securely up. Dr. S. never took out one. The sermon and the prayer were all for grown-up people. Not a sentence meant for the lambs, and nothing that would find them. Some of them looked O! so hungry and tired. They were so uneasy; kept looking at the clock, and wishing the meeting would stop.

"He never even prayed for little boys and girls," said Charlie when he got home, "and I don't like him a bit."

Ah! reverend doctor, you missed a chance to please the Master and feed the lambs.—Sunday School Times.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Thoughts for the Month.

Oats may still be sown. If the land is rich and the seasons favorable those sown before the fifteenth will do well—put in later than the middle the crop is by no means certain. It may be laid down, as a general rule, that with winter crops the richer the land the later may sowings be made. Clover and grass may also be sown the first half of the month with like chances of success; but we would not advise it done—it would be better, if the sowings are delayed till October, to wait till spring. Every failure with the above crops is a misfortune at the South, because their cultivation is not yet sufficiently established for the farmer to fall without discouragement, and it is exceedingly important that no injudicious advice be given. It has been a great misfortune to the country that many of its agricultural writers have little actual experience on the farm, and in other cases have an experience which can neither benefit themselves nor the reader of their writings. If a successful farmer makes a failure, it is always instructive; if a visionary makes one, it may not throw a single ray of light on the path of progress. The efforts of the latter are neither properly directed nor kept within legitimate bounds, and every one expects failure as a natural result; while with the former perhaps only one important condition of success was omitted; if so, that one stands forth prominently, to be studied and weighed, and its share in the failure carefully ascertained.

WHEAT.

Preparations for this crop should now be made, even where it is regarded injudicious to seed down in October. The clean fallow of the English, as a preparation for a wheat crop, may be regarded as a waste of labor, but there can be no doubt of its great value to the crop. The repeated plowing of the land brings the latter into a state in which it can give promptly of its elements to this most civilized of our domesticated plants—civilized in the sense of being farthest removed from its wild state, and incapable of thriving except under most artificial conditions. It is not a gross feeder, cannot, like corn, thrive on coarse fare—its elaborating power is relatively small. Choice and delicate food must therefore be within easy reach of its delicate, fibrous roots, and the soil soft and pulverized, that the delicate rootlets may roam at pleasure in search of it.

As lands become exhausted by cultivation they refuse to yield crops of wheat sooner than any other. It is useless to sow it on poor land, or that poorly prepared. Better expend your labor and money on something else. But every farmer ought to raise wheat enough for his family and dependents—if he has a little surplus for the poor widows and orphans of dead but Immortal Confederates no harm will be done. Four or five acres on each farm can furnish enough for these purposes, as was shown by experiments in this vicinity a few years ago; where, upon naturally poor granite soils, the yield was from forty to forty-six bushels. Deep and repeated plowings, with high manuring, was the only secret in the matter. The highest yields were from drilled wheat—drills ten to seventeen inches apart. We have no doubt but that it would be found generally advantageous to drill wheat, and in the spring run a plow between the rows to break the crust and kill the weeds. In the absence of a drilling machine run furrows with a narrow bull-tongue, sow the grain broadcast, as usual, and cover with a harrow or brush run crossways the furrow. Thus managed the plants will come up quite regularly in the drill. If the land will admit of it, run the drills north and south, to allow the sunshine to get between the rows; this will diminish the danger of rust, and make the stalks hard and tough, and therefore less liable to lodge or fall down. High, dry knobs, and northern slopes well drained, are best adapted to wheat, and if the soil is stiff, so much the better for that.

VARIETIES.

White wheats, while yielding the finest flour and bringing the highest price in the market, are not so hardy as the red or amber varieties. The amber wheats are perhaps best for general culture for family purposes, and for southern latitudes the earlier maturing the better—late varieties are more liable to rust. Those which ripen the latter part of May are the safest, both because more likely to escape rust and because they encounter less risk of being cut off by drought.

TIME OF SOWING.

From the middle of October to the middle of November includes the best time for sowing—middle of October in the colder, middle of November in the warmer portions of the South. Sown too early, there is danger of the Hessian fly—sown too late, the cold keeps back the plants too much. Sow when the ground is dry, and don't forget to soak the seed in blue-stone. One pound will be enough for five bushels of seed. Dissolve it in water. Put the seed in baskets and dip them down in the solution, take out and let the pickle drain off, and when the grains are nearly dry roll them in plaster or lime. It is best to have the seed whitened, that the sower may see with what regularity his work is being done.

SWEET POTATOES.

Toward the last of the month these will have to be dug. A slight touching of the vines by frost will do no harm, but it is best to dig before a freeze, as the upper ends of the tubers are very apt to be frost-bitten thereby. We have found it best to dig in dry weather, and to put away the potatoes dry. With above precautions observed there is no difficulty in keeping them through the winter if put up in banks or hills. Good farmers differ in the details of these banks. The essential points are to make the dirt covering thick (not less than one foot) and to keep it dry. It is well to have an air-hole at first for the moisture developed in "sweating" to escape. We should be under obligations to any reader who would give us a description of all the varieties of the sweet potato, and the good and bad points in each.

GROUND PEAS.

These should be dug before frost touches the vines or immediately afterward. If thus managed, by pulling up the vines, nearly all the pods will come up with them. If left for some time after frost the stem of the pod rots, and when the vines are pulled most of the pods are left in the ground. Lean two bunches together, top to top, so as to allow the pods to dry. When dry stack or house. The pods should never have rain upon them after they are dug, as they are liable to blacken and become unsaleable.

TURNIPS.

When drilled turnips should receive light plowings and hoeings during this month. Where broadcasted they should be hoed and thinned out. Sown too thick (as they generally are,) and entirely neglected, fine roots are seldom made. When the cold becomes severe enough to check growth cut off the tops and bank the roots, as you would potatoes. It is not necessary to cover them so thickly with dirt. Rutabagas, seven-tops and some others, will sometimes stand the winter left in the ground, but there is a risk about it whenever the mercury descends to fifteen degrees Fahrenheit.—Southern Cultivator.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

THE NEXT TERM OF THIS VENERABLE INSTITUTION OPENS ON THE FIRST MONDAY IN OCTOBER, 1873.

FACULTY.

REV. C. G. ANDREWS, A. M., President, and Professor of Mental and Moral Science, Political Economy and International Law.
REV. A. R. HOLCOMBE, A. M., Professor of Mathematics and Adjunct Professor of Natural Sciences.
G. H. WILEY, A. M., Professor of Ancient and Modern Languages.
T. S. JONES, M. D., Professor of Natural Sciences.
REV. R. D. NORSWORTHY, A. M., Principal of the Preparatory Department.

CHARGES.

|---|---|
| Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in College | $60 00 |
| Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in Preparatory Department | 40 00 |
| Contingent expenses | 5 00 |

A matriculation fee of $5 must be paid on entering any regular college class. One-half the charges must be paid when the student enters; the other half on the beginning of the second term, March 1.

BOARD.

Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel, can be had in the best families for $20 per month. Day-boarding with the same families, $13 per month. Rooms provided in the dormitories free of rent. Board to be paid in advance at least one month.

LOCATION.

This institution is located in the lovely village of Jackson, about twelve miles from Bayou Sara, in a grove of pine, magnolia, oak and beech. The location is remarkable for its beautiful woodlands, its bland and delightful atmosphere, its pure water, its unrivaled healthfulness, and its cultivated and refined society.

WHEN FOUNDED.

The college was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and ceded to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1845.

ALUMNI.

Its Alumni numbers two hundred and three, and they are to be found in the most honorable and useful stations in the land.

APPARATUS AND CABINET.

The college possesses a valuable set of Philosophical, Astronomical and Chemical Apparatus, and also a well-selected Mineralogical and Geological Cabinet. The apparatus includes a Theodolite, Sextant, Compass, Chronometer, Atwood's Machine, Whirling Tables; Electrical Machine, Air Pump, various combinations of the Mechanical Powers, Batteries, Chemical Tests, etc., sufficient for a thorough and extended course of observations and experiments. Steps have been taken by the Board of Trustees to put these in thorough repair.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

There are two regular Literary Societies connected with the Institution. These are of great utility to young men aspiring a liberal education—improving them in the art of public speaking, making them in some degree familiar with the proceedings of deliberative bodies, and in cultivating systematic business habits. Each Society has a convenient hall and a well-selected Library—about one thousand six hundred volumes each, which, added to the College Library of two thousand volumes, makes over five thousand volumes in the college.

BUILDINGS.

The Trustees are determined to continue the repairs on the buildings till completed. The grand Center Building is a noble specimen of architectural beauty and adaptation to the purposes of its erection. The wings, built of solid brick, present each a front of two hundred feet, with upper and lower galleries the entire length, supported by Tuscan columns, and with the center making in the perspective a continuous front of seven hundred feet.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

In the Preparatory Department students are fitted for regular college classes, or may obtain a thorough English or commercial education.
ITS FACULTY are men of experience and success in teaching.

THE BEST ROUTE to the college is to leave the Mississippi river at Port Hudson, take the Clinton and Port Hudson Railroad to Midway station, report to Captain F. J. Haynes as a student for Centenary, and he will convey you to the college, a distance of seven miles, for $1.50 for single passengers, or $1 each where several are together. Address

WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE,
BROOKHAVEN, MISSISSIPPI.

ON THE NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON AND GREAT NORTHERN RAILROAD, one hundred and twenty-eight miles from New Orleans, will reopen on the TWENTY-FOURTH OF SEPTEMBER NEXT.

The health is good, discipline firm but parental, instruction thorough, and economy in dress enforced. The expenses are as low as the advantages given will allow.

The Director of the Music Department, Prof. ECKHARDT, is unexcelled. Madame JULIUS, an accomplished Parisian lady, has charge of French and the ornamental branches.

During the past term there were Thirteen in the Faculty, and Two Hundred and One pupils in attendance, over one hundred of whom boarded in the college.

All the branches of a thorough education are taught, including the Languages, ancient and modern; also the higher mathematics.

Particular attention is paid to Spelling, Writing, Reading and Composition; also to the neatness, good manners and morals of the pupils.

EAST MISSISSIPPI
FEMALE COLLEGE.
A Chartered Literary Institution under the Auspices of the M. E. Church South.
Located at Meridian, Mississippi.
ANNOUNCEMENT.

The annual term of 1873-4 will open on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873. It will be divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. Comfortable convenience for boarding in the college building will be furnished and supervised by the president. The Board of Trustees claim to have made ample arrangements for the Literary, scientific, Ornamental and Musical departments of the college, by the election of competent and experienced teachers for the various departments, and that facilities for thorough and liberal education in the East Mississippi Female College may no more than be equaled by the best of other similar institutions. Our college is recommended to public consideration with candor and with confidence of a successful career. We hope to see its interests and influence widen and deepen, under continued and steady prosperity, and it is apprehended that young ladies who now place their names upon the roll of this institution will be pleased in coming years by recognizing in their Alma Mater a living and honored success of educational enterprise.

BOARDING.

Boarders engaged for the whole term will be charged $100, $80 of which must be paid at the opening of each session.

Those engaged for one session will be charged $60, $30 of which must be paid at the beginning of the session. Those engaged for a shorter or an indefinite time will be charged $25 per month, to be paid quarterly in advance.

Extra charges will be made for washing and lights. Each boarder must furnish two sheets, one blanket and two towels. Especial printed regulations will be given each boarder, giving her directions and restrictions respecting their family and social relations and practices.

In all cases of sickness, resulting in the removal of boarders from the college, advance payments will be promptly refunded. No pains will be spared to render each boarder comfortable and happy. Their treatment will be parental, and influences of strict propriety and refinement will be continually brought to bear upon all their habits.

Our college is in its infancy. The enterprise has been recognized by the Mississippi Conference as meeting a growing demand for educational facilities in east Mississippi. In the judgment of the church and Conference, Meridian is the proper place for the institution. The location is healthy, access is easy, society is of the right type, and almost every consideration strengthens the judgment of the board and Conference in locating the college at this place. Since this institution is under the supervision of the church there is no hesitancy in urging earnest co-operation on the part of the ministry in the surrounding country. Our appeal is earnest. We propose to place the standard of instruction high, that they who graduate here may prove themselves worthy of honors conferred, and thereby honor themselves, the college and the world. Address

EMORY AND HENRY COLLEGE,
WASHINGTON COUNTY, VA.
On the Eleventh of September

our scholastic year begins, and continues Forty consecutive weeks. It is divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. The Spring session begins January 29, 1874. Students can enter at any time, though they should, if possible, begin with the session. The entire expenses for the forty weeks, including board, tuition, fuel, room-rent, washing and contingent fees, need not exceed $230. These rates, so remarkably low considering the superior advantages here offered, must recommend this institution to the favor of those seeking thorough collegiate training. Before selecting your school consult any of those knowing the college, especially our Alumni and old students, prominent men in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and professors of the University of Virginia, who have authorized this reference, or send directly to the undersigned for a catalogue or for any information desired.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FROM A RECENT ANALYSIS BY Prof. W. O. Atwater, of Yale College, the following table will show the chemical composition of YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Albuminoids | 12.45 | Sugar | 13.06 |
| Gum | 5.21 | Starch | 55.62 |
| Fat | 8.59 | Cellulose | 2.95 |
| Ash | 2.12 | | |

It will be seen that the Albuminoids (albumen, gluten, casein, etc.) constitute nearly thirteen per cent. "These," says Youmans, "are the flesh-forming principles—the true elements of nutrition."

It is particularly valuable to all requiring a highly nutritious and at the same time easily assimilated diet, and hence is used as an article of daily consumption in climates which occasion rapid waste of the system. "Almost all Asiatics, Africans and (aboriginal) Americans use it as their chief nourishment."—Youmans' Hygiene, or his work on the Vegetable World.

In Hermetically-sealed YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN all the nutritive qualities of the grain are preserved. The grain is cut from the ear and placed in tin canisters with the rich juices (or milk) which exude from it, and is then sealed air-tight and the canister subjected to steam heat, which coagulates the albumen. In this condition it will keep for years. It will be seen by this that all the nutritive properties of the grain are preserved, and the most nourishing article of food in the domain of nature placed within the reach of all.

Thos. Broughton, with John D. Park, of Cincinnati, says: "W. C. Hamilton & Co.—I had had the Ague for two long years, and had tried several remedies of acknowledged or pretended merit without any good result. I finally tried your preparation—KRESS FEVER TONIC. One bottle completely broke up the malady, and I am now perfectly well. I can testify that your medicine does all you claim for it; and it is only due to you that this acknowledgment should be made, especially as so many worthless chill medicines are now offered."

HAS LONG ATTRACTED THE NOTICE of the most eminent physicians by its great efficacy in curing what were considered incurable cases of disease, where the patients have been almost destroyed by SCROFULA, etc., and Prof. Valentine Mott, of the New York University, Profs. Gibson, Dewees and Chapman, of Philadelphia, and many other physicians of celebrity, have, over their own signatures, letters recommending it and certifying to its great merits. It has been occasionally advertised, and thousands of families throughout the United States recommend and use it. The Laboratory is under the direction of Dr. FRANKLIN STEWART, who has devoted his attention and skill in its careful preparation during the past twenty-five years, and not a bottle put up that is not worth many times its cost to the patient. It is perfectly safe for the most disposed and debilitated, and in all cases where the Blood is not pure it should be used freely.

Prepared only at SWAIM'S LABORATORY, 113 South Seventh street, below Chestnut, Philadelphia.

New Orleans Markets.

From the New Orleans Price Current.

The river is 12 feet 1 inch below high-water mark.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the third instant:

|---|---|
| Louisiana and Mississippi | bales 4,919 |
| Lake | 15 |
| Mobile | 756 |
| Total | 5,770 |

On Saturday the sales reached 1,100 bales, taken for Havre, Liverpool and the North. The downward tendency to the medium and lower grades was checked by an improvement at Liverpool of ⅛d. in uplands and 1-16d. in Orleans, and an advance in futures at New York. On Monday the market opened with a continued fair demand, and, although the movement was checked by the stringent pretensions of factors, about 800 bales changed hands during the morning, partly at previous rates and partly at an advance of ⅛@¼c. after which there was no material change, and the day's business reached 1,900 bales, the closing rates showing a net advance of ⅛c. in good ordinary to low middling inclusive, and ⅛@¼c. in the better qualities. Good ordinary sold at 16⅝@16¾c., strict do at 16¾@17c., low middling at 17⅛@17¼c., strict low middling to middling at 18c., middling at 18⅛c., strict middling at 18¾c., gold middling at 19¼c., and middling fair at 19¾c. On Tuesday the demand was more active, and, with a fair supply, the sales summed up 2,800 bales, taken for Havre, the Continent and Liverpool, with only a limited amount for the North. The medium and lower grades showed some irregularity, without any quotable variation, but the better qualities, which were in light supply and special request, commanded very full prices. During the morning competition among buyers enabled factors to realize outside rates, but later the demand for the former appeared to be less eager. Prices, nevertheless, were fully maintained, and the market closed strong at our quotations.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 5,700 bales, against 4,370 for the corresponding time last week and 2,500 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 34,852 bales, against 73,346 bales to the same date last year, and the decrease in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 105,938 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is a decrease of 8,402 to Great Britain, of 14,121 to France and of 2 to other foreign ports. We quote:

|---|---|
| Good ordinary | 16 @ 16⅜ |
| Strict good ordinary | 16⅝ @ 16⅞ |
| Low middling | 17⅛ @ 17⅜ |
| Strict low middling | 17⅝ @ 17⅞ |
| Middling | 18⅛ @ — |
| Strict middling | 18⅝ @ — |

| Stock on hand and on shipboard | | 29,358 |

SUGAR.—The receipts are trifling and the stock on hand is small. The sales are confined to retail lots, to dealers and grocers, at 9¼c. for fair, 10c. for good fair, 10¼c. for fully fair, 10¾c. for prime to choice, and 11¼c. for yellow clarified. On Tuesday 16 hhds. open-kettle sold at 9¾@10¼c., and 10 yellow clarified at 11¼c. ₩ lb.

MOLASSES.—There is none coming in from plantation, and no demand for the old stock in the sheds. On Tuesday 8 hhds. old, just reserved, sold at 40c. ₩ gallon.

CORN—Is in light supply, and, though the demand is only local, prices show an advance. On Saturday 900 sacks sold at 72c. for white mixed, and 73c. for choice white. On Monday 900 sacks sold at 71c. for yellow mixed in second hand sacks, 73c. for white mixed, and 74c. for white. On Tuesday 4,100 sacks sold at 75c. for white mixed and yellow, and 80c. for white.

OATS.—The supply is light and the demand is fair. Prices have advanced. On Saturday 2,150 sacks sold at 50@53c. ₩ bushel, while on Monday 600 sacks sold at 55c. ₩ bushel. On Tuesday 1,950 sacks sold at 54@55c. for choice Galena.

BRAN.—There is very little here, but liberal supplies are expected. The demand has been limited at unchanged prices. On Saturday 150 sacks sold at $1 ₩ 100 lbs.—On Monday no sales were reported. On Tuesday 250 sacks sold at $1 ₩ 100 lbs.

PORK—Is very dull, with little or no demand for round lots. Round lots are held at $17 ₩ bbl. for mess, and on Saturday 50 bbls. sold at that price. On Tuesday a lot of 40 bbls. sold at $17 ₩ bbl. It is retailing at $17@17 50 ₩ bbl.

BACON.—On Tuesday there was only a job trade at 9¼@9¾c. for shoulders, 11c. for clear rib sides, and 10¼@10¾c. for clear sides; 5 casks shoulders sold at 9¼c., 5 do. clear sides at 10¼c. ₩ lb., and 5 do. do. on private terms.

MONETARY.

Gold has continued too much unsettled and irregular to admit of quotations. At New York it opened on Tuesday at 110⅛, and closed at 110⅝. The only sales reported are $3,000 on Tuesday for currency at 112⅛, $2,000 at 113 and $4,000 at 113⅜. In certified checks sales were reported at 117@119.

Special Notices.

A CAMP MEETING will be held at Salem camp ground, Jackson county, Mississippi, commencing on Thursday evening before the third Sunday in October. Ministers are earnestly requested to attend. PY H. NAPIER, P. C.

Appointments for Quarterly Meetings.

NOTICE.—The Publishing Committee of the ADVOCATE gave it as their opinion that the insertion of the notices of Quarterly Conferences once or twice was sufficient, and, as the space of the paper is valuable, they passed a resolution recommending that they "be not inserted more than once or twice." Our friends who are interested in these appointments will take due notice thereof, as we propose to be governed by the resolution in future.

The Christian Advocate.

PUBLISHED BY ROBT. J. HARP, FOR THE ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH SOUTH.

VOL. 19. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1873. NO. 42.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—A fireat Mount Vernon to-day destroyed twenty buildings. Loss, $50,000.

The third trial of Stokes commenced to-day. His hair is a little grayer; otherwise his appearance is unchanged.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 8.—A heavy frost occurred here last night, and there are indications of another to-night.

To-day a greater number of new yellow fever cases have been developed than on any one day heretofore.

There are about six hundred cases under treatment in the infected district.

There were forty-two interments to-day of persons who died from yellow fever, and twelve interments of persons who died from other diseases. Among the former was Father Carey, of the Dominican priesthood.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A large audience assembled in Madison Square church this afternoon to listen to the addresses upon the missionary work of the various missionaries in attendance upon the Evangelical Alliance. Rev. Dr. Anderson, of Boston, presided. Addresses were made by the Rev. Mr. Jessup, of Syria; Lanslug, of Tyre; Gibson, of China; Talmage, of Amoy, China; Edens, of Japan; Bliss, of Constantinople; Labarre, of Persia; Kalopothuke, of Greece; Doolittle, of China; Grant, of south Africa; Smith, of Ceylon; McFarland, of Siam; Carpenter, of British Burmah, and York, of Madeira. The exercises closed by the congregation singing, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," the last verse being sung in all the various languages represented by the missionaries, and the congregation in English.

A dispatch from Salt Lake City says the public session of the Mormon conference and the private meetings of the priesthood terminated on Wednesday, and the departing missionaries were blessed on Thursday.

Brigham Young's health is declining. He only spoke twice, and distinguished himself by his hostility to free schools. He announced emphatically that he would oppose legislation in favor of free schools and use all his influence everywhere against them. Thirty-two elders were called on mission. Joseph F. Smith goes to Europe.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 10.—There have been three fever deaths here in the last twenty-four hours. The total number of deaths since the commencement, September 19, is twelve.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—After the adjournment of the Evangelical Alliance this evening the American branch held a meeting in Association Hall. Rev. Dr. McCosh, of Princeton, delivered a brief address, after which a set of resolutions was offered by Rev. Dr. Schenck, the substance of which was that the American branch should establish a permanent organization under the name of "The Christian Congress," and that their meetings should be held biennially.

Considerable discussion ensued as to the name of the intended organization. It was finally resolved that it should be called "The United States Branch of the Evangelical Alliance." A vote of thanks was then tendered to Rev. Drs. Prime and Schaff, and the meeting adjourned.

A number of foreign delegates to the Evangelical Alliance sailed for home to-day.

SHREVEPORT, Oct. 11.—The interments to-day were six, four of them of colored persons.

The interments for the week ending to-night number seventy-two to seventy-seven for last week. Those of colored persons for the week foot up twenty-three to seventeen for last week.

Total interments since the outbreak of the epidemic, five hundred and ninety-nine.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 13.—The Evangelical Alliance arrived here this evening, and were welcomed by Judge Pierce for the mayor in Independence Hall. Henry Ward Beecher also spoke, extending the right hand of fellowship on behalf of the whole country. Rev. C. Dallas Marston, vicar of London, said forty years ago he had taught Sunday school in the church of the Epiphany in Philadelphia, and therefore, although an Englishman, he felt he was partly an American and was forced to speak in the Hall of Independence. Pasteur Fisch, of Paris, Rev. Lowry E. Berkley, and Rev. Narayan Sheshadra, of Bombay, also made short addresses. The Dean of Canterbury closed the services with prayer, after which the delegates proceeded in a body to the banquet of welcome in the Continental Hotel.

The delegates proceeded in a body to Horticultural Hall, which was handsomely decorated, and with seats upon the stage. Around the walls, in beautiful designs, were the names of Luther, Wesley, Huss, Lavingle, Wycliffe, Calvin, Knox, the letters being formed of natural flowers on an evergreen background. Over the stage and arches were floral letters, reading: "All one in Christ," "Let brotherly love continue." The arms of all nations were also displayed on the wall.

Mr. Stuart called the meeting to order, and after singing a hymn, in which the audience joined, the Rev. Dr. Harrison, of Loudon, offered a brief prayer. He asked for a blessing on the Alliance, and trusted that through it all nations would be brought to Christ. Mr. Stuart then reviewed the organization of the Alliance, after which ex-Governor Pollock and Bishop Simpson made addresses of welcome.

The Dean of Canterbury followed next in order, in which he said that they were delegates from the one army of Christ, and should therefore love the various regiments, and not turn upon each other to destroy. Rev. N. Sheshadra, of Bombay, next spoke, and Rev. Henry Ward Beecher followed. The latter said that better men were wanted in the church; that holiness, which makes a man love his fellow-man, was also wanted, and that Christian unity must result from Christian life.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The President has proclaimed the twenty-seventh of November as a day of thanksgiving.

The Star says a private dispatch by cable states that Thomas Scott has succeeded in negotiating $44,000,000 of the first mortgage bonds of the Texas Pacific railway. The financial arrangements by which this result was reached were perfected during the height of the late panic.

The President received the delegates to the Evangelical Alliance today. In response to the address of Rev. Dr. Tiffany he said: "It affords me very great pleasure to welcome this Alliance to the capital of this great nation, which I feel is the freest of nations to work out the problem of your mission."

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, being called upon, said: "I have also profound respect for the President of the United States, as he is almost the only man who thinks a deal and can hold his peace."

Addresses were also made by Rev. Mr. Sheshadra, of Bombay, and Rev. Matteo Prochel, of Italy.

SHREVEPORT, Oct. 14.—The decrease in the epidemic, noted for some days past, continues.

The number of new cases reported from the city proper to-day is small, while but very few new cases are announced from the outskirts.

The territory over which the epidemic is known to range is so large that it is indeed very difficult to obtain reliable information, yet as today from all quarters come reports of a gradual decrease, there can be no question of the fact that the fever is steadily abating.

At least thirty black vomit cases are known to have recovered since the epidemic commenced. Number of interments to-day, seven.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 14.—From noon yesterday until noon to-day there were forty-seven deaths, of which forty were from yellow fever.

The latest news indicates a slight check. The new cases are less malignant.

FOREIGN

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Bishop Reinkens, of the Old Catholic Church, to-day took the oath of allegiance to the German Emperor.

The customary formula was gone through, with the exception of the reservation of the first allegiance to the Pope, which was omitted.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Sir Samuel Baker and wife have arrived here.

VIENNA, Oct. 10.—The German Emperor, with a suite of fifty persons, is expected to arrive here on the sixteenth. His visit is intended to be a quiet one, and there will be little or no public festivity.

MADRID, Oct. 13.—The Intransigentes fleet has been defeated by the national squadron. The fight took place on Saturday afternoon, near Carthagena, and lasted about two hours. The insurgents' vessels were considerably injured, and were compelled to return to Carthagena harbor.

THE prevailing yellow fever epidemics at Memphis and Shreveport, though terrible, started later in the season, and are not so sweeping as the great yellow fever pestilence that visited Norfolk and Portsmouth, Virginia, in 1855. In a retrospective glance to that year and study of the Virginia plague, it is stated that the scourge raged ninety days in the two doomed towns, and that "out of a population of six thousand who remained, every man, woman and child—almost without exception—was stricken, and about two thousand were buried, being not less than two out of every three whites, and one out of every three of the whole abiding community of Norfolk, white and black. One-half of the resident physicians died, and thirty-six in all, resident and visitant, were laid in the grave. The mortality carried off at Norfolk sixty, seventy and even eighty per day, and from twenty to thirty in Portsmouth. On the twenty-fourth of August there were at least five hundred cases in Norfolk, and six apothecary establishments were driving a large business, working day and night, and on the twenty-fifth there were about forty burials, including the Hon. Hunter Woodis, the mayor of the city."

Compared with these figures, if correct, the great mortality at Memphis and Shreveport is not as bad as it might be. It is doubtless due to better medical treatment and nursing, as well as the shorter season the fever has to run.—Picayune.

A PHYSICIAN stopped at the shop of a country apothecary and inquired for a pharmacopoeia. "Sir," said the apothecary, "I know of no such farmer living in these parts."

THE peace of God comes by nothing external, but by a complete annihilation of self-will and self-interest.

THE strongest swimmers are often drowned, because they trust to their power and venture too far.

From the Work.

CARTHAGE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The Lord hath been with and graciously revived his people on this circuit. Our third quarterly meeting was held at Conway, embracing the first Sabbath in September, which resulted in thirty-four necessions and a large number of conversions. We have had in all fifty-seven necessions on the circuit, and baptized thirty-one adults and fourteen infants.

OCTOBER 4, 1873.

REVIVAL IN WILLIAMSBURG, MISSISSIPPI.—Mr. Editor: We began a protracted meeting in the town of Williamsburg on the twenty-seventh of September last, and continued it until the first day of October. Seven were baptized and fourteen were added to the church, some according to the form of the Discipline and some by letter. We had a gracious season. The presence and power of God was with us, and we all hope for better times.

The brethren feel greatly encouraged; so much so that they determined to build a house of worship in the town of Williamsburg, and the enterprise met with such a favorable reception that the greater portion of the money was made up before the meeting closed. E. J. TAYLOR.

CAMDEN CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The Lord has been with us, this year, on the Camden circuit, Alabama Conference, and the work of grace in many places has been much revived. The most of our protracted meetings have been seasons of power. Twenty-eight persons have united with the church up to the present, and I trust the membership has been greatly improved. We are to have other meetings before Conference, in which we hope to have the presence and power of the great Head of the church. Our community has for several weeks been infested with a band of robbers, which prevented me from attending a protracted meeting at one of my appointments a week ago. I could not leave my family to the mercy of these wretches. The community was much excited, more than a dozen houses having been entered at night, and an old gentleman and his wife badly injured. A. M. JONES.

CAMP MEETING, FLOYD AND DELHI CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE. Mr. Editor: Midway camp ground is located at a church bearing the name of Midway, about equi-distant from Delhi and Floyd, on the circuit known as Floyd and Delhi, of which Rev. George M. Liverman is pastor. It was my privilege to attend the camp meeting there, beginning on Wednesday, October 1, and concluding on the sixth. It was a glorious meeting, the net results of which will be known to mortals only in eternity. Its visible results, however, were thirty accessions to the church, with probably an equal number of conversions, some of which were very bright. The congregations were good—on Sunday very good for a country so sparsely populated. The behavior was as good as is common at a meeting of this kind. The ministry was represented by Bros. Daves, Cobb, McKee, Wright, Thomas Randle, Johnson, president of Whitworth, Mann, local, Liverman, the pastor, and your correspondent. The preaching was plain and earnest, and was attended with the demonstrations of the Spirit and with power. The church was greatly revived and encouraged. On Monday I accompanied the pastor to the residence of an old man, in his eighty second year, who desired to be baptized and received into the church. His desire was gratified, and he, in the presence of God and his aged wife, assumed the obligations of Christianity. May the Lord bless that dear old man.

On Sunday the claims of the Mexican mission were presented by Bro. Evans. Result: $317 received in cash and subscriptions.

All were pleased with the president of Whitworth, and would be pleased to see him here again.

Bro. Liverman is doing a good work among these people. He is greatly beloved by them, and his labors are being blessed by the Master.

The people here intend establishing a permanent camp ground at Midway, and expect to hold another meeting about the same time in 1874. Many more have expressed their intention of tenting than were tented this time.

One of the best barometers for determining the spiritual condition of any community is their contributions for the endowment of Homer College. Applying that test here, the spiritual condition is good, as their contributions are liberal, $3,250 being subscribed in four days. May the Lord bless these people, and stimulate others to do likewise.

Your brother,

THOMAS J. UPTON.

OCTOBER 10, 1873.

YAZOO CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: Having finished my protracted meetings, I now take pleasure in sending you a brief account of them. At Locust Grove we had a considerable revival. By the assistance of Bro. H. H. Montgomery, whose preaching was attended with much power, and Bro. Baker, local, and an active membership, as instruments of righteousness in the hands of God, the old and young were moved to seek an interest in the blood of Jesus. About all of the Sunday school joined the church. Some were happily converted. Indeed we had a good meeting, and a foretaste of the joys above.

Next came Tranquil. For several days we labored in an atmosphere somewhat like that toward the North Pole; but finally, by importunity to God, he vouchsafed to send the genial rays of his love upon us with such reviving influence that all were sensible of the presence of the Lord. Father George W. Cooper, whom we all love, was present with his zeal and love for the cause of his Master. We are unable to estimate the value of his services on that occasion. Sinners were convicted and came trembling to the altar, begging for mercy. Some were enabled to testify that God hath power on earth to forgive sins. The Lord verified his promise to us in opening the windows of heaven and pouring out a blessing, so that there was not room enough to receive it. Several denominations were represented, whose love melted and ran together in shouting God's praise. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." There were twenty-five accessions, ranging from the gray-headed man to the tender youth. Sickness and exhaustion forced us to close that good meeting.

Resting on Friday and Saturday, I then proceeded to Midway, where we had another gracious revival. I never saw mourners in such a commotion. We had twenty-three necessions; several were converted. Several very old people joined. For the want of help, which we had not, save Bro. Hix Nelson one day, we were compelled to close on Friday night with a happy meeting. Locust Grove and Midway will not soon forget the usefulness of Bro. W. L. King and several others.

Next I came to Benton, where the spiritual famine was so manifest that numbers came to Jesus asking for the bread of life, which they obtained by believing in him. Bro. Charles B. Galloway was with us part of the time, and rendered us much aid. Doubtless the prayers of both the living and the dead were answered in the return of precious sons and daughters to Jesus. Twenty-one were added to the church. O that they, and all who have given themselves to Christ, may be faithful to the end! Ninety in all have been added to the church this year.

JOHN W. ELLISON, P. C.

FREE RUN, October 6, 1873.

CHINA GROVE CAMP MEETING, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The sixth camp meeting began at this lovely place on last Friday night, October 3, and closed on the Wednesday morning following. The day upon which it began was one of nature's purest and most lovely, being cloudless and serene, with the cooling breath of autumn to purify the atmosphere. Several of the tenters came in on Thursday night. On Friday the tenters and people came in from near and from far, till the tents on the square were occupied and well-nigh filled, with two or three exceptions, besides the many cloth tents filled. The introductory sermon was preached on Friday night by our beloved presiding elder, Elisha Philips. This sermon projected the meeting upon the high plane of pleasing God by faith in everything that was done, whether in sermon, exhortation, prayer or song. The meeting, thus well begun, moved forward in the power of the gospel and demonstration of the Spirit. Every one who preached evinced burning zeal and profound earnestness in behalf of the church and salvation of sinners. In all there were twenty-two ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South present, besides several of other churches. And while all did not minister from the pulpit, yet these did a vast deal of good by their presence and prayers and advice in the altar, and in the tents and upon the ground generally. The preaching in the pulpit was done by the following brethren: Ellsha Phillips, B. F. Blow, D. C. Crook, P. C. Clement, J. M. Brown, Junius Jordan, H. M. Gillis and E. W. Solomon. And I am satisfied that these brethren never did better preaching than at this meeting. In fact they surpassed themselves. The congregations say they never heard better on this ground; and your correspondent concurs in the remark. The result of the services, as far as could be ascertained, was that the church was abundantly blessed and built up, over one hundred souls converted, and fifty-six applicants for membership in our church, and the tentholders met and resolved to hold the meeting for five years to come.

Although the square is now about full of plank tents, yet others intend to commence the second line on the outside, and thus build up so as to make the encampment ample to take care of more than one thousand persons, even in bad weather; and of course, if the weather is good, thousands will take care of themselves in cloth tents, as they did this year. By reason of this arrangement the congregation will be good from the first to the last service, as it was this year. The time and labor thus expended constitute a rich investment in the cause and kingdom of God.

One very gratifying feature in this camp ground is found in the fact that it is becoming more and more self-supporting. A self-supporting camp meeting is the only one that can continue for any length of years. When tentholders become burdened as the slaves of crowds they will strike their tents and not pitch them again soon. Such was becoming the tendency of things at this camp ground. But owing to the willingness, evinced in fact, by those who came this year to lend a "helping hand," the tenters feel encouraged, and therefore expect to hold the meeting again next year, commencing on Friday night before the first Sabbath in October, and to continue till Wednesday morning following. The missionary collection on Sabbath, at eleven A. M., amounted in cash to about $90, and $40 by subscription. A. DOWLING.

The Story of Captain Buddington's Men.

Nothing in the literature of fiction combines more of the elements of romance than the story of the Buddington party of the Polaris, as it is simply related by a correspondent of the New York Tribune:

"The Polaris had been leaking badly before the fifteenth of October, 1872, and her situation ultimately became so alarming that it was deemed advisable to make preparations to abandon her. The determination to leave the ship was arrived at on the fifteenth of October, at which time they were in latitude seventy-nine degrees. Some of the crew remained aboard, while others landed on the ice, and they began to get out stores, with the intention of taking everything they could need for a long sojourn in those frozen regions. Between ten and twelve o'clock at night, while this work was proceeding, a very severe gale sprang up, and the snow began to fall heavily, with strong but variable winds.—Operations, however, were continued, and after untiring efforts the boats were got upon the ice and a large supply of provisions taken out. Suddenly the hawsers by which the ship was made fast to the ice gave way—one snapping, the other tearing its anchor from its lodgment in the ice. This was about midnight. The anchor in starting tore off a large piece from the floe with three men upon it, and as the Polaris drove past them they cried out in an agony of terror: 'What are we to do?'

"Captain Buddington shouted back that he could do nothing for them; they had boats and provisions, and must shift for themselves as best they could. A few minutes later those on the Polaris saw a boat launched and manned by the three men, making for the place where their comrades were stationed. In a short time the storm and darkness shut out every object from their view. * * * *

"There seemed to be little prospect of their remaining in the Polaris; she still leaked fearfully; and in her damaged condition Buddington had no hope of getting any further south with her. It was therefore determined to beach her, but the question was how that could be done. The wind being favorable, an opening in the pack was finally discovered, and the ship was bored through under canvas. Everything apparently favored the work, but, though the ship was only a few miles from shore, it took twelve hours to get her close in. The next consideration was how to provide for the shelter of the men on shore. All the timbers from between decks were torn out. Provisions were deposited on the ice. The coal was removed. Everything useful was secured. The walls of a house were then built of heavy planks, jointed to exclude the wind, and the roof was made of sails. In such a home the long winter was passed. Some help was received from three Esquimaux, who discovered the wrecked ship, and agreed, for a few paltry presents, to convey provisions over the ice from the vessel. They gave still more valuable aid by supplying skins for clothing, of which the crew were greatly in need. * * * The Esquimaux had plenty, and, though they were filthy-smelling garments, the castaways gladly adopted the full Esquimaux costume of fur trowsers, coats, hats and boots.

"Through the long, dreary winter the men kept up their spirits remarkably well. The snow fell heavily, but it served to protect their frail habitation and make it more comfortable. Their arrangements were so complete that no visit to the ship was necessary before January 27, when they went for a supply of wood. Fresh water was obtained in abundance by collecting pieces of icebergs and melting them. Toward the end of winter Chester suggested that some means should be agreed upon to extricate the party from their perilous position. The provisions were gradually diminishing, and the fuel, of which only six tons had been obtained from the ship, was nearly exhausted. The Polaris was still available for materials, and it was now proposed to build two boats. A survey by Chester showed that the lining of the cabin could be used, and this was accordingly stripped off. A new difficulty then arose. The planking was all pierced with nails, and how should the boat be made water-tight? The crew all said that Chester showed himself equal to all emergencies. With the carpenter's help he put the planks together in so deft a manner that the difficulties which had seemed insurmountable vanished. During the spring months, with the thermometer twenty-three degrees below zero, and often in a blinding drift, the building of the boats went on. The situation grew daily more discouraging, but the work was never relaxed, and the courage of the men never failed. Advancing steadily, the crew were ready to depart by the end of June, determined to push southward. * * * *

"When the boats were launched they leaked a good deal, but the men determined to trust them, and, stowing aboard all their remaining provisions and ammunition, they said farewell to Lifeboat Cove. * * *

"After enduring many privations, and encountering perils from which their escape seemed almost miraculous, they succeeded at last, through great exertions, in reaching Cape Parry. A few miles below the Cape, at Fitz-Clarence Rock, an encampment was made. Every night, when the labors of the day were over, the boats were hauled up upon the floe, and everything taken out, and the only hot meal of the day was prepared. The apparatus employed in cooking was of the most primitive character. Each boat carried a quantity of rigging from the Polaris, and a can of oil. With these a fire was made in the bottom of an old iron bucket. Tea was the only thing that could be made with such an apparatus. They state that the privations they suffered were not serious. The life was rough, laborious and monotonous; but though dangers occasionally presented themselves well calculated to inspire the greatest fear, no serious accident occurred, and on the twenty-first of June the boats reached Cape York in safety. Here they were again close beset with ice. On the twenty-third their troubles came to an end."

They succeeded in attracting the attention of the whaler Ravenscraig, Captain Allen, of Dundee, Scotland, by whom they were rescued and taken to that port.

Yellow Fever in Memphis.

The Western Methodist of October 11 speaks as follows of the fearful pestilence:

Last week, referring to the fact that the morning papers expressed the opinion that the yellow fever had begun to abate, we stated that the evidence of abatement was hardly sufficient; and the opinion thus expressed we are now compelled to know has been fearfully confirmed. Instead of abating, the disease has greatly extended, so that while the infected district, so called, continues to be the region of the largest amount of sickness and mortality, many cases have occurred, and are occurring, in various portions of the city. The distress is fearful. But physicians, pastors, heroic men and women of the churches, and of no church, the Howards, Odd Fellows, Masons and other societies, the mayor and other officers, the Citizens' Executive Committee, etc., are working mightily for the mitigation of suffering, and particularly in aid of the sick and dying, and their families, unable to help themselves. Our city and county have appropriated largely of the public money, while citizens at home and absent, and the benevolent throughout the land, are day by day furnishing contributions in proportion to the want and distress prevailing among us. But all this assistance is rapidly applied, and will soon be exhausted; there will be need, we fear, for its repetition from day to day for several weeks. We rejoice to know that the city authorities have at last adopted a health ordinance, which appears to be as well-nigh perfect as is possible. It provides for a permanent Board of Health, consisting of three persons only, and gives them ample powers to execute their own laws and regulations.

Resolutions for China

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted at a regular meeting of the Felicity Street Sunday School and Missionary Society, held October 5, 1873:

Whereas, Our missionaries, Revs. J. W. Lambuth and Y. J. Allen, have deemed it expedient and wise to transfer the two boarding schools, including Felicity school, from Shanghai, and to unite them with the school at Soochow, thus combining their forces; therefore,

Resolved, That we continue to have entire confidence in the zeal, judgment, wisdom and piety of our missionaries.

Resolved, That considering the maintenance of mission schools in China as one of the most promising features of our mission work, we will continue to give them our support, encouragement and prayers.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to our missionaries in China, and to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

JOHN J. GREEN, Sec.

RANDOLPH MACON COLLEGE.—At this writing, says the Richmond Christian Advocate of October 2, the session is four days old, and there are one hundred and eighty students on the ground. This is better than last year. The highest number reached the past session was two hundred and thirty-four; the signs are that we shall go largely beyond that number this session. On last Sunday, after a most appropriate and impressive opening sermon by the president, at his invitation all new students who wished to connect themselves with the church were invited to come forward, when about forty came up and gave in their names. It was an inspiring sight. Religious services are now held every evening in the chapel, and there are most cheering signs of a gracious revival. Let all our people pray for the college and the young men gathering there.

THE English royal family would present an imposing appearance if they were all assembled in the same room. The Queen's children are all young—four of them unmarried and one married daughter is as yet without any family; but her majesty has already more than a score of grandchildren, while abroad her consins must be as plentiful as leaves in Vallambrosa.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1873.

[illegible]

No night shall be there
No weak and wearisome visions of despair
No vain petition for a swift relief
No parting tears to broken heart are given.

Care has no home
Within the ceaseless realms of song.
Its billows break away and melt in peace
Far from the mansions of holy rest.

The storm's black wing
Is never spread athwart celestial skies;
Its writhings blend not with the voice of spring
As some too tender flowered fades and dies.

No night distills
Its chilling dews upon the tender frame;
Nor moon is needed there. The light which fills
That land of glory from its Maker came.

No parted friends
O'er mournful recollections have to weep;
No bed of death enduring love attends
To watch the coming of a poiseless sleep.

No blasted bower
Or withered bed celestial gardens know;
No searching blast or swift-descending shower
Scatters destruction like a ruthless foe.

No battle-word
Startles the sacred host with fear and dread;
The song of peace creation's morning heard
Is sung wherever angel minstrels tread.

With Faith our guide,
White-robed and innocent, to lead the way,
Why should we fear to plunge in Jordan's tide,
And find the ocean of eternal day?

Gilbert Grove.

"A Strait Betwixt Two."

St. Paul was once in this condition. Not unfrequently has many a one of his successors in the ministry found himself in like condition. The dilemma, however, in the latter instance, has not been, as in Paul's case, as to whether he should "depart and be with Christ" or remain. But the difficulty is to determine the path of duty, under an embarrassing state of circumstances, with which hundreds are surrounded to-day.

The Methodist ministry especially is composed of men who have declared solemnly that they were "inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost to preach the gospel." Many have felt they were called to "give their whole time to this work," and go wherever the Bishop might in his godly wisdom appoint; and not a few consecrated themselves to the pastoral as well as the ministerial office in early life. From twenty-five to thirty, forty, aye, fifty years they have gone in and out before God and the church—have been "sowing beside all waters," and in every hill-top scattered the good seed. God has blessed their labors. "The wilderness and the solitary place have been made glad for them." But now, when they have made others rich, they find themselves poor. Their wives, who have shared with them the hardships of itinerant life, have grown old and feeble, and cannot endure as formerly. Their children, have not shared the literary advantage their fathers labored to secure for others. A life spent in the itinerant ministry has precluded all secular engagements that would be at all remunerative, and consequently there is no money-eyed capital on which they could start in business. The habits and tastes of the people, vitiated by former prosperity, and foolishly cherished in their fancied adversity, make them seek pastors and teachers of certain casts. The men who preached and prayed and rejoiced with their fathers and mothers cannot interest them now. While they complain of retrogression, poverty and ruin in every other department, they claim that this is and must be regarded an "age of progress" so far as ministerial qualification is concerned.

The demand of the church everywhere is for "good preachers." No doubt every presiding elder has been already or will be importuned by stewards and other prominent members of the different charges: "Send us a good preacher." "Can't you send us Bro. A.?" "We need just such a man here." "If we don't get him or some man—his equal—we will be ruined next year." Perhaps these anxious souls are not aware that Bro. A. is needed elsewhere, and there are other places more willing to give of their substance to support their minister and enable him to magnify his office. Presiding elders occupy delicate ground. While they would supply their own districts well, they are not at liberty to lay upon a brother's shoulders a burden which they would not touch with the tip of their own finger.

But the question is: What is to become of the almost superannuated man who has lived on short allowance even in more prosperous times, and in these days of stringency has had his allowance cut down, and only received the half of that? Conference is at hand. He will have to move. The church owes him perhaps from $300 to $500 that the stewards assessed for his support. He has been compelled to create liabilities to live. His family have no supply of winter clothing. He has not money enough to pay his expenses to Conference, much less defray the expense of moving to a new circuit. What is to become of him?

Now comes a struggle. The Holy Ghost says: "Go preach." The flesh (or is it the flesh?) says: "Go teach a school. Go practice law. Go, and if you learned a trade when you were young, and work at that, and let souls perish or be saved as they can. Go, if you have strength to plow or hoe in the field, and give the balance of your days to farming. Go take an agency of some kind—insurance, patent washing machine, cotton planter, some new style of fence, some patent machine or a book agency. Some of these will pay enough to keep the wolf from the door."

Again the question recurs: "What shall I do?" The man of God is in "a strait betwixt two." Scores are in this case to-day. Their spirits are crushed, their energies are paralyzed. The church is suffering. What is to be done? The merchant wants his bill. The teacher must be paid. The shoemaker, the market-man—all want the preacher to pay. The church can coolly refuse to pay him. But if he fails to meet his liability his character is gone; and often the very people who withhold from him his dues, and force him to leave the work to which God called him, are among the first to complain.

Does God, the great and good, the holy One of Israel, still press his call in such a case? Or is it mere fanaticism that drives away sleep, and fills the heart of the preacher with anxiety while he feels the vows of God upon him? Who will answer and relieve

A SUFFERER?

Denominational Distinctiveness.

MR. EDITOR: We find among Protestants and Catholics some distinctive forms or doctrines which differences the one from all the others. The Baptists have exclusive immersion, the Presbyterians predestination, the Episcopalians claim apostolic succession, and the Catholics the keys of the kingdom, the Methodists the freedom of humanity and the knowledge of God, or the witness of the Spirit and sanctification.

All these organizations must develop from their own germs, and must have cultivation peculiar to themselves. The Calvinist may add members to his church by preaching free grace, but such members will not be Calvinists. All efforts to harmonize, while each church holds her peculiar dogmas, can have no other effect than to weaken all parties. The social relations often absolutely forbid the pulpit to be distinctively denominational, and yet in that community there were not ten conversions in six years. The church is gradually dying out; nearly all the young ladies dancing and the young men drinking, and the preachers much beloved and popular with all the churches. Such a state of things generally begets in the mind of the preacher a great love for the pastorate. He has no hope of saving the people by direct effort, but hangs on the forlorn hope of educating his waning and wasted congregation into the kingdom of God—as if a revival would be in the way of his regular pastoral work. A preacher can often do more in one week as a pastor, in the midst of revival influence, than he can in the ordinary routine in years. I have been able to reach hundreds of families and thousands of individuals in the midst of revivals that I never could have reached in the ordinary way. The Methodist Church can make nothing by fraternity with her sister churches. They have never done her any good; even their praise has been distasteful and offensive when they have spoken of our rustic frontier labors. We can learn nothing from them. They are still in their horn-book, preaching, many of them, only the baptism of John, and the most of them only conviction and hope, while we preach assurance and perfection. We may not be fully aware of the fact that, while we have permeated all denominations more or less with the principles of a higher life in Christ, they have had their effect upon us, and in many localities have almost put out the fire upon our altars.

The machinery of the Methodist Church, as a whole, is as perfect as any system can be to be worked by human hands; but to make it a full and complete success all parts of the system must be kept in action, and fully and decidedly in contradistinction to the old and worn-out systems of other churches. We often congratulate ourselves that the days of persecution and opposition have passed away; and so they have with a certain class of our preachers, who labor from year to year, and too often in some of our best appointments, but seldom make any converts. How many have been converted in Bro. A.'s charges the past four years? Not one soul converted to God, that any one knows of. But he is very popular with all, and has been sowing good seed; but what a time it takes for the seed to come up. It is impossible for any Methodist preacher to be popular with only one class, who preaches all the gospel of Christ. "Needs that offenses must come." The Savior and his apostles met with more opposition from the high priests and Pharisees than from all the sinners in Jerusalem. No man can be a power in the church, or anywhere else, without decided opposition.

The Son of God was the only embodiment of perfection in heaven and earth, and the church crucified him. We may think that Calvinism is dead. Not so; it has only become conservative. Many think popery is dying, and our water churches are drying up; not dead—only deferential. May we not fear, after all our victories, that we are not doing all the work that God has in his grace and providence assigned us? We have the five talents—the whole of Christianity—the power that overcomes the world. Our difficulty is not in our doctrine or usages or culture, but in a want of power, and a settled purpose to develop from our own germs the talents with which God has blessed us. The Methodist Church is the most successful where it is the most Methodistic. The time has come when in many places the Methodist Church must suffer greatly by fraternity with other churches, whose pulpits are filled by proselytes, and whose membership is largely made up from those who have lost the higher spiritual life they once had in the Methodist Church. Is it not the duty of Methodists to preach their own doctrine, and act out in good faith their peculiar usages? Is it not also their duty, as honest watchmen, to expose any fraud practiced by others, who may hold to one class of doctrine in creeds and books, and at the same time preach another doctrine? Are there not thousands of souls now in peril, who have been converted under one system of truths, whose church believe and at other times preach the very opposite doctrines? Thus the experience of such persons and the doctrines of their church contradict each other, and growth in such persons is impossible. Thousands there are in those churches who were converted while they were preaching Methodist doctrine, and, contrary to themselves, calling up mourners, who are now being fed by the same preachers on only conviction and hope and final perseverance and eternal election. All souls converted by preaching Methodism will starve and die when cultivated and fed by those other doctrines.

"As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." I do not want the labor and converts of other churches, and they shall not have ours if we can avoid it. Out of over a thousand converts who have joined the Methodist Church on this district, this year, not one of our converts has gone to any other denomination.

S. P. RICHARDSON.

Notes on Popery.

THE SCRIPTURES—THE POPE'S AUTHORITY ABOVE THE SCRIPTURES—TRADITION EQUAL TO.

MR. EDITOR: Let us see in what light the Scriptures are held by Catholics—how its authority is set at naught or neutralized. "Every sort of doctrine which is to be delivered to the faithful is contained in the word of God, which is divided into scripture and tradition."—Question 12, Catechism of Council of Trent. If the Trent writers are correct, tradition is the word of God, and of course equal in authority. How much these writers fear the curse of God in "adding to or taking from" the holy Scriptures may be seen by turning to Revelation xxii, 18, 19; Proverbs xxx, 6; Deuteronomy iv, 2. Sevete, page 67, quotes Dr. Pusey as saying: "Papal encyclicals have been held to be 'the word of God.' In 1408 the translation and the perusal of the Scriptures were formally prohibited in a convocation held at Oxford, under Archbishop Arendel."—See Bible in Many Tongues, page 85. A canon of the Council of Toulouse, 1229, ordains that no "laymun should have the books of the Old or the New Testament."—Bible in Many Tongues, page 83. Pope Gregory the Seventh declared to the King of Bohemia that "the Bible, to be revered, must be concealed." Luther was told at the Diet of Worms that "it was absurd to require to be refuted by Scripture, when his heresy had been condemned by the Council of Constance." Councils now were above the Scriptures. Prierius, a Dominican, replying to Luther's Theses, tells us that "whosoever does not rely on the teaching of the Roman Church and of the Roman pontiff as the infallible rule of faith, and as that from which holy Scripture itself derives its obligation and authority, is a heretic."—D'Aubigne's Reform., volume 1, page 279. In the time of Luther there were many parts of Germany where "the reading of the Scriptures was prohibited, and the inhabitants forbidden to speak of the gospel, even in their families."—D'Aubigne's Reform., volume 3, page 152. Lefevre, in Luther's day, translated the Bible into French, but it was put under the ban, and the translator exiled.—D'Aubigne's Reform., volume 3, page 470. The Council of Tolosa, 1229, forbade the laity to possess the books of the Old or New Testament.—Edgar's Variations of Popery, page 250. Doctors of divinity had been created and pronounced most sufficient who had never read the Bible. Erasmus says divines of eighty years of age were all amazement at hearing anything quoted from St. Paul, and that preachers of fifty years' standing had never seen the New Testament. Musculus assures us that multitudes of them never saw the Scriptures in their lives. Amama tells us of the Archbishop of Mentz, who, opening the Bible, said: "In truth I do not know what this book is, but I perceive that everything in it is against us." Cardinal Hosin's persuasion was that "it had been best for the church if no gospel had been written."—Simpson's Plea for Religion, page 218. Can that be a church in any sense which teaches and preaches such doctrines? Well may Dr. Achilli say: "The Church of Rome has become the church of satan."—Page 8. Can the Bible sustain a church declared to be its enemy? If the doctrine stated be true, the Bible is the most dangerous book on earth. But what are the "reasons assigned for the prohibition of this dangerous book?" The Catholic and Episcopal churches, and perhaps others, have set up the exclusive claim of interpreting the Scriptures by the priesthood alone. If this claim is based on the authority of the Jewish priesthood (Deuteronomy xvii, 8-12,) then the Jews not only did right in rejecting Christ, but were bound to do so, seeing he was rejected by the great body of their priesthood, from whose judgment they had no right to appeal. But it should be observed that the most difficult points only were thus reserved for the priesthood, and these were decided by the inspiration of the Urim and Thummim, and this was exclusively confined to the first temple. So that this whole pretense is utterly futile and baseless, unless the priesthood now can prove themselves inspired. This claim is right in the face, too, of the divine record, as well as ignoring all private judgment. "Search the Scriptures." "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."

Archbishop Manning, in a discourse, London, December 4, 1869, thus represents the authority of the Pope: "I acknowledge no civil superior, I am the subject of no prince, and I claim more than this: I claim to be supreme judge and director of the consciences of men—of the peasant that tills the field and the prince on the throne, of the household that lives in privacy and the legislature that makes laws for kingdoms. I am the sole, last supreme judge of what is right and wrong." The Rambler, a Catholic paper of England, thus delivers itself: "Religious liberty, in the sense of a liberty possessed by every man to choose his own religion, is one of the most wicked delusions ever foisted upon this age by the father of all deceits. * * * None but an atheist can uphold the principles of religious liberty. * * * No man has a right to choose his religion." The Shepherd of the Valley, St. Louis, thus speaks out: "If the Catholics ever gain—which they surely will do, though at a distant day—an immense numerical majority, religious liberty in this country is at an end. So say our enemies. So we believe." Now this is certainly plain enough. Popery is the enemy of all free institutions and free governments on the face of the earth. Has not the "church party" of Mexico been warring against civil and religious freedom for more than twenty years? Are they not doing the same now in Guatemala? Is this not the fight of the Carlists in Spain to-day? More anon.

A Sad Visitation.

MR. EDITOR: On Friday, September 26, at three o'clock, our village was shrouded with gloom. All the business houses were closed and people were seen wending their way to the church, for it had been made known through the place that funeral ceremonies were to be held at that time and place over the remains of four children—an infant and three beautiful little girls—between the ages of three and five years. All three were born in the month of September, died in September, and within two hours of each other. Diptheria seized their lovely forms in his ghastly clutches, and bore them, through inexpressible sufferings, to dire death's devouring doom. The infant, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Craig, died on the twenty-fifth of September. The next day their little Lelia, aged five years, passed away from earth. About two hours afterward little Josie, also aged five, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Sharpe, who lived just across the street from Mr. Craig, breathed her last. When told that her dear playmate was dead she requested that she and Lelia might be put in the same coffin and buried together in one grave. The heart-broken parents determined to comply with this last request. Nearly two hours after the sad tidings came that sweet little Bettie, youngest child of Mrs. Caldwell, and granddaughter of our worthy pastor, Rev. Theodore Moody, was just at the verge of death, and ere many moments elapsed she left her agonized, grief-stricken mother, and went to join her angel father in heaven.

The church was filled with sympathizing friends and neighbors. Within the altar, on a table, were placed the three coffins, all white and bound with azure tint, as if the skies would encircle even the mortal remains, and bear them after their happy spirits to the throne of our Redeemer, who said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Our aged pastor, dear Uncle Moody, with his heart bowed in grief, ascended the pulpit and read an appropriate hymn. His feeble voice trembled, and tears coursed down his withered cheeks as he bade us behold the scene spread out before us. He besought his beloved and dying people to recognize the almighty hand of God, to meditate on what they were viewing, to be convinced that each of us must be clasped in death's sure hold, and for all to prepare to meet our God.

After singing it was requested that the coffins might be opened for a last farewell of the loved ones. The people crowded up. Gray-headed, iron-hearted men bent over those lovely forms and wept aloud. Mothers with their own dear children pressed close to their breasts, as they kissed the cold, dead lips, besought God to comfort the bereaved mothers. Children's voices were heard in loud lamentation. Many of the colored people, some whose kind old hands had ministered to those little forms, now laying cold and inanimate, came forward, with tears streaming down their sable cheeks, for one farewell glance.

But oh, those lovely forms! Who can describe them? Little Lelia and Josie lay side by side in the coffin, clothed alike in white and blue, and wreaths of white flowers adorning their brows, and nosegays in the little hand that crossed the breast. Darling little Bettie was arrayed, as the others, in white, with the blue just shining up through illusion, giving her an ethereal look, while bouquets of delicate cypress and co-e-shelled, starry blossoms adorned her little pillow and bosom.

I could almost see them on their way to their Father's house—"that mansion not made with hands, eternal in the heavens"—as with clasped hands and smiling countenances they cast upon the weeping crowd a look full of radiant love and pity, and seemed to say: "Come up higher; we are happy."

The bodies were committed to the graves, and slowly and solemnly the people went their respective ways, sympathy and awe bearing them company. Never before has such a scene been witnessed in our section, and may God, in his kind providence, prevent its recurrence.

LUTHER AND MELANCTHON.—On a certain occasion a messenger was sent to Luther to inform him that Melancthon was dying. He at once hastened to his sick-bed, and found him presenting several signs of the nearness of death. He mournfully bent over him; and, sobbing, gave utterance to a sorrowful exclamation. This roused Melancthon from his stupor; he looked into the face of Luther and said: "O Luther, is it you? Why don't you let me depart in peace?" "We cannot spare you yet, Philip," was the reply. Turning round, he fell upon his knees, and wrestled with God for his friend's recovery for upward of an hour; he then went from his knees to the bed, and took him by the hand. Again Melancthon said: "Dear Luther, why don't you let me depart in peace?" "No, no, Philip, we cannot spare you yet from the field of labor," was again the reply. Luther then ordered some soup, and when Melancthon declined to take it, saying, "Dear Luther, why will you not let me go home and be at rest?" "We cannot spare you yet, Philip," was still the reply. He then added: "Philip, take this soup, or I will excommunicate you." The sick man took the soup, soon commenced to grow better, regained his wonted health, and labored for years afterward in the cause of the Reformation. When Luther returned home he said to his wife, with abounding joy: "God gave me my brother Melancthon back in direct answer to prayer."

Obituaries.

SACRED to the memory of LIZZIE VERNON, eldest daughter of V. H. and L. B. Nelson, who died September 25, of congestion, near Pickens Station, Mississippi, aged four years, one month and thirteen days.

Loved and lost one—precious treasure—
In that land where angels dwell,
Zion's King, who alone can ransom
Zion's salvation), to thee hath given,
In that blest abode of joy and rest,
Everlasting life in heaven.

Vain, ah! vain, all earthly pleasure;
Even our fondest hopes, alas! are vain;
Redeeming love's the only treasure
Not fettered by death's icy chains.
O blessed Jesus! in whom there was no guile,
Now keep, I pray thee, my precious child.

V. H. N.

NANCY ELLEN, daughter of John and Louisa Anglin, was born in Oktibbeha county, Mississippi, June 27, 1848, and died June 6, 1873. She moved to Leake county, Mississippi, in 1849; moved to St. Helena parish, Louisiana, January 18, 1858; joined the Methodist Church in November, 1871, and was married to Mr. John Burris November 12, 1868. She was naturally amiable. Grace made her life beautiful. Her afflictions, though long and painful, were borne with patience. Her death was happy. She urged her friends, brothers and parents to meet her in heaven. She leaves a husband and one child to mourn her loss. God bless and take care of them.

Lo! the pain of life is past;
All her warfare now is o'er;
Death and hell behind are cast;
Grief and suffering are no more.

C. C. WATKINS.

RICHARD T. NOEL, the subject of this notice, was born in Mecklenburg county, Virginia, on the sixth of April, 1815; removed with his father to Lauderdale county, Alabama, in 1829; from thence to Caddo parish, Louisiana, in 1837; was married to Miss Nettie Susannah Burck, November 22, 1842, and died September 14, 1873. R. T. Noel was an honest man in the broadest acceptation of that word. He was moral and trustworthy, a good neighbor, an affectionate husband and father, and a citizen universally beloved and honored. He made no profession of religion until a short time before his death, though he was a man of prayer all through life. His last hours were calm and peaceful, and full of trust in the merits of his dear Redeemer. He leaves a noble, pious wife, two sons and two daughters (all grown) to lament his death. May a merciful God comfort and sustain them.

W. E. DOTY.

SISTER MARY COLLIER was born in England in 1827; emigrated to the United States in 1830; then to Mexico, with her father's family, in 1841; was married to William Collier in 1845, and returned to the United States in 1856; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1867, in Wesson, Mississippi, under the pastorate of Rev. Benjamin Jones, and died on the twenty-eighth day of August, 1873, in the faith, at Stones wall Factory, four miles south of Enterprise, Clarke county, Mississippi.

Sister Collier was an affectionate wife and a tender mother; in a word, her heart went out in Christian charity and good will to the whole world, always ready to give counsel or assistance to the needy and sorrowing within her reach. A few days after her death her youngest child, a lovely little boy about four years old, was also called away by him who said: "Suffer the little children to come to me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Sister Collier left a husband, eight children and numerous friends to mourn their loss; but, thanks be to God, their loss is her gain.

W. SPILLMAN.

MRS. H. A. E. NIXON, wife of James M. Nixon, and daughter of Captain John and Huldah A. Howard, was born in New Hanover county, North Carolina, in the year 1824, and died in Sumter county, Alabama, September 6, 1873. She was married in 1840, two years after which she became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, where she remained until removed to the church triumphant.

Too much cannot be said for the piety of our beloved sister. Though retiring in her manners, yet all could see that she adorned the doctrines of God our Savior by a consistent and blameless life. As an evidence of this, her death was most triumphant. The following was taken down by her daughter and sent to me: "During her illness her whole conversation was about her blessed Savior and heavenly Father. She often repeated: 'Oh, was there ever love like mine.' She called for father, and told him that he could not go with her then, but that he could come. He asked her if she could adopt the language of a friend of theirs, who had died, saying: 'All was well.' She said: 'Yes, I am willing to die.' She kissed her oldest daughter, then said: 'You must fill my place and cheer the gloom away;' and then, turning to her little daughter, told her to be a good and obedient child, and meet her in heaven. While the family were standing around her bed she exclaimed: 'My Master calls and I must go. I am ready and I am willing.' When death approached she said: 'I am dying. I will lay down my cross, die in peace and take up my crown.' When she heard her friends weeping she said: 'Tell them not to weep for me.'"

ALEXANDER HOOD.

"THE righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance." None more fully answered that description than Sister MERRITT, wife of Rev. Harvey M. Merritt, of Carroll county, Mississippi. She was born in Robeson county, North Carolina, January 19, A. D. 1822, and came to Carroll county, Mississippi, in February, 1838, where she died in great peace, September 17, 1873, in the fifty-second year of her age.

Sister Merritt joined the Baptist Church in her fifteenth year. She was married to her now bereaved husband when about seventeen years of age. Four years later she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church—in 1840—a beloved, faithful, pure and useful member of which she died, as above stated. She left her husband and two children—a son and daughter, both married and heads of families—to mourn her loss.

A faithful description of her true worth might by strangers be thought exaggeration, so few so fully fill up the standard of the true woman and pure Christian as she did. As a wife she was loving and wise, prudent and good—in the highest sense an helpmate. In prosperity her household was the abode of order, neatness, quietness and Christian love. When adversity came to the country she plied the diligent hand to make up the lack of service no longer at her command. In her religious life it is hard to say which virtue shone most resplendent. She glorified God in her body and spirit, in the work of her hands and the fruit of her lips. Faith, hope and charity were abiding traits in her. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. In her faith worked by love. She abounded in every good work. She brought up children—orphans, as well as her own—she lodged strangers, washed the saints' feet, relieved the afflicted, was instant in season to all good deeds, and could well accept the challenge of St. James to show her faith by her works, thereby proving hers a live faith. How she labored to sustain the cause of God in her church at Enon! How warm was her true, good heart toward God's ministers and people! How true her sympathy with the penitent! Her hope was an anchor to her soul through life's stormy voyage, and entered to that within the vail. How dearly she loved her Savior to the end! She came to the recent camp meeting at Enon, exhausted by nursing the sick and preparing for the meeting, and was taken sick of what was to be her last sickness. On the morning the meeting broke up we bade her adieu for the last time. Her smile was sweet, her resignation perfect. To her to live was Christ, to die was gain. She had fought the good fight and had kept the faith, and now has entered into her rest.

W. P. BARTON.

SELDOM has it been my lot, in a long life, to witness scenes of the character of the one I now feel it my duty to record. I wish I could do it full justice. I hazard nothing in saying that it was one of the strongest and brightest evidences of the truth and power of the Christian religion I ever beheld. For eight days the visitors to the scene were held spell-bound by the glorious things seen and heard on that occasion. It was the death-bed scene of Mr. JOHN WESLEY POWELL, at the residence of his brother-in-law, Captain Tim. L. Mathews, near Mobile, Alabama. He departed this life on the eighteenth of September, 1873, in great peace.

The writer was sent for to visit him on the eleventh, and continued with him until his spirit left for that rest that remains for the people of God. Truly did we find that "The chamber where the good man meets his fate

Is privileged beyond the common walk
Of virtuous life, quite on the verge of heaven."

When I first approached his bedside he held out his hand, clasping mine, and said: "I am now about to pass over Jordan, and I desired to see you, that I could tell you how happy I am; and for you to tell others how good the religion of Jesus is, and especially in the last scene of life." Religious worship was held in his room frequently, and on one occasion he placed himself upon his knees in bed, and such language is rarely heard as he poured forth in praise of his heavenly Comforter. Repeatedly was he asked if his faith was strong and his hope bright. Invariably his answer was: "Jesus is my Savior; I stand on the Rock. Happy death! happy death! All right. Not a cloud or a doubt."

"How our hearts burnt within us at the scene!
His God sustains him in his final hour.
We gaze, we weep! mix'd tears of grief and joy!
Christians adore and infidels believe."

Just before he expired, holding the hand of the writer, and with a bright smile upon his face, he said: "I am going fast, and will soon be in glory." These were about his last words; and just about the time they were uttered the sun, which had been obscured all day by clouds and rain, shone out with brilliancy, causing a rainbow of brightest hue to appear in the east. During this scene in the natural world his spirit took its flight away from this world of sorrow and affliction.

Two affectionate sisters were with him all the time of his sufferings, and did much to ameliorate his condition, and doubtless received great benefit in a spiritual way that may do them lasting good. "They sorrow not as those who have no hope." Many friends were at times in attendance upon the scenes I have tried to describe. All of them received a kind word of exhortation or comfort. A large number of them gave their word of promise to meet him in heaven.

T. W. MATHEWS.

BLESSED BE GOD that there is at least one thing thoroughly superhuman, supernatural in this world; something which stands out from and above "the laws of nature;" something visible and audible to link us with him whose face we see not, and whose voice we hear not. What a blank would there be here if only this one fragment of the divine, now venerable both with wisdom and age, were to disappear from the midst of us; or, what is the same thing, the discovery were to be made that this ancient volume is not the unearthly thing which men have deemed it, but, at the highest estimate, a mere fragment from the great block of human thought—perhaps, according to another estimate, a mere relic of superstition. There is but one book, and we shall one day know this, when that which is human shall pass away (like the mists from some Lebanon peak,) and leave that which is divine to stand out and to shine out alone in its unhidden grandeur.

ALPINE HEIGHTS.

BY REV. CHARLES T. BROOKS.

On Alpine heights the love of God is shed:
He paints the morning red,
The flowerets white and blue,
And feeds them with his dew,
On Alpine heights a loving Father dwells.

On Alpine heights, o'er many a fragrant heath,
The loveliest breezes breathe;
So free and pure the air,
His breath seems floating there.
On Alpine heights a loving Father dwells.

On Alpine heights, beneath his mild blue eye,
Still vales and meadows lie;
The soaring gentle's ice
Gleams like a paradise.
On Alpine heights a loving Father dwells.

Down Alpine heights the silvery streamlets flow;
There the bold chamois go;
On giddy crags they stand,
And drink from his own hand.
On Alpine heights a loving Father dwells.

On Alpine heights, in troops all white as snow,
The sheep and wild goats go;
There, in the solitude,
He fit is their hearts with food.
On Alpine heights a loving Father dwells.

On Alpine heights the herdsman leads his herd;
His shepherd is the Lord;
For he who feeds the sheep
Will sure his offspring keep.
On Alpine heights a loving Father dwells.

Letter to a Student who Lamented His Defective Memory.

So far from writing, as you seem to expect me to do, a letter of condolence on the subject of what you are pleased to call your "miserable memory," I feel disposed rather to indite a letter of congratulation. It is possible that you may be blessed with a selecting memory, which is not only useful for what it retains, but for what it rejects. In the immense mass of facts which came before you in literature and in life it is well that you should suffer from as little bewilderment as possible. The nature of your memory saves you from this by unconsciously selecting what has interested you, and letting the rest go by. What interests you is what concerns you.

In saying this I speak simply from the intellectual point of view, and suppose you to be an intellectual man by the natural organization of your brain, to begin with. In saying that what interests you is what concerns you, I mean intellectually, not materially. It may concern you, in the pecuniary sense, to take an interest in the law; yet your mind, left to itself, would take little or no interest in law, but an absorbing interest in botany. The passionate studies of the young Goethe, in many different directions, always in obedience to the predominant interests of the moment, are the best example of the way in which a great intellect, with remarkable powers of acquisition and liberty to grow in free luxuriance, sends its roots into various soils, and draws from them the constituents of its sap. As a student of law, as a university student even, he was not of the type which parents and professors consider satisfactory. He neglected jurisprudence, he neglected even his college studies, but took an interest in so many other pursuits that his mind became rich indeed. Yet the wealth which his mind acquired seems to have been due to that liberty of ranging by which it was permitted to him to seek his own everywhere, according to the maxim of French law, chacun prend son bien ou il le trouve. Had he been a poor student, bound down to the exclusively legal studies, which did not greatly interest him, it is likely that no one would ever have suspected his immense faculty of assimilation. In this way men, who are set by others to load their memories with what is not their proper intellectual food, never get the credit of having any memory at all, and end by themselves believing that they have none. These bad memories are often the best—they are often the selecting memories. They seldom win distinction in examinations, but in literature and art. They are quite incomparably superior to the miscellaneous memories, that receive only as boxes and drawers receive what is put into them. A good literary or artistic memory is not like a postoffice that takes in everything, but like a very well-edited periodical, which prints nothing that does not harmonize with its intellectual life. A well-known author gave me this piece of advice: "Take as many notes as you like, but when you write do not look at them—what you remember is what you must write, and you ought to give things exactly the degree of relative importance that they have in your memory. If you forget much it is well; it will only save beforehand the labor of erasure." This advice would not be suitable to every author—an author who dealt much in minute facts ought to be allowed to refer to his memoranda; but, from the artistic point of view in literature, the advice was wise indeed. In painting our preferences select while we are in the presence of nature, and our memory selects when we are away from nature. The most beautiful compositions are produced by the selecting office of the memory, which retains some features, and even greatly exaggerates them, while it diminishes others and often altogether omits them. An artist who blamed himself for these exaggerations and omissions would blame himself for being an artist.

Let me add a protest against the common methods of curing what are called treacherous memories. They are generally founded upon the association of ideas, which is so far rational, but then the sort of association which they have recourse to is unnatural, and produces precisely the sort of disorder which would be produced in dress if a man were insane enough to tie, let us say, a frying-pan to one of his coat-tails and a child's kite to the other. The true discipline of the mind is to be effected only by associating those things together which have a real relation of some kind, and the profounder the relation the more it is based upon the natural constitution of things, and the less it concerns trifling external details, the better will be the order of the intellect. The mnemotechnic art wholly disregards this, and is therefore unsuited for intellectual persons, though it may be of some practical use in ordinary life. A little book on memory, of which many editions have been sold, suggests to men who forget their umbrellas that they ought always to associate the image of an umbrella with that of an open door, so that they could never leave any house without thinking of one. But would it not be preferable to lose two or three guineas annually rather than see a spectral umbrella in every doorway? The same writer suggests an idea which appears even more objectionable. Because we are apt to lose time, we ought, he says, to imagine a skeleton cluck-face on the visage of every man we talk with—that is to say, we ought systematically to set about producing in our brains an absurd association of ideas, which is quite closely allied to one of the most common forms of insanity. It is better to forget umbrellas and lose hours than fill our minds with associations of a kind which every disciplined intellect does all it can to get rid of. The rational art of memory is that used in natural science. We remember anatomy and botany because, although the facts they teach are infinitely numerous, they are arranged according to the constructive order of nature. Unless there were a clear relation between the anatomy of one animal and that of others, the memory would refuse to burden itself with the details of their structure. So, in the study of languages, we learn several languages by perceiving their true structural relations, and remembering these. Association of this kind, and the maintenance of order in the mind, are the only arts of memory compatible with the right government of the intellect. Incongruous and even superficial associations ought to be systematically discouraged, and we ought to value the negative or rejecting power of the memory. The finest intellects are as remarkable for the ease with which they resist and throw off what does not concern them as for the permanence with which their own truths engrave themselves. They are like clear glass, which fluoric acid etches indelibly, but which comes out of vitriol intact.—"The Intellectual Life," by Philip Gilbert Hamerton.

The Sin Against the Holy Ghost.

BY THE REV. R. H. RIVERS, D. D.

In discussing this subject I take for granted the following principles: 1. God is immutable. This truth being admitted, he is always willing to pardon the trusting penitent—that is, if we admit his willingness at one time, he is willing at all times.

2. Any change in the relationship between man and God must result from a change in man, and not from a change in God. This is a necessary sequence of the immutability of God. God is angry with the wicked every day, and now the wicked man of yesterday has become the penitent and believing man of to-day. God loves him now because the man has changed. Had he remained wicked he would have been the object of God's wrath still. The principle that evokes the love of God did not exist until the exercise of repentance and faith. God's love of complacency or approbation is like a stream flowing in a certain channel; when a change comes over a wicked man, who is at a distance from this stream, so that he places himself in it, then he becomes the object of the divine love. The stream has not changed its direction, but man has changed his position!

3. If, then, man has ever committed the unpardonable sin, it is not because God has changed toward the sinner, but the sinner has changed toward God. The unpardonable sin is not committed so long as the sinner can comply with the conditions of salvation. It is committed whenever the conditions of salvation cannot be complied with by an intelligent moral agent. God is always willing to comply with his terms. He has obligated himself to save the penitent. He has nowhere promised to save the impenitent. If, then, any man has become so hardened in sin, and so lost to duty as to be unable to repent and believe, he can never claim forgiveness for his sins. The failure to receive forgiveness is not because God has refused pardon to the penitent, but because the sinner cannot claim the divine promise, as he has placed it out of his power to become a penitent believer.

4. There are certain constitutional principles of human nature that naturally respond to the calls of the Spirit. Man has a religious constitution. He has a soul which hungers for God, just as he has natural hunger for food. And God as certainly satisfies the hunger of the soul as food satisfies natural hunger. Now, if man has so perverted the powers of his physical nature as that he cannot eat healthful food, he must die. Death does not result from the lack of food, but from the failure of the vital powers to receive and digest the food. The fault is not in the food, but in the digestive organs. So when man has so perverted his religious nature as that it cannot respond to the Holy Ghost, he must die.

5. The neglect or perversion of any faculty of mind or of body will, sooner or later, destroy the action of that faculty. If a man refuse to use his hand, it will become powerless. If he shut out all light from the eye, for a length of time, he will become blind. If he refuse to use his feet and legs in walking, he will soon be unable to walk. If he refuse to use his memory, memory will fail, and so with all the faculties. Now man has religious faculties. He has conscience and the power of repentance, and the faculty for faith; and it must follow that if these faculties be so neglected or perverted as to be incapable of use, the man can never repent, and must of course die, without pardon.

6. The unpardonable sin is that sin which eradicates the religious principles; which so weakens and destroys the religious constitution that the sinner is forever incapable of repentance. He cannot be impressed by the Holy Ghost. He cannot come to God with repentance and faith. The fault is not with God; it is with the sinner. It is called the sin against the Holy Ghost because it is the peculiar office of the Holy Ghost to convince, to reprove, to regenerate. When, then, the mind is closed to conviction, the conscience to reproof, and the heart to regeneration, the sinner has committed the sin against the Holy Ghost.

I believe that the sin against the Holy Ghost is, in the main, no specific sin. It is sometimes one sin, and sometimes another. It is the sin unto death. Just as men will violate all the laws of health, for a life-time, may, by an apparently small transgression of those laws, bring on death; so men, who have for a life-time been violating all the laws of God, may, by an apparently small transgression, close the moral and religious nature to all the operations of the Holy Spirit. I do not object to the idea that, in the time of our Savior, men committed the unpardonable sin by attributing the works of Christ to the devil. That was enough to forever close the heart to all divine influences. The sin that closes the heart to these influences, so that the sinner has no talent for repentance and faith, is and must be the unpardonable sin. Then the Savior says: "Take the talent from him."—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Romish Pilgrimages.

A French lady, living in one of the districts of France, in a communication to the Pall Mall Gazette, throws some light upon these phenomena. Lady patronesses, under the influence of the priests, are stimulated to do the work of recruiting sergeants, for success in which they are rewarded with the privilege of carrying in the procession gayly-decorated banners before the followers they have collected, thus calling into exercise that taste in designs, colors and emblems, and that spirit of rivalry so specially potent with the dames of la belle France. One who was solicited to take part in the pilgrimage was told that the object was "to pray for peace," and when the credulous rustic was asked the use of this when there was no war or prospect of one, the reply was that she knew nothing about it, but that she had been told it was "better to pay ten francs to God than see the communes lost altogether." A farmer's wife was assured that the Bon Dieu was very angry, and had frozen the vines and the fruit to show his displeasure, and unless they looked sharp, and prayed together in a pilgrimage, all the good things of the earth would be lost, and there would be a year of famine. A farmer, hearing that this lady recruiting sergeant had said, "So long as we have no government, things will not go well," prohibited his wife going upon any pilgrimage to pray for a king. "What do we want with a king? We sell our beasts and our grain just as well as if we had a king." To this the wife replied: "I durst not remain at home when the others go. I shall pray for the crops, and not for the king. What does it matter to me?" Another, who objected that there could not be much virtue in a pilgrimage performed not with bare feet, but seated comfortably in a railway-carriage, and with scarcely any time left for prayer, was assured that "the intention" was everything. One decided to go because the lady patroness had sent broth to her little girl when she had the measles, and "the poor ought always to submit themselves to the rich, because they may need their help at any time;" another engaged in the enterprise with the avowed intention of retaining the lady's custom; while some of those from whom the requisite ten francs could not be obtained were enabled to swell the number through the subscriptions of richer neighbors, and were quite willing to enjoy a holiday gratis. Of the "Sacred Heart" some of them are declared to know so little as to suppose it to be a saint who was in the same convent with Saint Marie Alacoque! The exultant announcement to the intending pilgrims that the substitution of Marshal MacMahon for M. Thiers was "the beginning of the benedictions which the Divine Goodness is about to accord to us, and we may soon hope to have a government," is stated to have been listened to with "chilling silence," owing to the fact that a fall in the price of cattle had immediately followed MacMahon's accession, and a cow for which an offer of five hundred and fifty francs had been made became insalable at four hundred francs. Those who trade on the ignorance of their votaries are liable to have their schemes jeopardized by similar illogical conclusions.

IT IS RELATED of the distinguished Rev. Dr. Bellamy that he had seasons of deep despondency, when he was confident he was going to hell. His brethren often labored with him in vain. One day, after all reasoning had failed, one of the ministers said: "Well, brother, you know more about yourself than we do. To us you appear very well; but, after all, you may be a whited sepulcher—beautiful outside, but inwardly full of corruption. If so, you will go to hell. I should like, however, to know what you will do when you get there." "Do!" cried the doctor, with great animation and emphasis; "what will I do? I will vindicate the law of God and set up prayer meetings." "All right," said the brother; "but in that case the devil will not keep you there; he will soon turn you out as unfitted for his place and company." The doctor came out of his gloom and was happy.

SHAVINGS.—A quaint writer compares a certain class of professors of religion to "sheet-iron stoves heated by shavings." When there is a little reviving in the church they all at once flame up and become exceedingly warm and zealous. They are ready to chide the pastor and the brethren for their coldness and want of activity. But alas! the shavings are soon burned out, and then the heat goes down as it went up.

The Baobab.

This plant of monstrous size, the most colossal and the most ancient vegetable monument on earth, has round, woolly leaves, which consist of from three to seven leaflets radiating from a common center and giving them somewhat the appearance of a hand, and magnificent white flowers. It is an enormous tree, holding among plants the place that the elephant holds among animals—a hoary witness of the last changes which the earth has undergone, and deluges that have buried beneath their waves the productions of early ages. Several baobabs that have been measured were found to be from seventy to seventy-seven feet in circumference. From its branches hang, at times, colossal nuts, three feet in length, and resembling large oval baskets open at the bottom, and looking from the distance like so many signal flags.

It would take fifteen men with their arms extended to embrace the trunk of one of these great trees, which, in the countries through which the Senegal flows, are venerated as sacred monuments. Enormous branches are given off from the central stem a few feet from the ground and spread out horizontally, giving the tree a diameter of over one hundred feet. "Each of these branches," says M. Danton, "would be a monstrous tree elsewhere, and, taken together, they seem to make up a forest rather than a tree."

It is only at the age of eight hundred years that the baobabs attain their full size, and then cease to grow.

The fruit of this tree is oblong; the color of the shell passes in ripening from green to yellow and brown. The fruit has been named "monkey bread." It contains a spongy substance, paler than chocolate, and filled with abundant juice.

The bark is ashy gray in color, and almost an inch in thickness. The negroes of the Senegal grind it down to powder, and in this state they use it to season their food and to maintain a moderately free perspiration, which enables them the more easily to withstand the heat. It serves also as an antidote for certain fevers.—The Wonders of Vegetation.

How a Minister Should Preach.

Light was given on this subject recently at a meeting of the Presbytery of Garioch, in Scotland, to examine witnesses against the settlement of a minister lately presented to that parish. One farmer objected that the minister's composition of a sermon he delivered in the kirk was faulty: "He did not bring out the spiritual doctrine that he should have brought from the text." Another farmer deposed as follows: "I didn't love his discourse. I didn't think much good of him. He was paying close attention to what he was reading off o', and wasna looking through the church. He had one hand always on the paper, but whether he was pointing with his finger or not I couldna say. I heard him vera weel. He read the same as you and I or anybody would like read a chapter, wi' little or ony alteration in his voice. I wasna altogether pleased with his manner. I dinna think I could esteem him for his works that I ever heard him do. I mean by his works his preachin' and readin' oot o' the pulpit. He didn't show by accent in his delivery ony liveliness toward the congregation. My own intention is that if he be placed I winna be here very often. My intention is to leave the kirk; I won't say when, but it will be very soon, if he be placed there." The witness further explained what a minister's manner should be like in the pulpit. "He should be a good, lively speaker, and one to feed to his book, and should be able to look from one en' o' the kirk to the ither, and try to attract his hearers." Such was not the case with the unfortunate minister who is the subject of the inquiry. He looked up very little. He micht hae seen a short glimpse up at a time. It was," added the witness, "my belief he kept his hand on the book to keep his place. He didna every now and then look up and around the church. He micht for a second have looked at a time at one end and anither time at the ither end. I watched him pretty close, and had my eye upon him."

WATCH UNTO PRAYER.—During one of the numerous revivals in Oberlin College, President Finney made the following shrewd remark to a young member of the First church whose religious life was not prospering. We have always thought the remark an excellent illustration of the need of the apostolic injunction: "Watch unto prayer."

This young Christian, complaining of religious depression, her adviser said:

"You are not in very good health, my child?"

"No, sir, I am not so well as I could wish."

"You are wearied at night, are you not?"

"Yes, almost every night."

"You are so tired that many a time you feel that you have no strength to pray?"

"Yes, that is exactly what I do feel and lament."

"And so, to save your strength, in the face of your laments, you go to bed without praying?"

"Yes, I have to confess that it is even so."

"I have no doubt of it, and if you watch yourself you will notice that this excuse for not praying will grow more frequent—the devil is very careful of your health, is he not?"

A DEAR little girl had been taught to pray specially for her father. He had been suddenly taken away. Kneeling at her evening devotion, her pleading eyes met her mother's. She sobbed: "O mother! I cannot leave him all out! Let me say, 'Thank God that I had a good father once,' so I can keep him in my prayers." Many stricken hearts may learn a sweet lesson from this little child.

THE best thing out—aching tooth.

Religious Intelligence.

THE new edifice of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at Salem, Oregon, was dedicated by Bishop Doggett, on Sunday, August 31. Dr. Dawes is the pastor.

THE Rev. C. H. Tucker, of Long Island, has been deposed by Protestant Episcopal Bishop Littlejohn, of that diocese, for helping Mr. Cheney, "the communions," in Chicago.

A MURAL TABLET, in memory of the late Dr. Guthrie, surmounted by a bust, has been executed for his congregation in Edinburg, in order to be placed in the vestibule of the church.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Churchman states, upon information which he has received directly from Rome, that the Pope has declared his intention to create no more cardinals at present. This spoils Archbishop McCloskey's hopes of wearing a red hat.

THE Cape of Good Hope House of Assembly, only two members dissenting, has voted for the discontinuance of the payment of £400 a year to the Bishop of Cape Town for traveling expenses. "Such," says the Record, "is the tendency of events."

WE SEE it stated that the Fulton street daily prayer meeting in New York has an average attendance of from 400 to 500 people, a large majority of them being men. It is intimated that there is an average of one hopeful conversion in these meetings every day.

A BULGARIAN, named Ekonomoff, one of the first graduates of Robert College, Constantinople, has come to this country and entered Drew Theological Seminary to fit himself as a preacher and missionary to his fellow-countrymen. He will be under the Methodist Bulgarian mission.

THE bill for the separation of Church and State in Spain guarantees the entire independence of religious corporations under present conditions. The nuns are, as now, to have their pensions, which, after death, will revert to the State. Buildings erected for religious purposes will not be disturbed.

THE Catholics, it is said, are so confident of the recovery of the temporal power of the Pope that they are raising a fund for the erection of a church in the most conspicuous part of Rome, to be dedicated to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. The building is to be commenced on the day of the downfall of the present government.

THE African Repository states that there are in Liberia between 1,400 and 1,500 scholars in the mission schools. The private schools would raise the number to about 1,500. Of these 900 are divided about evenly between the Protestant Episcopal and Methodist Episcopal missions. The other missions are the Baptist, the Presbyterian and the Lutheran.

A NOVEL ENTERPRISE as regards Western India has been started by the Western India Native Christian Alliance, which at its last annual meeting, held in Bombay, appointed a native Christian as its missionary agent to labor among his countrymen. This movement is regarded with great pleasure by the Free Church of Scotland missionaries in Bombay.

THE Rev. P. Goodfellow, of Antigonish, Nova Scotia, invited Father Chiniquy to speak to his congregation. The Roman Catholics in the vicinity stirred up a riot, broke up the meeting and insulted the ministers on their way to their home. It must be tolerably evident by this time in the neighborhood of Antigonish that Protestantism is an erroneous system.

PREACHERS EXCHANGE TOBACCO.—A genuine tobacco revival was the feature of a Willimantic camp meeting in Connecticut, a few weeks since. The occasion was a forcible sermon on the subject by Rev. D. W. C. House, of East Thompson, formerly of Norwich. At its close up ward of twenty ministers came forward and voluntarily forswore the use of tobacco from henceforth forever more.

IRISH CHURCHMEN have taken the alarm at the progress of Romanism in the English Church, and have founded a "Protestant Defense Association" for themselves. To be sure, Ritualism has no foothold whatever in Ireland, but there is no telling when it may begin to spread there, and its opponents, the Evangelists, propose to be in time to meet it. The revision of the Prayer-Book is a point of controversy at present in the Irish Episcopal Church, one party claiming that certain portions of it tend to inculcate Romanism.

SAYS a London exchange: "Galignani states that a young German savant, Dr. Strack, at present at St. Petersburg, has been charged by the Russian government to collate the valuable manuscripts of the Old Testament preserved in the library of that city. He has the intention of photographing and publishing, with annotations, the most interesting one of those documents. The Russian authorities have accorded a sum of 20,000f. to further his object. According to the most learned Russians, the Codex contains most valuable elements of the study of the Old Testament. As is known, the rarest Hebrew manuscripts in the Russian capital were obtained from very old Israelitish communities in the Crimea."

THE Christian Standard reviews the progress of the denomination of Disciples, and speaks with much hopefulness of the outlook. The public judgment during Alexander Campbell's life-time was that the body was held together by his personal influence and would fall to pieces at his death. Instead of that, the Disciples are becoming more compact and better organized, and the signs of dissolution are not visible. The distinctive features of their church life are, according to the Standard, coming to be generally accepted among orthodox religionists; there is a constant progress among them in the management of their forces and a large increase in benevolent outlays; the Sunday school enterprise has developed great strength, the ministry are increasing in numbers and efficiency, and there is a great improvement in their literature. Add to this the fact that from thirty to fifty thousand members are added every year to the churches of the Disciples, and the evidence seems plain that it is a vigorous and useful Christian body.

THE Friend of India states that the Rev. J. M. Haswell, American Baptist missionary at Maulmain, who has for twenty years been at work among the Talaings, is the only foreigner who has studied their language, into which he has translated the New Testament. Now, at sixty years of age, being prevented by palsy from preaching, Mr. Haswell contemplates publishing the results of his studies in the form of grammatical notes and a small vocabulary of the Pegnan or Talaing language, which is gradually going out of use. This language, though written in the same general characters as the Burmese, is entirely different, and is now prevalent only in the rural districts of Amherst, part of Martaban, and to an uncertain extent in Siam.

THE Wesleyan missions on the Gold Coast, Africa, are still suffering from the warlike movements of the Ashantis, who are in full possession of the field, have destroyed many mission chapels, and have scattered schools and congregations. Sir Garnet Wolseley has been commissioned to command the English troops against the Ashantis, who, according to the letter of Mr. Goldie, United Presbyterian missionary to Old Calabar, written to the Missionary Record, have no special grievance to allege as the cause of hostilities. The interior tribes all show some restlessness to get to the sea-coast and interfere with the monopoly of traffic held by the sea-board tribes. It is reported by some that the object of the Ashantis in making war is to obtain captives for immolation in their great annual sacrifices.

RE-ENFORCEMENTS.—Never before, says Zion's Herald, were so many missionaries going to the foreign field. Nearly every missionary society in all countries are either establishing new missions or increasing the working force of those already established. Our own missionary society is doing a noble work in this direction. All it wants is more funds to send hundreds where it now sends one. Dr. C. C. Baldwin, of the Presbyterian Board, will soon return to China, and resume his labors in Foochow. The Southern Presbyterian Church is also about to add to its missions in that country. Rev. J. W. Davies, of North Carolina, Mr. G. W. Painter, of Virginia, and Miss A. C. Safford, of Georgia, have recently left to re-enforce the China mission. Mr. Davies is to join Mr. DuBose at Foochow. Miss Safford has also been appointed to that station, and will aid Mrs. DuBose in the work among the women. The American Board is also doing a great work in re-enforcement. In addition to the missionaries recently sent, Rev. H. H. Lenvitt will sail for Japan in October. Rev. and Mrs. Howland and Rev. and Mrs. Chandler will leave for Madura; Miss Howland for Ceylon, and Miss Norris, M. D., for Bombay, in a few weeks.

JUST NOW, both in this country and in Europe, there is what we may call an epidemic of the Jewish question. Here, as well as there, the discussion is but the rebound of circumstances. Mr. Disraeli was thought to have drawn upon his very opulent oriental imagination when he stated some years ago, that in all parts of the world there were Jews who, shrinking from the excruciating contempt and aversion of mankind, concealed their faith, not only for a life-time, but for generations. Some not have lately come to the surface who indicate that Disraeli knew what he was talking about. For example, it is mentioned, in a recent number of the Jewish Chronicle, that a company of Jews at Berlin brought to the Shah, on the occasion of the latter's visit there, a petition imploring him to protect the Jews in Persia; and that a stern Persian, belonging to the royal suite, who had received and closely questioned the delegation, quietly informed them that their memorial should really reach the Shah, for he, the stern Persian aforesaid, was a concealed Jew, though obliged to deny his faith. Since the religious emancipation of Austria and Spain there have been numerous conversions to Judaism, which were in reality nothing more than the open avowal of Judaism by "Catholic" families who, perhaps for ages, have remained Jews in sympathy and faith and domestic habits, while they have outwardly assented to the dominant and domineering religion.—Christian Union.

THE Berlin correspondent of the Cologne Gazette gives a discouraging report of the decline of Protestantism in Germany, as indicated by the falling off in the number of theological students. Ten years ago there were 1,100 such students in the six eastern provinces of Prussia, whereas during the past half year there were only 680, and a similar diminution is shown by the records of all the German universities except that of Leipzig. In Wurtemberg and Baden especially it is found difficult to obtain a sufficient number of candidates to fill the vacancies among the Protestant clergy. In the last number of Neue Evangelische Kirchenzeitung Dr. Messner, the editor, attributes this decrease in the study of theology to the "anti-ecclesiastical spirit of the time," to the "lukewarmness with which religion is viewed even in the families of the clergy," to the "contempt with which pious youths at the German colleges are treated by their fellow-students," to the "humiliations which the clergy have to suffer in public life," and to the divisions which have sprung up in the church itself. "It is very seldom," says Dr. Messner, "that the son of a family of nobles or merchants now elects to study theology, and preaching seems to have lost all its influence." State churchism has accomplished its perfect work in Germany in the devitalization of the Protestant Church. Yet this is the cry which sundry reformers in this country would press to the lips of American churches.

The Leading Vice.

The leading vice of the day is dishonesty. Other sins are abundant, but this is in excess of all. The recent and still prevailing monetary disturbance has brought many hidden things of darkness to light, and exposed frauds that had been a long time in progress. The average conscience is less sensitive on the subject of financial trusts than on that of other obligations. Men in high places and in reputable social positions cheat and defraud, and enrich themselves by many artful tricks, without losing caste. They are reckless in business, rushing into speculations with a perfect abandon, and caring little for their own promises, or for the wreck and disaster which they inflict upon the country.

Money is the great necessity, and all means are legitimate by which it can be secured. Neither can people afford to wait for slow accumulations, or to gain a competence by industrious toil. A desire for riches and a repugnance to hard work go together; and some royal road, some short cut, must be found to the coveted possessions. The wise man has said that "money answereth all things." Almost every temporal good it will buy, from the highest luxuries to the merest necessities and comforts of life. As the world goes, it commands respect and influence, and is more honored than virtue or talent. Style is a social necessity. The houses people live in, the clothes they wear, the entertainments they give, are matters of first importance. Nearly everything, from high political office to the honor and general deference of society, is to be bought. The temptation to get money by doubtful, and even by fraudulent means, was never greater in this country than at the present time. It will purchase more, and do more for character, reputation and pleasure, than in the days when honor, principle and integrity were regarded as the essential passports to public favor and social recognition.

Conscience, for some reason, would seem to be less tender in its judgment on questions of monetary obligation than on most other points in morals. Men fail in business, but manage to cover up and save enough to make themselves comfortable, while widows and orphans, whom they owe, suffer for the barest necessaries of life. Merchants hold on to the cash balances of their customers somehow, planters who have pledged crops to their factors for advances send their cotton and sugar elsewhere, and banks involved and bankrupt by bond speculations shut down upon their depositors and refuse to pay the money intrusted to them for safe keeping. There is borrowing without much prospective ability to pay, and with no serious intention to do so unless perfectly convenient. Moral responsibility, beyond what legal processes can enforce, is rarely admitted. Plain, thorough-going honesty, and transparent uprightness such as leads a man to "swear to his own hurt and change not," and to regard his debts as unpaid until they are paid, is a thing most rare.

The times demand a revival on this specific subject of honesty in business, and a conscience with reference to monetary trusts. Christians are admonished to "provide things honest in the sight of all men," and they are commanded "to do that which is honest." Looseness in business affairs and in matters of debt brings reproach upon the cause of Christ. It is a painful fact that men otherwise blameless, and sometimes prominent in the churches, are often guilty of carelessness and a culpable negligence in reference to their debts. They are reckless in going in debt, and quite too indifferent and forgetful when the time of payment comes. We have known those who seemed to have enlightened and right consciences on all other matters who were apparently without any moral sense about meeting financial obligations. Their lives were without stain otherwise, but their character and influence were seriously damaged by this most fatal blemish.

The churches, in their ministry and laity, have suffered and do suffer from this cause. Money is sought to be made by gambling, by dealing in whisky, by the dishonest cornerings and combinations in trades and speculations, and money owed is not paid, and even the obligation is repudiated. With low and perverted views of integrity in the world, and in the expedients of business, it is perhaps not strange that the average Christian practice should have declined. The teachings and discipline of the churches should be specially directed to this evil of dishonesty, and the general deterioration of conscience upon the subject of financial trusts. The churches should at least purge themselves, and deliver a clear testimony for honesty. Let them, at any rate, realize the magnitude of the evil, and vigorously labor to arrest it.

Letter from Bishop Pierce.

The Southern Christian Advocate of October 1 has a live letter from Bishop Pierce. Alas for common folks! the Bishop is so hearty in body and so exceptionally endowed every way that he can hardly conceive of the weakness and infirmities of ordinary men. We give the most of his excellent letter, replete with wise and faithful counsel.

My brethren are rebuking me for what they call overdoing—wearing out before my time. Is it not written: "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up?" Was this charged as a fault? I trow not. If I had no higher motive I should go on my way for example sake. The tendency even among preachers is in the opposite direction. These vacations and visits to the springs and mountains and to the North have an ugly look to me. I am afraid of them. My ideas of ministerial fidelity do not allow it in my case. But I judge no man. I only suggest that all movements in the direction of self-indulgence will bear watching. In the grass of these green pastures, where the flesh seeks rest, there is a snake, and his name is satan.

No, brethren, I am not overdoing. My health is good, my strength is firm. The commission says: "Go." How dare I stay at home and rest? I see the men of the world busy; they rise early, sit up late, eat the bread of carefulness, tax brain, muscle, time, work, work, work, and I hear no complaint. No blame attaches. They do it to obtain corruptible things—silver and gold. Shall not an incorruptible inheritance stimulate us to superior diligence? It ought, and, by the grace of God, for myself it shall.

The spring and summer work, and observations made, have all been suggestive. I have seen some things to cheer and encourage; many to bewail and deplore. I am more and more satisfied that the Introduction of organs and choirs, like "Alexander the coppersmith, have done us much evil." In many cases they have been the occasion of division, discord, variance, hate, heart-burnings in the churches. This is all wrong, I grant. Yet it is as fair and just to lay the blame on those who gave the "offense" as upon those who were "offended."

I find churches which have paid thousands for an organ and only give hundreds for missions. Another—straining, the people say, to support a preacher, yet raising from $1,200 to $1,800 to buy an organ. But they have not only absorbed money—they have put Methodist worship into a straight-jacket. All freedom is gone. Nothing is left, in many places, but a petrified respectability. Singing to the praise of God is substituted by music, so called. The whole thing is so incongruous, so out of harmony with genuine spiritual Methodism, that praying and preaching are both hampered by it. The very atmosphere of the house, when these performances come off, is infected. It is like an east wind on the nervous system. No will or resolution can resist it. On this more anon.

The pew system has been tried by five Methodist churches (perhaps more) in Georgia. It worked something akin to death in them all. The only chance for a continued life was to abandon the policy. The plan of renting or selling pews in the house of God is an abomination, a downright wickedness. It is largely responsible for the fact that but a small fraction of our city populations, either North or South, attend the ministry of the word. As far as I know, in Georgia we are clear of this body of death. But we are falling into another custom not much better. I mean the promiscuous seating of our congregations. The time has come for a note of warning on this subject. I will not discuss the subject now, but may hereafter. In the meantime I avow myself in favor of the old rule: "Let the men and the women sit apart in all our congregations." It may be pleasant and convenient for families to occupy the same pew, but pleasure and convenience ought to be given up for the sake of religious interest. This family arrangement cannot be allowed without conceding the privilege to other parties and to all. And here is the evil. Young gentlemen and ladies, as I have seen, come in groups and march along the aisles, and with bows and ceremonies and graceful joining of hands pass to their places in pairs, and, seated side by side, whisper and giggle and fan and indulge in all the amenities of private life. Now what I say is, all these things are out of place in the house of God. The church is not a parlor, where people meet to exchange civilities, and brandish the graces of dress or form or manner. Sobriety, reverence, awe, are demanded. "God is in his holy temple." Now, remembering that our congregations are largely made up of young people—gay, festive, buoyant, thoughtless, aye, and carnal too—everybody knows that this commingling is unfriendly to serious thought, to the impression of the word and to religious action, even if the heart should be touched. In this arrangement the devil has the advantage of the preacher and the people.

The Discipline still insists on free seats, but we cannot have them, in fact, without the separation of the sexes. Without this there are barriers and delicacies and fears of intrusion which embarrass the feelings and virtually limit the privilege of the incomer. In my judgment a congregation of people gathered together for the worship of God ought, in its order and arrangement and manners, to be discriminated from all other public assemblies. Everything which tends to commonize the occasion and assimilate it in order and likeness to the political or social gatherings of the people ought, as far as possible, to be avoided. Oh! that Methodism would maintain her individuality, her uniqueness, her independence. Mr. Wesley was a wise man, and there is a profound philosophy in the system he wrought out, even in what people less wise consider little things. Our church has lost power and prestige by every surrender of what was distinctive, and every approximation to the customs of other people. There is religion as well as history in the account of the sling and the stone.

I have found love-feasts much neglected, and when held greatly impaired in their value by sitting with open doors and letting in a promiscuous crowd. This is all wrong—the offspring of a silly, mawkish liberality. Every church has a right to hold its meetings in its own way. Our book of law, in regard to love-feasts, prescribes the mode, specifies who may attend, and limits the time. No preacher has a right to change any item of this arrangement. Let every brother conform to the rule. None but a Methodist has any right in the premises, and the courtesy which admits others has its legal boundaries. No one has any right to complain that he was not invited. A love-feast is a private Methodist meeting—a family gathering, where all the children are expected to speak in the freedom of mutual confidence and affection, unembarrassed by the presence of strangers. Let us return to the old paths. G. F. PIERCE.

Evangelical Alliance.

LETTER FROM DR. TUDOR.

MR. EDITOR: Through your thoughtful kindness, and as though you anticipated the desire I had, if it were consistent with Providence, to look in upon the Evangelical Alliance, at this its first session and conference in America, advising me that you had already appointed the first Sunday in October to be Quarterly Conference Sunday at Carondelet, and would fill the pulpit, I have been enabled to enjoy a great feast in what I have seen and heard in two days' attendance at the sittings of the great Christian congress in New York.

This new institution in Christendom, the Evangelical Alliance, was organized in London, in 1846, at the instance and conception of good men, now dead and living, the most prominent and active of the latter being the indefatigable and laborious Dr. Philip Schaff. The organizing idea of the Alliance is the unity of Protestant Christians throughout the world—not uniformity, as I have heard the matter explained here, nor unanimity, but unity. The statement and discussion of the formula and principles of this unity must give place, for the present, to some account of the stirring scenes which have accompanied the reception of the foreign delegates, and the sessions of the Alliance in the past two or three days.

There have been held hitherto five conferences of the Alliance, respectively at London, Paris, Berlin, Geneva and Amsterdam. This, therefore, at New York is the sixth conference, whose accredited members are delegates chiefly from the States of Europe and from the United States. There is one delegate from Bombay, India—a native and a preacher. I cannot tell you all the churches that are represented, for no one is able to learn from any hint or announcement in the conference assembled to what particular denomination any speaker that is introduced to the body, or any delegate referred to, belongs. All this is sedulously kept out of sight. I have heard several foreign delegates say that when they have been asked in the social circle to what church they belonged, their invariable answer has been: "I belong to the Evangelical Alliance;" and beyond that they would give no satisfaction. Strangers, therefore, must remain unknown to strangers by their party names. The Dean of Canterbury may be recognized historically as of the Church of England, but no one would know him to be a churchman from aught that drops from his lips, and I have heard him several times. The reputation and fame of others may associate them inevitably with certain churches of longer or shorter names; but though French, German, Dutch, Swiss and Italian speak, some of them, in very broken, almost amusing, English when they attempt our vernacular before an audience, what you, Mr. Editor, and I would call the language of Canaan seems to be their native tongue. The denominational names are Dutch, French, etc.; the language of the Evangelical Alliance is one.

This sixth session of the Alliance is the first in America. The second session would have been appointed for New York, twenty-five years ago, but for one thing, as I heard the British secretary, Rev. James Davis, state the other night. The nomination of New York was rejected because of slavery existing in this land. Now that difficulty is removed. Perhaps the objectors on the ground stated above were just a little guilty of the same oversight which impaired for years in the North that philanthropy which prayed, at camp meetings and elsewhere, by formal and adopted resolution, for the poor slave, but not a word for the poor slaveholder.

I was present, on last Thursday night, at the public reception and welcome given the foreign delegates, in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association. The attendance of citizens was to the full capacity of sitting and standing-room, after the occupation of reserved seats by the delegates. The audience-room was chastely decorated for the occasion with the flags of all nations, and in full view over the platform in gilt capitals were the names Wesley, Calvin, Edwards, Wycliffe, Luther, Knox, Bunyan, surmounted by the motto of the Alliance: Unum corpus sumus in Christo.

The Rev. Dr. Adams, Presbyterian, of New York, delivered the address of welcome. Dr. Adams is very tall in person, very erect and very gray. He is a man of eminent abilities, and his address was truly eloquent. He fully instructed the foreign delegates in what we were as a great nation, and the wished-for unity was the theme of his concluding remarks. The gem of his speech was as follows:

It has been said, whether by poetry or science it matters not, that there is a certain point in the upper air in which all the discordant sounds of the earth—the rattle of wheels, the chime of bells, the roll of the drum, the laugh of the child and the moan of the beggar—meet and blend in perfect harmony. Surely it is something more than a poetic conceit, even the sure word of inspiration, that when once we are lifted up to a fellowship in Christ Jesus, we meet in a high and heavenly place, where "all things are gathered together in one, both which are in heaven and which are on earth, even in him."

Lord Alfred Churchill, of England, was the first to reply on the part of the foreign delegates to the address of welcome. Churchill has a ruddy, well-fed face, but is very far from representing in corpulency the traditional beef-eating Englishman. He has the aristocratic hesitation of utterance in his speech, and said little beyond a few words in introduction and explanation of a paper which he read, and which was a greeting of the council of the London organization of the Evangelical Alliance.

The Rev. Dr. Stoughton, of London, followed, his face radiant with smiles, and his well-knit frame evidently tingling all over with the happiness of the hour. The gem of his remarks was:

Like the man who saw on the hills of Scotland what he thought to be an enemy, but who found, as the mist cleared away, that it was his own brother, so amid our controversies we see through a mist, and mistake for enemies those who are really our friends.

Next followed a man whom I was glad to see called out, for I had been observing him with great interest. He had attracted my attention to him by the manifold expression of joy and pleasure which his beaming face and the upward tossing of his head and every motion restlessly uttered, as he listened to the several speakers preceding. I took him to be about sixty years of age, and yet he seemed to be alive with all the activity of early youth. I was sure he was happy. At the call of his name I was glad to see him arise—the Rev. Dr. Fisch, of Paris, an able representative of the Protestant Church in France. I could well understand, as soon as I knew who he was, how exuberant his emotions would naturally be, coming from a country where Protestantism is scarcely known by the masses to a land where it is the religion of the nation. I waited eagerly upon his speech, and his first words were just like himself, as he appeared to me. He spoke in good English, and began by saying:

I have much trouble to express the feelings of my heart after the address of welcome delivered by Dr. Adams. Indeed it was to me as if I was already in heaven, and as though his words were accompanied by the melody of angels' harps.

Dr. Cotillin, of Geneva, Dr. Dorner, of Berlin, and Dr. Christlieb, of Bonn, made short addresses. I was happy, indeed, to look upon those men of distinction, of piety and of zeal in the cause of God.

The enthusiasm of the audience, which had been steadily increasing from the beginning, and had abundantly manifested itself by repeated and deafening applause, rose to its highest pitch of tumultuous excitement with a little incident that occurred at the close of Dr. Christlieb's remarks. Dr. Fisch, from Paris, made allusion, in his speech, to the late Franco-Prussian war, and greeted his German brethren, whom he was happy to meet on a platform of Christian peace, fellowship and fraternity. Dr. Christlieb, of Prussia, responded in the same spirit, saying: "There are times, and this is one, when Germans can forget that they are Germans, and extend their hands to our French brethren." With that he stepped across the platform and extended his hand to Dr. Fisch, who, of course, received it. The effect was electrical.

An interesting character was then called out to address the audience in the person of the Rev. Narayan Sheshadra, of Bombay, India. He spoke in wonderfully good English, and claimed to be a fruit of the Evangelical Alliance in his conversion to the Christian faith. He was dressed in the costume of his country—in a long overskirt, and with the ingeniously-folded Hindoo turban on his head. His face was in expression bright, happy and intelligent. He said:

In my country we have been divided into various sects—the Brahmins, the warriors, the mercantile and the servile classes—but it was in the mind of our Father in heaven that as he was one, his children should be one, and his heart's desire is that we should be bound together in one bundle of love.

The conference formally organized on Friday morning by electing Theodore Woolsey, of New Haven, president. In his speech of acceptance he used the following language, which, coming from a man not inferior in cultivation to Prof. Tyndall, and indorsed by the applause of the immense audience present, almost drew from me an audible "Glory to God!"

Notwithstanding the inefficacy of prayer has been demonstrated by science, the church goes on praying still, all the same; and as long as there are Christians in the world they will pray incessantly, in spite of all logical conclusions.

Where are the kings and empires now
Of old that went and came?
Yet, Lord, thy church is praying still,
A thousand years the same.

One of the speakers on that day, from London, related how he came to realize the magnitude of this country. He had been here two years ago, and had brought a parcel which he had been commissioned by a lady to deliver to her son in Kankakee, Illinois. A day or two after reaching his quarters in New York he asked at the office of the hotel: "Can you tell me, sir, where Kankakee is?" and was answered: "Why, sir, it is one thousand and seven miles from here." "Why, sir," rejoined he, "I have a parcel to carry there for a lady;" and it had hitherto seemed to him to be only a sort of round-the-corner trip. He had to travel three times the length of England to execute his commission, and he triumphantly said: "I did it!"

On Sunday afternoon the very Rev. R. Payne Smith, Dean of Canterbury, was the chief officiating minister in the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, at Dr. Adams' church, Presbyterian. The world moves.

NEW YORK, October 6, 1873.

THE Western Methodist speaks in the following terms of one of the victims of the fever at Shreveport:

We deeply regret to learn that our friend and brother, Alfred Saville, died of the disease in that city, October 7. He left this city three or four weeks since, and went to Shreveport for service in the telegraph office, the fever having previously carried off a number of the operators. He went from a sense of duty, and has fallen a victim, but was a conqueror also, we doubt not. He was an official member of Central church in this city, highly esteemed, dearly beloved and very useful among his brethren, who, with us, keenly feel his loss. He leaves a young wife, to whom, in this dark hour, we commend the divine promises, and give assurance of the sympathies and prayers of many friends.

EAST TEXAS CONFERENCE.—Rev. Daniel Morse and the Galveston Advocate state that the East Texas Conference will meet November 12. We had put it November 26 in our register, but we cannot now recall our authority for the change, but must have been misinformed, of course.

REV. J. B. WALKER, D. D., reached the city on Wednesday morning, and left for Galveston on Saturday, the eleventh instant. He was in vigorous health, and much improved by two months of rest and travel.

Death of H. F. Given.

This well-known merchant and citizen of New Orleans died on Monday morning, the thirteenth instant. Mr. Given was a prominent and devoted member of our church, holding his membership in the Carondelet Street charge, of which he has been for years a steward and class-leader. He was present at the love-feast on Wednesday night, the eighth, assisted in waiting on the congregation with the bread and water, and spoke in a most earnest and feeling manner of his religious experience, remarking, in a way which then arrested our attention, that he thought his earthly course was nearly run. On Sunday he was, as usual, at his class early in the morning, at the eleven o'clock service, and at night he was in his accustomed seat, and after the sermon, in his usual health apparently, bade his pastor good night. About three o'clock in the morning he awoke in great pain, aroused his family, and a physician was soon with him. At five o'clock his spirit had taken its flight. Disease of the heart, we suppose, was the cause of his death. Bro. Given was a man of great benevolence and amiability, and of blameless life; a Christian of catholic spirit, but devoted most heartily to his own household of faith. He will be greatly missed and lamented by our church in New Orleans. He was born at Smithland, Kentucky, and had resided in New Orleans since 1854.

THE PASTOR of the Southern Methodist church at Shreveport, Rev. John Wilkinson, is more than ever endeared to that community by his faithful and efficient services during the prevalence of the epidemic. Besides administering to the spiritual wants of the sick, dying and bereaved, he has made himself exceedingly useful in other respects. We are informed that his presence and labors in the plague-stricken community have been of the most signal value, and that he has spared nothing in his efforts to alleviate the sufferings of the people. In all this he has, however, simply done his duty as a minister of the gospel, and has done as every true pastor would have done. It gives us pleasure to note this instance of ministerial fidelity, and the more so because we believe it to be general among our Protestant preachers. In Memphis we believe our pastors are all at their posts, and that they are working like heroes amid the raging pestilence. We are glad to see them quit themselves like men in such times of danger and sorrow. The Rev. Dr. Bowman, an esteemed Presbyterian minister of that afflicted city, has lately fallen, while engaged in alleviating the sufferings of the sick and destitute. The Catholic priesthood, as usual in such emergencies, have been promptly to the front, and many of them have died, like brave and good men, in the performance of their duties.

ANOTHER LITTLE ONE FOLDED.—We much regret to know that Rev. C. W. Carter and wife, of Mansfield, have recently met with a heavy bereavement in the death of their youngest child, Charley, who died on the morning of September 27, after an illness of five weeks. It is well with the child. May God graciously sustain the afflicted parents.

YET ANOTHER LITTLE ONE TAKEN HOME.—Rev. A. Dowling, of the Alabama Conference, writes as follows of the death of his little daughter Nettie. The parents have our deepest sympathy in their great sorrow.

Died, at the Chinn Grove camp ground, of membranous croup, October 4, at seven P. M., our sweet, darling little Nettie, aged one year, ten months and seven days.

Although she was so intelligent (for her age,) lovely and promising, yet death came, in the providence of God, and Nettie passed

"From earth-born woe and care,
And soared above these clouds of night,
Her Savior's bliss to share."

While we weep and mourn for our dear, charming, precious little babe, yet by faith we look, through our tears and sorrows, to that beautiful, bright world above, where all is happiness, peace and love, and expect to meet her, yes, meet our angel Nettie, and from her never, never part again. A. DOWLING.

OZARK, ALA., October 9, 1873.

EXCEPTIONS TAKEN.—Exceptions have been very justly taken to a brief article headed Alabama College, and published in the ADVOCATE of October 2. The objectionable features of the communication escaped our notice at the time, and the copy was sent to the printer under the impression that it was no more than a statement of the condition of the college and the time of its opening. Had we detected the offensive personal allusions the communication would have been consigned to the waste-basket at once.

NEVER were any of the saints so sufficiently armed that the devil hath not found some part or other unfenced, even in the best.—William Gouge.

Letter from Camden, Arkansas.

MR. EDITOR: The year is passing away, and to us will soon be gone. A preacher's year ends at Conference. How we tremble as we look back! This retrospection is the cordial of life, but, like other cordials, is sometimes taken with a good deal of bitterness. It gives us new strength—enervates and quickens us—but sometimes brings us sad hearts and an inward frown upon ourselves. When we look back we begin to "learn how frail we are." Our errors, shortcomings, indiscretions, lightnesses, want of zeal and devotion—these are seen best after we pass them. We may and ought to see them as we get to them; but then there are circumstances combined with them to divert our minds; and not till we pass them, forget the circumstances of the hour, and look with calm and unrestrained judgment upon that which has passed, can we see all these things in all their lights and bearings upon our lives.

In the sense of lingering for things behind, as Lot's wife did, or turning our affections and purposes back, as Israel did, it is not good to look back. But in the sense that the prophet Hagai would have all Israel "consider their ways"—this looking back is the very life of us. How often have I preached? What have I preached? What for? To whom? In what spirit? How have I lived? What for? For whom? How prayerfully? How, by a holy life, have I shamed sin? Who have I induced to seek the Lord? Where can I improve my life? In word or deed?

"Oh, Lord, with trembling I confess
A gracious soul may fall from grace."

In solo Deo salus, and in him must I abide. In spite of our misgivings as to the past, the year rolls round and reveals other errors. Surely "it is human to err," and divine grace is alone sufficient to make our lives tolerable to the great Judge.

But we look back not only upon our moral conduct, but the intellectual and social sides of life also. Oh, the moments spent in idleness that might have enriched the mind with a rare and extended learning! Retrospection is useful here also, as in a moral aspect. To learn much is to know the importance of it. To learn a great deal is to know that we know but little. The more we learn the more we find that we do not know. If ignorance has a bliss, it is in not knowing how much is not known. From the edge of my garden I see my neighbor's farm, and when I go through this I see one beyond, and beyond that another, and beyond that another; and as some one said of insects, so of all knowledge, ad infinitum.

"Fleas have mites, and these have ticks to bite 'em;
These have other parasites, and so, ad infinitum."

When will we reach the end? But from these things which have no end I turn to that which ends, alas! too soon. Have I given offense to any, even "the least of these little ones?" Have I been useful to my associates? Have I been polite, kind, genteel, hospitable, for Christ's sake? Have I sought every man's good, and not my own? Where can I improve myself?

But in this sort of retrospection I find some things most palatable indeed, when I look out upon the examples set by my friends. Some have gained heavenly distinction, and bid me pass over; others earthly honors, and bid me follow on. For their fidelity and learning, several of my old (Alabama) Conference companions have received worldly honors during the year; and most heartily do I congratulate them and those who honored them. Rev. W. A. McCarty, I see, has been the worthy recipient of the honorary degree of doctor of divinity bestowed upon Rev. J. B. Cottrell, by the Washington-Lee University. This is a noble institution, and has chosen as the object of its honors one of the noblest men. No man ever more fully possessed the spirit of the lion and the lamb than Dr. Cottrell—before wrong and oppression a lion, before right and progress a lamb. He is not fulsome in his praise of right, nor of manly independence; but he who will crouch down at the feet of another gains no praise nor confidence from him. He is one of those men without whom the church would never move an inch in a line of progression. In the advance in all things, and with a zeal which knows no bounds but right—progression on a proper scale—he is called a radical by some; but no man is more conservative, where conservatism is a virtue, than he. May he long live to wear his well-won honors. Next come the names of Revs. M. S. Andrews and W. Shapard—worthy men, who were well selected by the Alabama Agricultural College. These all having obtained a good report," have been honored with this distinction, which, though in many cases it means favoritism, in these cases means merit. It stimulates one, in retrospecting these associational relations, to see friends prosper thus with the "honors which are of men," without a compromise of the honors which "are of God."

Others there are, but "time would fail me to speak" of them. How we scatter! Mathews in New Orleans, Louisiana; Cottrell in Columbus, Mississippi; Treadwell in Kansas; Law in Missouri; Ross in Huntsville, Alabama, and your correspondent in Arkansas. But by and by "we will gather at the river." Is it not sometimes good to prospect, as well as to retrospect? By the knowledge of the past we can prepare for the future. Work, work, work! and still we have much to do. By the failures of the past—by the errors of former life—by the broken ties which once bound heart to heart—by the commandments of God and the sweet promise of his word, the order sounds out from heaven to every soul of man: "Prepare to meet thy God."

In Arkansas our work for the Lord is not without his approbation in many places, and his laboring ministers have souls for their hire. Methodism, the work of God, is "growing up into an holy temple unto the Lord."

We will be pleased to have you with us at our Conference session here, November 26. Can you not come? Yours, etc.,

J. A. PARKER.

Closing Ceremonies.

The closing ceremonies of the Evangelical Alliance, recently assembled in New York, took place on Sunday, the twelfth instant. Of the interesting occasion we have the following account by telegraph:

As early as five o'clock this afternoon persons began to assemble in front of the Academy of Music, Steinway Hall and Tammany Hall, the places appointed for holding the closing ceremonies of the Evangelical Alliance. At seven o'clock the crowd was immense, blocking up Fourteenth and contiguous streets and extending for blocks away. The Academy opened its doors at six o'clock, and within five minutes every seat was taken. The other halls did not open till ten minutes before seven; the great throng meantime remaining in a good humor and constantly increasing in numbers. Interest seemed to center in the Academy meeting. As none but ticket-holders were admitted there, it had the effect to drive many to the auxiliary meetings. Mayor Havemeyer presided at the Academy, and Dr. Crosbie introduced the speakers. The exercises opened with a voluntary upon the organ, when Dr. Armitage led in prayer. The hymn, "Come, thou almighty King," was then sung, and followed by a prayer from Rev. Dr. Fisch, of Paris, closing with the Lord's Prayer, the audience uniting.

Dr. Cooke, of Quebec, Prof. Astray, of Luzerne, Switzerland, Dr. Bruneket, of Italy, Dr. Arnold, of Scotland, and Rev. Narayan Sheshadra, of India, made brief addresses.

The hymn beginning, "By a thousand ways we come," was then sung, after which Rev. Mr. Christlieb, of Germany, Dr. Berkley, of Ireland, and the Dean of Canterbury, London, spoke briefly.

The congregation then sang, "I love thy kingdom, Lord," when Rev. Noah Schenck, of Brooklyn, delivered the farewell address to the delegates.

He said that for the first time in the long history of the world had Christians gathered in catholic council upon the Western continent. The present was an august occasion. The sixth conference now ends. Around the metropolis of the Western world a coronet of grace was wreathed. The past session had met for no purpose save to honor Christ; it had not met to discuss doctrines, but to arm afresh for the great battle against sin. The numbers had astonished every one. A glowing tribute was paid to the press for its tone. The conference was historic. It had received a communication from the Old Catholics of Europe stating that the conference has a political character, and that it has been recognized by the Emperor of Germany. It is such a power that its influence is dreaded by all opponents to Christianity.

Addressing the delegates, he said: You have not come as pilgrims to a profane Mecca, but with different impulses, all in the love of God, in Christ. From China, India, France, Mexico—from every latitude you come to tell us of Christ and your work for him. The Alliance has a prophetic character. The speaker said that the time is near when the world shall have but one civilization; that dissonance of Babel will be at last in one common language. In alliance we have a recognition of this in advance. The speaker loved alliance, because it gave him revelations of the future. He had now to speak good-by to America, which was: God bless you.

Rev. Mr. Adams offered the closing prayer, and Bishop Janes pronounced the benediction.

Similar exercises were held at Steinway and Tammany Halls, and the hall of the Cooper Union was filled with Germans, to listen to the farewell addresses of German delegates to the Alliance.

Periodicals.

THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST for October contains the usual amount of useful reading matter, and is profusely illustrated. The first page contains a wood engraving of Joseph Arch, the head of an important movement among the English laborers. The likeness indicates a man of great firmness, strength and benevolence.

APPLETON'S JOURNAL is probably the best literary periodical in America. The number of October 4 is unusually attractive in its reading matter and splendid illustrations.

THE FARMER'S VINDICATOR is a new weekly, published at Jackson, Mississippi, devoted to the industrial interests of the South, the Granges and the fireside. It is edited by E. G. Wall, and is the official journal of the Patrons of Husbandry in Mississippi. The Vindicator is a handsome eight-page sheet. Price, $2 per annum. We wish it a prosperous and useful career.

THE GARDENER'S MONTHLY for October has been received. This valuable periodical is published at Philadelphia, by Charles H. Marot, at $2 per annum.

THE following, from the Nashville Christian Advocate, brings the sad intelligence of the death of the little son of Prof. Summers:

Thomas Osmond Summers, son of Prof. Summers, of the Southern University, and grandson of the editor of the Christian Advocate, was born in Edgefield, near Nashville, Tennessee, November 14, 1869, and died of diphtheria, in Greensboro, Alabama, October 4, 1873. What a wonderful angel has that marvelously sprightly boy become! Yet, O how it wrings the heart! The hand of God touches us in a place so tender! But it is his hand and that is enough. Peace! Be still!

FOR WHAT port is man bound during courtship? Bound to Havre.

MARRIED.

TOOMER—BUCKINGHAM.—In the Methodist church at Pearlington, Mississippi, on the first of October, 1873, by Rev. Henry P. Bowen, Mr. Isaac Toomer, of Pearlington, Mississippi, to Miss Cora D. Buckingham, of Galveston, Texas.

JUST AS IT SHOULD BE.—Many of our correspondents are kind enough to keep their book and ADVOCATE business separate. They never write about the business of the two on the same sheet. Although they may inclose the two letters in the same envelop, they are dated, signed and addressed separately, and distinct from each other. This enables us to attend more promptly to each. When the business is mixed the book-keeper of one department must content himself to wait till it has passed through the other department—order filled, goods shipped and letter answered—before the business of his department can be attended to; and as the book-keepers and clerks of the two branches of business are separate, and file their letters separately, it must be apparent to every man of reflection that much perplexity results from writing about the business of both on the same page. When money is remitted it should be distinctly stated what for; and if for two or more purposes, how much for each. Write nothing in business letters except that which has reference to business.

THE WEEKLY WATCHMAN, LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS.—Under contract with E. B. Rolchkiss, editor and proprietor, the subscribers of the Watchman will be furnished with the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE during the time of the suspension of said paper, being thirty-six weeks further, as agreed upon, or until notice thereafter.

MR. E. E. F. ROSS, our resident advertising agent, is now on a brief tour through the West and North, and we commend him to the attention of our patrons, and shall be thankful for courtesies extended to him. Their research has at last been rewarded by a discovery which fully realizes the fondest desires of the medical faculty, and which is justly regarded as the most important triumph that Pharmacy has ever achieved. This important desideratum is which purifies the blood and removes all corrupt humor and unhealthy accumulations from the body, and yet produces no weakness or lassitude whatever, but, on the contrary, tones the stomach and invigorates the body during the progress of its operation. It unites the hereto-fore irreconcilable qualities of a strengthening purgative and a purifying tonic.

DR. TUTT'S PILLS are the most active and searching medicine in existence. They at once attack the very root of diseases, and their action is so prompt that in an hour or two after they are taken the patient is aware of their good effects. They may be taken at any time without restraint of diet or occupation. They produce neither nausea, griping or debility, and as a family medicine they have no rival.

The Child's Corner.

LITTLE MAY.

BY JOY IRELAN.

Last night, when the dreamy twilight
Touched to earth her dusky feet,
And the tired tenor of Nature
Beat with pulse more calm and sweet,

One by one, on high in heaven,
Gleaming stars had winged their flight,
And their glimmer, glow and sparkle
Brightened all our somber night,

Little May I found beside me,
In her trailing night-robe white,
She had lisped her "Now I lay me,"
Kissed me many times "Good night."

Now her blue eyes were wide opened,
As she eager grasped my hand,
Pointed with her baby finger
To the circling stars so grand!

"Oh, mamma!" the soft voice whispered,
"See the gold lamps in the sky!
God did let the angels light them!
Shall I have one when I die?"

Heavenly peace and trust and beauty
Gazed from out the wistful eyes
Of my little baby daughter,
Standing 'neath the bending skies.

And I told her of the fullness,
Of the joy and peace and love,
Of the harps and crowns and music,
In the happy home above.

Letter from China to the Children.

My Dear Young Friends of Felicity and Moreau Street Sunday School Societies, New Orleans:

I come once more to tell you something of these people who are yet in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity, and love not the Lord Jesus. How happy I would be this morning to tell you that the heathen around us knew God, and believed that Christ was all in all, and a Savior from all sin.

The name of Jesus is precious to you all, and you know what it is to love him and be loved by him, and you know he ever lives to plead with the Father for all his disciples. But it is different with the heathen who know not that the Lord Jesus suffered on the cross to redeem them, and that he is now praying: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." He is ever praying God's blessing, and they know it not.

O what blessed privileges you have in Christian homes, with the blessed Bible before you, and what joy it should give you to know that our heavenly Father smiles upon you for Jesus' sake, and that he is ever willing to receive every offering of prayer and praise! But these people are groping their way in darkness, and in the valley and shadow of death. They almost fear to move to the right or to the left, lest they might be troubled with some evil spirit, which they believe to be ever on the alert to do them evil. The missionary endeavors to lead them to Jesus, that their minds may be fixed on him, and that they may possess that peace which passeth all understanding. But the heathen around us seem as so many dry bones—very dry—and none but the blessed Spirit of God can breathe the breath of life into them! They love darkness, and hate the truth and the light.

Just at this time there are great apprehensions of a short crop of rice. Already sounds of trouble among the people are coming to us, and we hear the officials are in great fear. They are going daily to their temples, praying and beseeching their gods to send rain. This has been the case in Shanghai for several weeks, and yet no answer to their prayers. No rain comes, and they (the officials) threaten to punish the idols in some way unless they send rain at once. The magistrate of this city (Shanghai) goes to the main temple daily, from six in the morning until eleven o'clock. The great idol of baked mud is brought out and placed in the hot sun, and then the magistrate takes his seat by the side of him. There they sit, one a living man, and the other an idol of mud and straw, which they have to handle very carefully, lest he fall to pieces. There are three entrances to this temple, and they have been closed to the people, so that they might not witness the ridiculous, fatuitous scene of a living man with a living soul seated by the side of an idol of mud, which has neither soul nor power nor life. Great numbers of the Chinese laugh at the stupidity of these officials, and say: "Why do they go at six in the morning, and pretend to be suffering under the burning rays of an August sun, when at that hour there is scarcely any heat from the sun?" At eleven o'clock, when the heat of the sun is beginning to be felt, he ceases his arduous labors, and returns to his office under the wondering gaze of the people, who throng the street to see him as he passes. The great, hideous-looking idol, the terror of all the children, is placed in the burning sun, stripped of his fine embroidered garments and with head bare. This is to teach him that by not sending rain the people are suffering from the intense heat of the sun, and they hope this mode of punishment will constrain him to send rain and relieve the sufferings of the people; but no rain comes. Some of the officials have erected a platform, upon which they sit, near this large temple. They have also an empty earthen jar brought and placed under the eaves of a small shed, and there they pray the dragon god to be so good as to fill but half the jar with rain from heaven; but no rain comes. These foolish officials go so far as to threaten the gods with punishment unless rain comes. Priests of the Taoist belief, who are rationalists, and who also worship dumb idols, are brought near these officials, and their heads are laid bare to the sun as a punishment for their want of success in beseeching the gods. One official in Soochow went so far as to vow that he would not eat or drink until his gods should pour out rain. The result was that he died of starvation.

My dear young friends, I could give you many more instances of the superstition and idolatry of these people, who know not the true God—the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. O that they could only know this wonder of wonders which brought Jesus from heaven to earth, and caused him to take upon himself the form of man. It was love, wondrous love, which caused him to lay aside his glory and power and suffer death; but these poor, deluded heathen know it not. He became poor that he might make many rich, and he hath said: "Peace I leave with you;" but the millions of pagan China know it not.

Will you not then pray sincerely, each day, one short prayer for the conversion of these degraded people, that they may know the Lord Jesus as their Savior? I know you will do this if you love the Lord Jesus. Pray also for the missionary and his family, whose lot is cast among a heathen people, who neither fear nor love God. I know the Lord will bless you, and will continue to establish you in the faith, and enable you to go with us to the throne of grace. We need your prayers, and we feel assured the Lord will hear and answer the prayers of all his people. O pray for us, for the longer we labor among the heathen the weaker we feel ourselves to be without divine aid! Our strength is in the Lord, and in him we trust. I pray the Lord to help and strengthen your faith, and make you truly a blessing to thousands who know not God.

I am, as ever, your friend and brother in Christ our Lord,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, August 30, 1873.

The Skylark.

The attachment of skylarks to their young is very great, and this has been seen to exhibit itself in a remarkable manner, in which the purpose of its singularly long claw has been clearly shown.

The nest being placed on the open ground—often pasture, or in a field of moving grass—it is very liable to be disturbed; many, therefore, are the instances of the bird's tender solicitude either for the young or for its eggs, one of which I will give from Mr. Jesse. "In case of alarm," he says, "either by cattle grazing near the nest, or by the approach of the mower, the parent birds remove their eggs, by means of their long claws, to a place of greater security, and this I have observed to be effected in a very short space of time." He says that when one of his mowers first told him of this fact he could scarcely believe it, but that he afterward saw it himself, and that he regarded it only as another proof of the affection which these birds show their offspring. Instances are also on record of larks removing their young by carrying them on their backs; in one case the young were thus removed from a place of danger into a field of standing corn. But however successful the poor birds may be in removing their eggs, they are not always so with regard to their young, as Mr. Yarrell relates. An instance came under his notice in which the little fledgling was too heavy for the parent to carry, and, being dropped from a height of about thirty feet, was killed in the fall.

Of all captive birds none grieves me more than the skylark. Its impulse is to soar, which is impossible in the narrow space of a cage; and in this unhappy condition, when seized by the impulse of song, he flings himself upward, and is dashed down again by his cruel barriers. For this reason the top of the lark's cage is always bedded with green baize to prevent his injuring himself. In the freedom of nature he is the joyous minstrel of liberty and love, carrying upward, and sending down from above, his buoyant song, which seems to fall down through the golden sunshine like a flood of sparkling melody.

I am not aware of the height to which the lark soars, but it must be very great, as he becomes diminished to a mere speck, almost invisible in the blaze of light. Yet, high as he may soar, he never loses the consciousness of the little mate and the nestlings below; but their first cry of danger or anxiety, though the cry may be scarcely audible to the human ear, thrills upaloft to the singer, and he comes down with a direct, arrow-like flight, while otherwise his descent is more leisurely, and said by some to be in the direct spiral line of his ascent.—M. Howitt.

WHERE IS YOUR LANTERN?—Young Harry was sent on an errand one evening in early winter. After giving him his message his mother said:

"Be sure you take the lantern with you, Harry."

"Bother the lantern," answered the boy, gruffly and disrespectfully; and he started, muttering to himself: "What do I want with a lantern? I guess I know the way well enough!"

Very soon Master Harry, in crossing the street, stumbled into a hole which had been made by a recent rain. By this fall he knocked the flesh from his shin-bone and covered his clothing with mud.

On his way back he forgot the fence had fallen in at the edge of the ravine. As he groped his way along the bank he fell over, and went sprawling to the bottom of the ravine.

With much ado, and after many bruisings, he got into the road once more; but when he finally reached his mother's door he looked more like a scarecrow than a living boy.

The lantern would have saved him from all this; wasn't he a foolish fellow not to take it?

But what shall be said of those boys and girls who know the Bible to be the only lamp which can guide their feet safely through the paths of life to their home in heaven, and yet refuse to carry it? Are they not still more foolish? Are they not likely to suffer even more than the boy? You know they are. Take the Bible, therefore, for your life-lantern, and let it be a lamp unto your feet and light unto your path.

THE DOG AND THE SPARE-RIB.—A mastiff crossing a bridge, and bearing in his mouth a piece of meat, suddenly swallowed the meat. He immediately observed that the shadow of the aforesaid meat in the water had disappeared.

Such is optics.

Moral.—We learn from this fable that life is but a shadow.—Sarsfield Young, in Lippincott's Magazine.

ALL our illuminations and religious fervors turn into illusion, unless we really and constantly practice dying to ourselves.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Cleaning Feathers.

A correspondent of an exchange says:

How shall we renovate old feathers, and so clean old ticks? This inquiry I have seen in the paper. My way is this: In June, when the weather portends a heavy shower of rain, I lay the feather tick on the lawn or clean grass, and smooth it over evenly. One-half hour's heavy rain will clean one side of a badly-soiled tick, unless there are grease-spots. In this case I take a pail of hot suds, pour it on the spots, brush them, and let the rain rinse it out. I then turn it over and serve the other side the same. If the shower be of short duration I put the bed out in the next rain.

To dry the bed lay up the tick on slat-work, clean rails or something of the kind. If the feathers are much wet, so much the better. When drying shake up, beat with light rods; pick up lumps if there be any. When the bed is dry the tick will be clean, and the feathers almost as good as new. Some of our beds have been used thirty years. I have laid them in rain every summer; they are now clean and good. It takes but a short time to dry the bed, but when it is dry to appearance it is not fit to sleep on, but should be laid on an empty bedstead a month or more, with the windows up.

This caution may be unnecessary, as no wise heads sleep on feather-beds in summer. As for the labor, I would rather clean five beds in rain than one in the manner generally recommended—by pouring the feathers from the tick on a sheet in an empty room (when there is no empty room in the house,) washing the tick, stirring up the feathers thoroughly, returning to the tick, and laying in the sun for several days, turning and beating up often.—Household.

SHEEP.—Although it has been often enough said, still we repeat it: The cheapest renovator for worn-out land is—sheep. They are so cheap that every farmer can buy some to begin with. We have known a farm consisting of the very poorest worn-out land that, in the course of three years, has been able to produce thirty-five bushels of corn to the acre. We know that many have tried and failed, but the fault was their own. Sheep, as well as any other stock, will not thrive without proper attention is paid them. They must not be turned out in the woods to take care of themselves. If such is done their manure, the principal produce, is lost and the flock exposed to destruction by dogs, thieves and the inclemency of the weather. Where sheep are kept they must be confined inside the field and not all the time on the same, but be shifted from one to another. They must be penned at night, both for protection as well as the accumulation of their manure and urine. Their pen must be movable and renewed every week. Thus the poorest soil is renovated and made fertile. In winter they must have some little corn and a shelter for bad weather. Also occasionally some salt. There is no animal that so richly and promptly compensates the farmer for his outlay and trouble. The first lamb returns the capital invested. Think of this.

SWARMING BEES.—A bee-keeper gives the following plan to prevent a swarm of bees from getting far away from the hive, with the statement that after ten years' experience he has never known it to fail once:

As soon as they show the first symptoms of swarming stop up most of the outlets of the hive, so as to force them to be a considerable time coming out. The swarm being made up in part of young bees, many of whom cannot fly well, and as nothing can be done by the swarm until all are out, they fly about in the air; by prolonging their exit the feeble ones become tired, and, finding their plans frustrated, they alight to rearrange their journey. If they can leave the old hive all at once they care very little about all ghting.—Journal of the Farm.

PEAS.—The earliest of all garden peas is Laxton's Harbinger, a blue pea produced by hybridizing the Dillistone's Early with the Alpine. In England it has been sown on the twenty-third of February, its first flowers appeared on the ninth of May, and its fruit was fit for use on the sixth of June. This pea has been awarded a first-class certificate by a fruit committee of the Royal Horticultural Society. The largest of all peas known is Laxton's Superlative. Its pod is seven inches long, and contains from seven to nine peas of the largest size, of a pale green color. Its stem is stout, and grows to the height of seven to eight feet.

OXEN.—A good ox should have a long, lean face and bright hazel eyes, which show capability of receiving instruction and a disposition to obey it. Large nostrils denote the capability of the ox to work on a hot day. Very large horns at the base denote laziness. Full breast, straight back, wide ribs—by which is meant the ribs that round out nearly as wide as the hip-bones—and wide gambril are evidences of strength. Straight knees, broad toes pointing straight forward, show an ox can travel on a hard road or pavement. They should be well matched, especially in disposition and speed.

BONE MEAL FOR COWS.—Hon. H. Lewis, to whom was referred the inquiry about cows eating rubbish, replied that bone meal was needed. It might be fed to them in small quantities, like salt, or if two hundred pounds per acre should be spread on the pasture it would furnish the cows with bone meal for a life-time.

TO REMOVE STAINS FROM MARBLE.—Take two parts of common soda, one part of pumice-stone, and one of finely-powdered chalk; sift it through a fine sieve, and mix it with water; then rub it well over the marble, and the stains will be removed. Wash the marble afterward with soap and water.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
JACKSON, LOUISIANA.

THE NEXT TERM OF THIS VENERABLE INSTITUTION OPENS ON FIRST MONDAY IN OCTOBER, 1873.

FACULTY.

REV. C. G. ANDREWS, A. M., President, and Professor of Mental and Moral Science, Economy and International Law.
REV. A. B. HOLCOMBE, A. M., Professor of Mathematics and Adjunct Professor of Science.
G. H. WILEY, A. M., Professor of Ancient and Modern Languages.
T. S. JONES, M. D., Professor of Natural Science.
REV. R. D. NORSWORTHY, A. M., Principal of the Preparatory Department.

CHARGES.

Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in College.....
Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in Preparatory Department.....
Contingent expenses.....

A matriculation fee of $5 must be paid on entering any regular college class. One-half must be paid when the student enters; the other half on the beginning of the second term.

BOARD.

Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel, can be had in the best families for $2 per Day-boarding with the same families, $14 per month. Rooms provided in the dormitories. Board to be paid in advance at least one month.

LOCATION.

This institution is located in the lovely village of Jackson, about twelve miles from Bayou Sara, a grove of pine, magnolia, oak and beech. The location is remarkable for its beautiful wood, bland and delightful atmosphere, its pure water, its unrivaled healthfulness, and its cultivated society.

WHEN FOUNDED.

The college was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and ceded to the Methodist Church South in 1845.

ALUMNI.

Its Alumni numbers two hundred and three, and they are to be found in the most honorable and useful stations in the land.

APPARATUS AND CABINET.

The college possesses a valuable set of Philosophical, Astronomical and Chemical Apparatus, also a well-selected Mineralogical and Geological Cabinet. The apparatus includes a Theodolite, Sextant, Compass, Chronometer, Atwood's Machine, Whirling Tables, Electrical Machine, Air Pump, various combinations of the Mechanical Powers, Batteries, Chemical Tests, etc., sufficient for a full and extended course of observations and experiments. Steps have been taken by the Board of Trustees to put these in thorough repair.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

There are two regular Literary Societies connected with the institution. These are of great value to young men acquiring a liberal education—improving them in the art of public speaking, training them in some degree familiar with the proceedings of deliberative bodies, and in cultivating systematic business habits. Each Society has a convenient hall and a well-selected Library—about one thousand six hundred volumes each, which, added to the College Library of two thousand volumes, make about five thousand volumes in the college.

BUILDINGS.

The Trustees are determined to continue the repairs on the buildings till completed. The Main Center Building is a noble specimen of architectural beauty and adaptation to the purposes of education. The wings, built of solid brick, present each a front of two hundred feet, with upper and lower galleries the entire length, supported by Tuscan columns, and with the center making in the whole a continuous front of seven hundred feet.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

In the Preparatory Department students are fitted for regular college classes, or may obtain a thorough English or commercial education.
ITS FACULTY are men of experience and success in teaching.

WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE,
BROOKHAVEN, MISSISSIPPI,

ON THE NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON AND GREAT NORTHERN RAILROAD, one hundred and twenty-eight miles from New Orleans, will reopen on the TWENTY-FIRST OF SEPTEMBER NEXT.
The health is good, discipline firm but parental, instruction thorough, and economy in every department. The expenses are as low as the advantages given will allow.
The Director of the Music Department, Prof. EICHARDT, is unexcelled. Madame JULIUS, a highly accomplished Parisian lady, has charge of French and the ornamental branches.
During the past term there were Thirteen in the Faculty, and Two Hundred and One pupils in attendance, over one hundred of whom boarded in the college.
All the branches of a thorough education are taught, including the Languages, ancient and modern, and also the higher mathematics.
Particular attention is paid to Spelling, Writing, Reading and Composition; also to the manners and morals of the pupils.

EAST MISSISSIPPI
FEMALE COLLEGE.
A Chartered Literary Institution under the Auspices of the M. E. Church South.
Located at Meridian, Mississippi.
ANNOUNCEMENT.
The ninth Term of 1873-4 will open on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873. It will be divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. Comfortable conveniences for boarding in the college building will be furnished and supervised by the president. The Board of Trustees claim to have made ample arrangements for the Literary, Scientific, Ornamental and Musical departments of the college, by the election of competent and experienced teachers for the various departments, and that facilities for thorough and liberal education in the East Mississippi Female College may no more than be equaled by the best of other similar institutions. Our college is recommended to public consideration with candor and with confidence of a successful career. We hope to see its interests and influence widen and deepen, under continued and steady prosperity, and it is apprehended that young ladies who now place their names upon the roll of this institution will be pleased in coming years by recognizing in their Alma Mater a living and honored success of educational enterprise.
BOARDING.
Boarders engaged for the whole term will be charged $120, $40 of which must be paid at the opening of each session.
Those engaged for one session will be charged $80, $60 of which must be paid at the beginning of the session. Those engaged for a shorter or an indefinite time will be charged $20 per month, to be paid quarterly in advance.
Extra charges will be made for washing and lights. Each boarder must furnish two sheets, one blanket and two towels. Especial printed regulations will be given each boarder, giving her directions and restrictions respecting their family and social relations and practices.
In all cases of sickness, resulting in the removal of boarders from the college, advance payments will be promptly refunded. No pains will be spared to render each boarder comfortable and happy. Their treatment will be parental, and influences of strict propriety and refinement will be continually brought to bear upon all their habits.
Our college is in its incipiency. The enterprise has been projected by the Mississippi Conference as meeting a growing demand for educational facilities in east Mississippi. In the judgment of the church and Conference, Meridian is the proper place for the institution. The location is healthy, access is easy, society is of the right type, and almost every consideration strengthens the judgment of the board and Conference in locating the college at this place. Since this institution is under the supervision of the church there is no hesitancy in inviting earnest co-operation on the part of the ministry in the surrounding country. Our appeal is earnest. We propose to place the standard of instruction high, that they who graduate here may prove themselves worthy of honors conferred, and thereby honor themselves, the college and the world. Address

EMORY AND HENRY COLLEGE,
WASHINGTON COUNTY, VA.
On the Eleventh of September our scholastic year begins, and continues forty consecutive weeks. It is divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. Comfortable conveniences for boarding in the college building will be furnished and supervised by the president. The Board of Trustees claim to have made ample arrangements for the Literary, Scientific, Ornamental and Musical departments of the college, by the election of competent and experienced teachers for the various departments, and that facilities for thorough and liberal education in the East Mississippi Female College may no more than be equaled by the best of other similar institutions. Our college is recommended to public consideration with candor and with confidence of a successful career. We hope to see its interests and influence widen and deepen, under continued and steady prosperity, and it is apprehended that young ladies who now place their names upon the roll of this institution will be pleased in coming years by recognizing in their Alma Mater a living and honored success of educational enterprise.
January 29, 1874. Students can enter at any time they should, if possible begin with the session. The entire expenses for the forty weeks, including board, tuition, fuel, room-rent, and contingent fees, need not exceed $200. Other rates, so remarkably low considering the advantages here offered, must commend the institution to the favor of those seeking thorough collegiate training. Before selecting your school, call any of those knowing the college, or one of our Alumni and old students, prominent in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Professors of the University of Virginia, who have authorized this reference, or send directly to the undersigned for a catalogue or for any information desired.

I finally tried your preparation—KRESS FEVER TONIC. One bottle completely broke up the malady, and I am now perfectly well. I can testify that your medicine does all you claim for it; and it is only due to you that this acknowledgment should be made, especially as so many worthless chill medicines are now offered."

SWAIM'S
CELEBRATED
PANACEA
HAS LONG ATTRACTED THE NOtice of the most eminent physicians by its great efficacy in curing what were pronounced incurable cases of disease, where the patients have been almost destroyed by SCROFULA, etc., and Prof. Valentine Mott, of the New York University; Profs. Gibson, Dewees and Chapman, of Philadelphia, and many other physicians of celebrity, have over their own signatures, letters recommending it and certifying to its great merits. It has been occasionally advertised, and thousands of families throughout the United States recommend and use it. The Laboratory is under the direction of Dr. FRANKLIN STEWART, who has devoted his attention and skill in its careful preparation during the past twenty-five years, and not a bottle put up that is not worth many times its cost to the patient. It is perfectly safe for the most diseased and debilitated, and in all cases where the Blood is not purest should be used freely.
Prepared only at SWAIM'S LABORATORY, 113 South Seventh street, below Chestnut, Philadelphia

FROM A RECENT ANALYSIS BY Prof. W. O. Atwater, of Yale College, the following table will show the chemical composition of YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN:

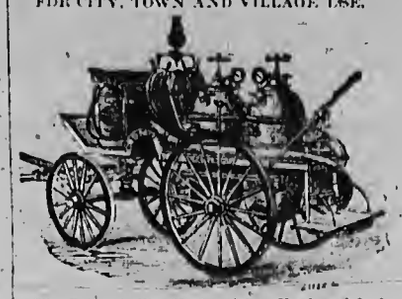
| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Albuminoids... | 12.15 | Sugar | 13.66 |
| Gum | 5.21 | Starch | 5.62 |
| Fat | 3.39 | Cellulose | 2.85 |
| Ash | 2.42 | | |



It will be seen that the Albuminoids (albumen, gluten, casein, etc.) constitute nearly fourteen per cent. "These," says Youmans, "are the tissue-forming principles—the true elements of nutrition."
It is particularly valuable to all requiring a highly nutritious food at the same time easily assimilated diet, and hence is used as an article of daily consumption in climates which occasion rapid waste of the system. "Almost all Asiatics, Africans and (aboriginal) Americans use it as their chief nutriment." Louis Figuier, in his work on the Vegetable World.
In hermetically-sealed YARMOUTH SUGAR CORN all the nutritive qualities of the grain are preserved. The grains are cut from the ear and placed in tin canisters with the rich juice or milk, which results from it, and is then sealed air-tight and then canister subjected to a steam bath, which coagulates the albumen. In this condition it will keep for years. How to secure for this that all the nutritive properties of the grain are preserved, and the most nourishing article of food in the domain of nature, is within the reach of all.

New Orleans Markets.

From the New Orleans Price Current.

The river is 12 feet 9 inches below high-water mark.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the tenth instant:

|---|---|
| Louisiana and Mississippi | [illegible] |
| Lake | 3 |
| Tennessee | 1,250 |
| Mobile | 629 |
| Florida | 31 |
| Texas | 415 |
| Total | 10,848 |

On Saturday the sales were confined to 500 bales. Prices were depressed not only by a slack demand, but also by a decline at New York of 1/16c. in spots and 1/64@1/32c. in futures. Strict low middling sold at 18c., strict low middling to middling at 18@18 1/16c., and strict middling at 18 1/16@18 1/4c. On Monday, with a decline at New York of 1/8c. in spots and of about 1/4c. in futures, buyers stood aloof, or came forward with much lower offers, and the business was confined to 625 bales, at a further irregular decline of 1/16@1/8c., the falling off later in the day being much greater than during the morning. Good ordinary sold at 16c., strict good ordinary at 16 1/4c., strict low middling to middling at 18@18 1/16c., middling at 17 7/8@18c., strict middling at 18 1/16c., and good middling at 19c. These irregular prices indicate the prevailing unsteadiness. On Tuesday the market opened with a moderate inquiry from buyers, mostly at figures much below the views of factors, and the business during the morning was of limited extent, but later in the day, under the influence of a further decline at New York and more copious receipts, the latter were compelled to give way, and 2,000 bales changed hands at irregular prices, showing a decline of 1/8@1/4c., closing at a net falling off of 1/16@1/8c. Strict good ordinary sold at 15 7/8@16c., strict good ordinary to low middling at 16@16 1/8c., low middling at 16 1/4, 16 1/8@16 3/8c., strict low middling at 16 3/4, 16 7/8@17c., and middling at 17 1/4c.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 3,100 bales, against 5,200 for the corresponding time last week and 4,200 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 50,889 bales, against 97,710 bales to the same date last year, and the decrease in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 138,460 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is a decrease of 21,929 to Great Britain, of 14,713 to France and an increase of 450 to other foreign ports. We quote:

|---|---|
| Good ordinary | 15 1/2 @ 15 3/4 |
| Strict good ordinary | 15 3/4 @ 16 |
| Low middling | 16 1/4 @ 16 1/2 |
| Strict low middling | 16 3/4 @ 17 |

SUGAR.—There were further arrivals of 6 hhds. of the new crop on Tuesday. This is the second lot received. They are not yet sold. The first lot was received on the eighth instant. There is little or nothing doing in the old stock on hand. A few hhds. yellow clarified sold at 11 3/4c. ℔ lb. Stock in the sheds, 66 hhds.

MOLASSES.—On Monday 4 bbls. new were received and sold at 85c. ℔ gallon. This was the second lot received this season. The first came on the eighth instant. On Tuesday 2 bbls. and 21 half bbls. new were received and sold on private terms. There is no demand for the old stock on hand.

CORN.—Is in light supply and moderate demand. On Saturday only 350 sacks yellow and white sold at 80c. ℔ bushel. On Monday 3,400 sacks sold at 80c. for yellow, white mixed and white. On Tuesday there were no receipts, and fully 1000 sacks white sold at 80c. ℔ bushel.

OATS.—The supply is light and the demand is moderate. On Saturday only 100 sacks sold at 59c. On Monday 515 sacks sold at 58c. for light, and 60c. for choice, in store and on the landing. On Tuesday 800 sacks sold at 57@60c., in store and on the landing.

BRAN.—No sales on the landing to note. The supply is light, with a moderate demand. On Saturday no sales were reported. On Monday 700 sacks in store sold at $1.10 ℔ 100 lbs., showing a reduction of 5c. ℔ 100 lbs. On Tuesday there was little or none on the landing, and 300 sacks sold in store at $1.15 ℔ 100 lbs.

PORK.—The market is very dull, and sales are made only on concessions in prices. Holders ask $16.50 ℔ bbl. for mess, but accept lower prices; 200 bbls. mess sold on Tuesday, in lots, on private terms, and 25 at $16.50 ℔ bbl. It is retailing at $17@17.50 ℔ bbl.

HAMS.—Choice and fresh sugar-cured are becoming scarce and are in request, but other kinds are dull. Choice sugar-cured are quoted at 14@15c.; ordinary brands at 12 1/2@13 1/2c. ℔ lb.

DRY SALT MEAT.—Shoulders continue scarce. They command 9c. ℔ lb. in round lots, and 9 1/2c. retail. The stock on hand is very small, but the demand is only at retail.

MONETARY.

Gold opened at New York on Tuesday at 108 1/4 and closed at 109 1/4. In certified checks sales have been reported at 4@5 per cent. over currency rates.

Special Notices.

PREACHERS of the third year, in the Alabama Conference, will please meet the committee of examination in Selma, December 1, at half-past seven o'clock P. M.

Bro. Rush will examine on Watson's Institutes, part 2, and on the Discipline and Manual of the Discipline.

Bro. Ellis will examine on Rivers' Mental Philosophy, and on Wesley's Sermons, Volume 3.

The chairman will examine on Coppee's Logic, and on Edgar's Variations of Popery.

Each member of the committee will examine the class on the Bible in reference to the life of Christ.

The class will please read all the books of reference, and be prompt to meet the committee at the time appointed. D. M. HENDRIX,

Chairman Committee of Third Year.

Appointments for Quarterly Meetings.

NOTICE.—The Publishing Committee of the ADVOCATE gave it as their opinion that the insertion of the notices of Quarterly Conferences once or twice was sufficient, and, as the space of the paper is valuable, they passed a resolution recommending that they "be not inserted more than once or twice." Our friends who are interested in these appointments will take due notice thereof, as we propose to be governed by the resolution in future.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Bishop Cummins, of Kentucky, has written a letter vindicating his own conduct and that of the Dean of Canterbury in the matter of their communion in Presbyterian churches. He says:

"There is nothing in the ecclesiastical order or the discipline of the Church of England, or of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this country, forbidding such an act of intercommunion among Christian people who are one in faith and love, one in Christ, the great head. As far as I know, the liberal Episcopalians of New York rejoice in this action of the Dean of Canterbury, and thank God for it. When the Episcopal Church of England and the United States has been able to clear herself, which may God in his infinite mercy grant, of the deadly evil of ritualism, whose last development is the revival of the confessional, then and not till then may she become a haven of rest to maimed souls who would rejoice to see her the common center and bond of organic unity to all Protestant Christendom."

CALVERT, TEXAS, Oct. 15.—To James Brenan: The fever here is worse than at Shreveport. Seven per cent. of our population is dead.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The Free Religionists were addressed to-night, in Cooper Institute, by Mr. Parton, who invelghed against the church and ministers being exempt from taxation, saying they constituted an American paradise of dead-heads.

F. E. Abbott made remarks against naval chaplains, reading the Bible in schools, national thanksgivings and oaths in courts. At the opening of the meeting a man desired the speakers to refrain from using the word "God," as at the previous meeting so many gods were alluded to that it was difficult to understand the speaker.

SELMA, Oct. 16.—No yellow fever. The Selma Exposition have postponed their fair to November 25, on account of the epidemic prevailing at numerous points.

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 16.—There were two fever deaths in the last twenty-four hours. The Board of Health says the disease is epidemic, but in a mild form. Only twenty-two deaths from September 19 to date.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—A Democratic Legislature for Ohio is conceded.

Allen's election is highly probable. Allen entered the canvass as a pure Democrat, with no entangling alliances.

The Press of Philadelphia estimates Gordon's majority for supreme judge at eighteen thousand.

ATLANTA, Oct. 17.—Rev. W. J. Parks, a well-known minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at his home, in Oxford, Georgia, last night, of congestion of the lungs.

SHREVEPORT, Oct. 18.—Total interments for the week ending to-night were fifty-nine, against seventy-two for the week previous; of these twenty-one were blacks, against twenty-three for the previous week.

Total interments since the outbreak, six hundred and fifty-eight, of whom one hundred and four were colored.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 18.—The Independent or Old School Presbyterian Synod of Missouri met here yesterday. This is the synod which in 1861 seceded from the Northern General Assembly, to which it then belonged, and since then it has been independent of all higher bodies. The most interesting question before the synod was the proposition to unite with the Southern and Reformed churches. A lengthy discussion was had on the subject, Rev. Dr. Brooks, of St. Louis, was the most prominent opponent of the proposition.

A vote was finally reached late last night, and resulted in 47 yeas to 32 nays.

Dr. Brooks then asked the thirty-two opponents of the union to meet in his church this morning to determine what further action shall be taken. It is believed they will secede and organize a new synod.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The sixteenth annual meeting of the National Local Preachers' Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church began its session at Cambridge, New York, on Saturday. Delegates were present from various States, also Bishops Simpson, Janes and Campbell.

President T. D. McFarland delivered an address of welcome. At the evening session reports from the different Conferences were received.

This being the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Philip Embury, the first Methodist preacher in America, a monument will be dedicated to his memory at Cambridge to-day.

GALVESTON, Oct. 20.—Yellow fever reported in Columbus; five deaths since Sunday morning; people are flying.

The fever has appeared at Bryan. One death in twenty-four hours.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Warrants were issued for the arrest of ninety counterfeiters, and those implicated in east Tennessee and North Carolina. The implicated parties include lawyers, doctors, justices of the peace, postmasters, United States deputy marshals, clerks of courts and numerous merchants. The counterfeiting area embraced twelve hundred miles.

SHREVEPORT, Oct. 21.—Another frost this morning. Very little change in the epidemic in the city proper, comparatively, except few new cases are reported in the vicinity.

The latest advices from Marshall represent the fever to be increasing. Four deaths and nine new cases in the twenty-four hours ending at four P. M.

There were but three interments during the past twenty-four hours.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 21.—The reports to noon to-day are not favorable. There were twenty-four deaths from yellow fever, and six from other causes.

It is requested by the Board of Health that absent citizens do not return until notified by them.

It is impossible to get anything reliable about the disease. New cases are occurring in isolated districts, and frosts seem to have little effect in checking the disease.

MONTGOMERY, October 21.—There were three fever deaths here to-day.

FOREIGN.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—The correspondence between the Pope and Emperor William is officially published. The Pope writes, August 7, that the measures of his majesty's government aim at the destruction of Catholicism.

He is unable to discover the reason for such severity, being informed and believing that the Emperor is averse to the increase or continuance of this harsh policy.

He points out that measures injurious to the Christian religion only tend to undermine the throne. He speaks frankly, as truthfulness to all is his duty, and all baptized, even non-Catholics, belong in a certain sense to him.

He cherishes the conviction that the Emperor will adopt the necessary measures, and concludes by praying God to be merciful to the Emperor and himself.

The German Emperor replies, September 3, rejoicing at the opportunity to correct the errors relating to German affairs. If the Pope was truthfully informed he would be aware that the government cannot act against the approval of the sovereign.

The Emperor deeply regrets that a portion of his Catholic subjects (priests) have organized a party which is engaged in intrigue against the State, disturbing religious peace to an extent to open revolt against the existing laws. He points to Inllcations of similar movements in other parts of Europe and in American, and declares that he will maintain order and law so long as God enables him to do so, even against the servants of a church which he supposed acknowledge obedience to similar authority as a commandment of God. This doctrine of obedience, however, he regrets to see so many priests in Prussia disown. He expresses a hope that, now the Pope has been informed of the truth, he will use his authority to terminate the agitation which he declares before God has no connection with religion or truth. He takes exception to the Pope's remark about non-Catholics, and, concluding, says a difference of belief, however, should not prevent our living in peace.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The special dispatch to the London Times, reporting the agreement between Count de Chambord and the monarchical parties in the Assembly, gives the following additional points of the programme to be proclaimed at the opening of the session: The eligibility of all persons to civil employment, universal suffrage, a reasonable liberty of the press, and the tricolor to be maintained as the flag of France. This last point, however, is open to mutual concessions.

The Times dispatch also says the Assembly is called to meet not later than the twenty-seventh.

ROME, Oct. 20.—The committee of liquidation of the ecclesiastical property, appointed under the law for the abolition of religious corporations, today took possession of six convents. The rectors read protests, which the committee accepted, and then handed to each inmate a certificate for his future income. The United States and Portuguese consuls also protested against the seizure of certain portions of the Franciscan Convent, on the ground that they were the property of citizens of their respective countries.

The general of the Society of Jesuits was to-day officially notified by the government that the order must immediately vacate the premises now occupied by them in this city.

VIENNA, Oct. 20.—Bismarck and the Emperor are in close conference. A change of cabinet is announced; Bismarck probably reserving the presidency of the ministry, vice Von Roon.

Madame Pere Hyacinthe has a son.

EDINBURG, October 20.—Rev. Dr. Candlish, the famous Scotch preacher, is dead.

YELLOW FEVER ON RED RIVER.—The Coushatta (Bossier parish) Reporter of the twenty-fourth ultimo reports no yellow fever at that place, but ten deaths at Brownsville, a few miles distant. Among the victims are included Messrs. G. H. Gallapsy, W. O. Garrison, T. W. Brown and Mrs. Bouds. The town is now almost deserted.

Brownsville is better known as Tally Brown's Landing. We heard rumors for a number of days past of yellow fever raging there, contracted off the Carrie A. Thorn on her trip down, but the above is the first authentic information that we have seen.—Shreveport Times.

IF A MAN is free and exalted, in proportion as he is governed by enlightened reason and a pure conscience, so is he supremely blessed who cheerfully submits to be governed by the infinite reason and holiness of God.

From the Work.

MR. EDITOR: I have just concluded a meeting of ten days' duration at Pine Grove, which resulted in twenty-three accessions to the church and about twenty-eight conversions.—Bros. Kimball, Miller and Medlock, of the itinerant ranks, and Bro. Wiley, local, rendered valuable assistance. The church was greatly revived. How thankful my heart feels. H. O. WHITE.

MINDEN, La., October 16, 1873.

BROOKHAVEN, MISSISSIPPI.—Mr. Editor: We have just closed a meeting at Amite City, Louisiana. There were twenty-one accessions to the church. We had to close the meeting just at the time when the whole community became interested on the subject of religion. We went from there to the Greensburg circuit; held a quarterly meeting; good time; three gentlemen joined the church. Bro. Bradford, the preacher in charge, is doing a good work. A goodly number have been added to the church this year. Yours respectfully,

A. B. NICHOLSON.

OCTOBER 14, 1873.

EAST FELICIANA CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The churches in this part of the country are being greatly blessed. While the worms destroy and disease threatens, and portentous clouds gather about our temporal sky, breezes from heaven are blowing back the mists and fogs from our spiritual horizon, and we are enjoying such a season of sunshine as we have not had since the war. The churches in our district, with but few exceptions, are enjoying seasons of refreshing; and gracious seasons they are. Hundreds are being converted and added to the church. Twenty have united with the societies on this (East Feliciana) circuit within the past month, and two other meetings are to be protracted, at which we expect to gather in many more. Your column, "From the Work," is full of cheering reports. The glory of Israel is returning; and shall not her redeemed millions rejoice? WILL. H. LEITH.

JACKSON, La., October 3, 1873.

SALEM CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: I write in honor of the Master, and to encourage the faithful. We have held four protracted meetings this year. The one at Salem, commencing on Saturday before the first Sabbath in September, continued eleven days. As my health failed, Bro. J. H. Lockhart, my helper, took charge and conducted it efficiently to its close. It resulted in the addition of fourteen members, all converted.

At the same time we had a meeting at Pearce chapel, conducted by Rev. William Capps; and A. J. Green. It continued nine days, and was a most remarkable meeting, resulting in some fifty conversions and additions to the church, embracing in its fold the children of the Sunday school of twelve years of age, and the gray-headed sire of threescore and ten. The good work continues. The church is all right.

There was also a meeting at Union, embracing the third Sabbath in September, which protracted itself for nine days, with fifteen conversions—all added to the church—and the church greatly revived.

The last meeting was at Chapel Hill. It continued four days. There were five additions to our membership. The additions in the aggregate, seventy-four. Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM B. NEAL.

OCTOBER 15, 1873.

BUTLER CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The Choctaw camp meeting has just closed. The Lord was with us in the very commencement, and graciously baptized the church. The demonstrations of the Spirit were so powerful that some of the vilest sinners were at the altar crying for mercy. The weather was unfavorable for a bush arbor, covered wagons, etc.; but it only seemed to increase the interest. When it would rain the people would gather in the tents and continue the services. I was thoroughly convinced that good soldiers of the cross will not give up for trifles, but ever press onward to victory. The sentiment of the church seemed to be, "Nearer, my God, to thee," and the result was about twenty-six conversions and twenty-three accessions to the church. I thank God for camp meetings. Many of the old veterans date their conversion back to camp meetings. The Lord has blessed Butler circuit this year. My books show, up to the present, forty-three received into full connection. Adults baptized, twenty-five. Infants baptized, forty-five. Received by certificate, ten. I have several protracted meetings yet to hold before Conference. We pray the Lord to continue his glorious work among us.

D. J. WRIGHT.

OCTOBER 4, 1873.

LOUISVILLE CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: It is a pleasure to me to communicate good news to the ADVOCATE. God has blessed my labors this year on the Louisville circuit, and I feel encouraged to continue my labors for the Master. Up to the third of October I had made no protracted efforts, yet there were twenty-two accessions to the church and ten conversions. My camp meeting commenced on the third of October, and as we came together the Lord came with us, and we had a glorious manifestation of his love in the outpouring of his Spirit. Sinners were convicted, mourners converted, backsliders reclaimed and the church powerfully revived. These camp meetings are like waves of the sea that continually widen. The good will never be fully known until God summons us to the great judgment. One old brother, seeing one tent alive with the shouts of those happy in the love of Christ, said it reminded him of camp meeting in Tennessee. I baptized twelve children on Sunday. I think I can safely say there were thirty conversions during the meeting. There were twenty-nine accessions to the church. Thanks for the faithful labors of Bros. Morris, Miller and Hearn, of the Protestant Methodists, and Bro. W. F. Alexander, of Columbia circuit. Yours in Christ,

PHILIP ALLEN, P. C.

VERNON, La., October 14, 1873.

Collections for Mexico.

ON BOARD STEAMER NATCHEZ, October 13, 1873.

MR. EDITOR: I have good news for the churches. The Mexican mission is at a premium. A wonderful volume of sympathy flows out toward these people. Everybody talks Mexico. Everybody thinks Mexico. With Bishop Keener's permission a large colony will go from the Delhi district. Without his permission, if he'll foot the bills, said colony can be formed without trouble.

The good work goes bravely on. Including the call at our District Conference we have raised—making only seven public calls—over $2,000. But I desire to go into particulars, giving dates and names.

Sept. 7.—Wilmsboro District Conference..... $600 00
Less transferred to Wesley chapel..... 50 00

Query: If a Friday night Waterproof congregation gives to the Mexican mission $202.50, what would a Sunday Waterproof congregation give? Answer—at the Annual Conference.

WESLEY CHAPEL.

October 12.—This church, in antebellum days, was one of the most intelligent, liberal and flourishing congregations in the Conference. It is very much reduced in numbers and means. Those who were wont to ride to church in splendid silk and satin-lined carriages, now ride a distance of from ten to twelve miles, in less pretentious vehicles, and some of them in wagons. But, Mr. Editor, as an evidence of the old liberality, and appreciation of a good cause, witness the following noble subscription:

Considering the size and strength of the congregation, I doubt, Mr. Editor, whether any one of your rich city congregations will do as well. One of the ten-dollar subscribers in the above list is from a hard-working, industrious, one-armed man. He has traveled through Mexico, lived among those people, and appreciates their sad religious condition. And yet another pleasant incident: After the congregation had been dismissed a dear lady friend, who had subscribed liberally, came forward to the altar to bid the Mexican missionary good-by, pressed in his hands a twenty-dollar gold piece, and in a mellow, tearful voice said: "Keep this, my dear pastor, in remembrance of me." God bless these, and the thousands of dear, noble friends of my old district.

ST. JOSEPH, LOUISIANA.

Sunday Night, October 12.—Last but by no means least. I am specially attached to St. Joseph—have ever enjoyed my visits there. It must be dearer to me, I suppose, because it is proverbially a hard place—the hardest place, so my friends there say, in my district. I love St. Joe; and perhaps, sir, for that very reason I approached it, on Sabbath evening, from Wesley chapel, with very considerable trepidation. For St. Joseph, a very large congregation assembled, at an early hour, in the courthouse—the largest congregation I have ever seen collected for church. Having preached the best I could, taking the parable of the talents for my text, I proceeded to organize the St. Joseph Mexican Missionary Society. Dr. P. Chew was nominated by Mr. H. A. Garrett as chairman. Mr. Garrett for secretary, and Colonel L. V. Reeves for treasurer, by Mr. Daves. They were elected. Then presenting and urging the claims of the Mexican mission, the following noble subscription was raised in a few moments:

Books and Periodicals.

WE HAVE RECEIVED the annual catalogue of Marvin College, Waxahachie, Texas, for the collegiate year 1872-3. The total number of students during the year was two hundred and eighteen. Our old friend, Rev. J. M. Pugh, is president of this promising institution, and has a full faculty to assist him.

FROM Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston, we have received The River of Life, a new Sunday school song and tune-book. It is compiled and edited by H. S. Perkins and William W. Bentley.

MORTON'S MONTHLY HOME AND SCHOOL for October is an excellent number of this interesting periodical.

ANOTHER YEAR OF PATRIARCHAL HISTORY.—The venerable Rev. Henry Boehm, says the New York Christian Advocate, is still living at his old summer home in Staten Island. He is now well advancing in the ninety-ninth year of his age, and seventy-third of his ministry. He has passed a year of greater quiet than usual, having been afflicted in the earlier part of it by a chronic ailment, from which, however, he has now nearly recovered. He reads but little at a time, owing not to impaired vision, but to a chronic weakness of the eyelids. His mind is clear, and his interest in the cause of truth unflagging. His love for the Bible has increased with his years; during 1872 he read it through four times. A few days ago, as his daughter, Mrs. Embley, after reading to him the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth chapters of Acts, was about to lay the Bible aside, he took it from her and, clasping it to his breast, exclaimed: "Precious book! precious book!" The good old man is as cheerful and happy as ever.

A Singular Coincidence and a Most Remarkable Providence.

Dr. Bowman died on Monday morning, and the hour of half-past ten on Tuesday morning was appointed for the funeral services. It was at first thought best to have the services in the church, of which he was pastor, but after further deliberation it was deemed best to have only a short service at the grave, and defer the memorial services until the congregation, now scattered by the fever, could return to the city. This plan was agreed upon, and on Tuesday, at half-past ten A. M., a number of the ministers of the city and the friends of the dead met around the grave to lay away the corpse of our beloved brother.

At the very hour appointed for the services, and while the friends were around the grave, from some mysterious and unaccountable cause the whole ceiling of the church in which it had at first been determined to hold the services, with all the upholding timbers, except a small portion over the pulpit, fell with a terrible crash upon the floor beneath, just where the congregation would have been gathered if the first plan relative to the services had not been changed. It is fearful to look upon the crushed pews and the holes broken through the floor itself, and think of the terrible calamity which would have resulted if the services had not been postponed. Scores and perhaps hundreds of lives would have been sacrificed, and a much deeper shade of gloom would have overshadowed our stricken city. Surely our First church is sorely afflicted—its beloved pastor laid in the grave, and its beautiful house of worship in ruins, in one short hour.

Thanks be to his name who, in the midst of wrath, remembers mercy. We, who were gathered around that grave, cannot be sufficiently thankful to that kind Providence that overruled the first counsels and kept us and our loved ones from being crushed by those falling timbers. God has mercifully spared our sorrowing city from this calamity, and may we not hope that it is an evidence that the measure of our needed chastisement will speedily be filled, and his heavy hand be removed from us? We know he does all things well, and that he will not give us one needless tear. His will be done.—Memphis Presbyterian, October 9.

H. F. Given.—Tribute of Respect.

At a regular monthly meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association of New Orleans, held October 14, 1873, the following preamble and resolutions, offered by John H. Sawyer, general secretary, were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased almighty God to take from earth to the reward of the righteous, Bro. HENRY F. GIVEN, an active member and charter trustee of our Association; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while submitting to the Father's will, we deeply deplore the sudden loss of our late brother and worker in the vineyard of the Lord.

That his death has made a gap in the ranks of the Christian brotherhood that cannot be easily filled.

That he was a man of the most generous impulses, of granite principles and tried integrity.

That in love and labor for his church and all Christian enterprise he was surpassed by none, it being "his meat and drink to do his Master's will."

That as a man, a merchant, a gentleman and a Christian he was in every respect a safe model for our imitation.

That as young men we can have no higher ambition than to live the life and die the death of Henry F. Given.

That we deeply sympathize with his stricken wife, children and brother, and can only commend them for consolation to his God, whom he so ardently loved and faithfully served.

And be it further resolved, That these resolutions be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and Southwestern Presbyterian, and that a copy of them be sent to the widow and brother of the lamented deceased.

J. M. HARDING,
Recording Secretary.

We Ask Again.

A number of preachers and others to whom requests have been forwarded to serve the Publishing House in the matter of its claim against the government have made no response. They are hardly aware of the importance of the matter. We appeal again. Please to do precisely what was requested, and report to me at Washington city, District of Columbia, at your earliest convenience. Will you do it? If the papers are lost or mislaid, send a postal card for a copy. Thanks to those brethren who have reported. My address in ten days from this time will be Washington, District of Columbia.

R. ANNEY.

THE GATE AJAR.

BY PHILIP PHILLIES.

[illegible] gate that stands ajar,
And faintly [illegible] a golden gleaming
A radiance from the cross afar,
The Saviour's love revealing.

CHORUS—Oh! depths of mercy, can it be
That gate was left ajar for me?

That gate ajar stands free for all,
Who through it seek salvation;
The rich and poor, the great and small,
Of every tribe and nation.

Press onward, then, though foes may frown,
While mercy's gate is open;
Accept the cross and win the crown,
Love's everlasting token.

Beyond the river's brink we'll lay
The cross that here is given,
And bear the crown of life away,
And love Him more in heaven.

Benevolent Bequests.

BY CHARLES F. WINGATE.

It seems remarkable that in this so-called material and sordid age so much money is given away by individuals for benevolent objects. One can hardly open a newspaper without finding an account of a bequest or donation for some philanthropic purpose, and the number and intrinsic amount of these gifts is very great. Over $2,000,000 is contributed annually in New York alone to the charitable and religious institutions of that city, and fully $10,000,000 is subscribed to like institutions in the whole country. This is independent of benefactions for educational purposes, which last year amounted to nearly $10,000,000 besides. It is therefore safe to say that $20,000,000 are annually expended by private individuals in the United States in charity, and this large sum is each year being added to with the increase of the wealth of our population.

Owing partly to the good example set by Peter Cooper, George Peabody, Ezra Cornell, Henry Bergh and others, it is becoming customary for wealthy persons to do their good deeds while they are yet alive, instead of leaving their bequests by will after death. This is by far the best plan, as no one should be so capable of executing a work of beneficence as its originator, who, if he personally superintends the carrying out of his design, can correct the inevitable mistakes and defects incident to every undertaking, and which in very many cases have neutralized the good intent of testamentary bequests.

The practice of leaving money by will, however, is still kept up, and in the published accounts of the disposition of property willed by a large number of persons of means, who have died during the past year, I have failed to find more than one or two instances where nothing was given for benevolent purposes.

The bulk of the money given in the United States for philanthropic objects has been expended in aid of learned institutions, and this is significant of the absorbing interest which is felt here in education. President McCosh is reported to have said that no man worth $100,000 would now dare to hold up his head in society unless he had devoted part of his income for the advancement of education. Whether as a means of preserving the donor's fame or simply to accomplish the most good, there are few better modes of giving money than to endow a college with a professorship or library. In the year 1872 the sums given by private individuals in this country for educational purposes were divided as follows:

"For colleges and universities, $6,282,401.63; for theological institutions, $1,155,856.53; for libraries and normal schools, $1,020,000; for superior schools for females, $689,993; for agricultural and scientific schools, $182,009; for academies, $303,040; for medical schools, $10,422.13; and for law schools, $10,000."

It will be noticed in this list how much money has been given in aid of schools of science and advanced schools for women, both of which are special features of our day.

It is becoming quite common to give money to establish public libraries and reading-rooms, and there is plenty of room in this direction for donations. Governor English's gift of $10,000 to Yale law library has been doubled by additional subscriptions, thus showing how a good example is followed. The bar of Fairfield county, Connecticut, has received the valuable law library of the late Judge Butler. Braintree and Haverhill, Massachusetts, have each been given $30,000 for a public library; and Lee, in the same State, is to have a like institution, as a substitute for a soldiers' monument.

Among the bequests made during the last year in the interests of science may be noted $250,000 for a hospital at Worcester; $100,000 to establish an arboretum at Harvard; $200,000 to the town of Braintree, Massachusetts, to found an institution where civil engineering and kindred branches of study shall be made a specialty; $10,000 to the natural history department of Hamilton College, of Illinois; a large sum to found a school of science at Princeton; $10,000 for a woman's college near Boston, and a large building furnished for scientific instruction to New Bedford. Lastly, Prof. Tyndall's generous disposition of the proceeds of his lectures and the munificent gifts received by Agassiz in aid of the Penekese Island School of Natural History round off this noble list in superb completeness.

The example of Mr. Bergh has led to the expenditure of large sums for the prevention of cruelty to animals; and one form in which this money is laid out—namely, to erect public drinking-fountains for both man and beast—is specially to be commended.

Next to the illiterate, the interests of the poor and the sick seem to have the most weight with philanthropic persons, and large sums are given by the latter for hospitals, homes and other like institutions. Less money is given publicly and in large sums to churches than for other benevolent objects; but in the aggregate the amount contributed for the advancement of religion is enormous, while hardly a day passes without the presentation of a new organ, a memorial window or a bell to some church, while donation parties to clergymen and the making up of purses to pay for vacation trips are daily features of our social history.

The custom, which was once very popular of leaving a sum of money as a prize for some literary effort, usually an essay or lecture on a theological topic, is rarely practiced now; though by the will of Richard Fletcher, of Boston, $500 will be given by the trustees of Dartmouth for the best essay on Christian Non-conformity received up to next December. Four years ago a course of lectures was founded at the Ohio Wesleyan University to secure the delivery of lectures on the Evidences of Natural and Revealed Religion, and the latter have just been issued in book form.

To attempt to detail the many late bequests involving some kind of romance which have come to my notice would be an endless task. The latest and most curious instance of this kind is the case of a book-seller and blank-book manufacturer of Cincinnati, who, through once having aided a merchant of that city when in distress, some forty-five years since, has since been unexpectedly made heir to his fortune of $3,000,000. Another romantic bequest is that of a sum of $100,000 reported to have been made to the widow of an Ohio colonel by a Southern officer, whom her husband protected from the brutality of some negro soldiers during the war.

Sometimes the items contained in wills seem peculiar. Thus, among the bequests made by Benjamin Abbott, a master cooper of Boston, was $300 to his faithful washerwoman, $200 to his barbers, and all his household furniture to his housekeeper, a widow.

A gentleman at Quincy, Massachusetts, some time since offered to give $5,000 to that town, provided a board of officers should be elected who favored prohibition; but, as the terms were not complied with, the money was not paid over.

A lady in Sterling, Massachusetts, lately left $500 to keep the old cemetery in that town in order.

A Connecticut gentleman made a bequest not long ago of $1,000 to give Thanksgiving and New Year's dinners to the inmates of the Hartford poorhouse.

A gentleman who lately died in Boston left his printing office to three of his workmen, and gave sums ranging from $50 to $2,000 to many personal friends, employes and family servants, including $2,000 to Thomas Barry, the veteran actor, and $1,000 to B. P. Shillaber ("Mrs. Partington.")

A lady in Braintree, Massachusetts, a few months since bequeathed the income from her house and furniture, besides $2 per week in trust, for the support of a favorite cat, named "Otta." Though direct bequests to animals are null and void by law in Massachusetts, yet "Otta" was tenderly cared for during her life, and, she having since died, the property now belongs to a Universalist school in the neighborhood.

Several instances have lately occurred where quite large amounts have been given anonymously to institutions or for other good purposes. Thus the Union University at Albany was presented in this modest manner with $50,000, and $25,000 has been given in the same way to the Massachusetts Institution of Technology.

Dr. Franklin's historical deed of generosity—the making a fund to be lent in small sums to deserving young mechanics—has been imitated by a Mr. Cone, of Millington, Massachusetts, who has presented to East Haddam about $10,000 to enable poor but deserving young men to start in business in that town.

In conclusion, this brief and superficial survey of our philanthropy shows, first, that the liberality of our people more than keeps pace with the growth of their prosperity; second, that private individuals are willing and able in this country to assume burdens which elsewhere have to be borne by the State; and that the openhandedness and energetic spirit of the American people will bring about vast changes in our condition and advance our civilization in a manifold degree.—Independent.

Swedenborgianism.

Emanuel Swedenborg, born in Stockholm, in 1688, was carefully educated in his childhood, and became one of the most learned men of his day. During the prime of his life attention was given exclusively to the physical sciences; from the fifty-sixth year of his life to the close of it he devoted himself to the study of religion. Emerson says: "There is a common portrait of him in antique coat and wig, but the face has a wandering and vacant air." In his intellectual constitution the imagination preponderated, and yet it was undirected by good taste, for his style is execrable, and his conceptions are for the most part destitute of poetic beauty. By most persons he will always be regarded as having been insane. His moral character has never been successfully impeached; his life is said to have been pure, and his manners are said to have been urbane. He had no worldly advantages to gain by imposture; it were unfair to accuse him of dishonesty or ambition.

Swedenborgianism has made considerable progress in the world. It has been embraced by at least one of the kings of Sweden; in England as well as Sweden it has found a number of adherents; in America it has found favor with some men of talents and learning; in the East Indies it has found a home and welcome. For minds of a certain cast it has peculiar fascinations; it gratifies the curiosity of some who wish to discover more of the eternal world than God has chosen to reveal; it soothes the wounded domestic affections by producing a belief that as distinct communion can be had with departed as with living relations and friends; it furnishes the half religious with an apology for turning away from the holy Scriptures; and persons of defective religious experience, and unsteady religious opinion, are greatly tempted to flee to it for relief; it is especially attractive to those who have in their nature some taint of insanity.

As a commentator Swedenborg is fanciful and unsound. His claims to inspiration are totally unworthy of confidence. Inspiration is claimed for him on the ground that he knew certain events at the time they were occurring at a distance, and that he foretold certain future events. If, however, a few lucky conjectures in a lifetime entitle a man to the claim of inspiration, each succeeding generation may have a new religion. We cannot now cross-examine the witness who testified to Swedenborg's cotemporaneous knowledge of a fight at Stockholm when many miles distant from the city. The prediction at the time of Wesley's death even if it were fully proved that Swedenborg really made it—may be regarded as only a fortunate guess. We cannot admit the claims of any new revelation, unless they are made good by palpable and indisputable miracles. If Swedenborg really had communication with beings of the spiritual world, the poet was wonderful, but not necessarily miraculous. We cannot receive the information given by them as a revelation from God, since they may have been evil and not good spirits, and may have communicated falsehood.

It is reasonable to think that if the divine of Stockholm had been chosen by the Almighty as the channel of a new revelation to mankind, he would have received it not through the medium of inferior spirits, as he pretended, but as the apostles of Christ received that revelation which they were commissioned to communicate to the world—directly from the Holy Spirit Himself.

That Swedenborg was not inspired is proved by the fact that many of the doctrines which he taught are in conflict with those which are taught in the Scriptures, which he professed to receive as a divine revelation. As to his opinions on the subject of the Trinity, he was a Sabellian denying the distinction of persons in the Godhead. Lutheran as he professed to be, he disowned the doctrines of the atonement and justification by faith alone as taught by the great reformer; he rejected also the doctrines of a general judgment and the resurrection, as they have always been understood in the Christian church; his conceptions of spiritual things are gross and materialistic. It is nothing more than fair to say, however, that the moral precepts unfolded by Swedenborg are pure; that the influence of much that he has written is well adapted to elevate the soul and cultivate its best affections; and that he points out, with great distinctness, the necessary connection between a pure life on earth and a happy immortality.—Reason and Redemption, by R. B. White, D. D.

WE ARE ALL MISSIONARIES.—Bishop Whipple puts this important truth in a strong light, in a recent address. He said:

"Every baptized man is, by his oath of allegiance, a missionary. There is not one law for minister and another for laymen. The gospel does not bind the pastor and absolve the people. There is not one solitary line in God's revelation which says that the one must work and sacrifice and give, and the other may hoard and keep. You may be tied down to the dull routine of daily toil, and yet your life, hid with Christ in God, may make you one of the best preachers of righteousness in the world. You may be a very stammerer, and yet your life of love go straight to every heart. We can all give our example. A chance word of reproof, a wayside word of warning, a loving invitation, an act of Christian courtesy done in a Christian way, may lead others unto Christ. It is not so much where we are, as what we are, and it is not alone what we do, but the way we do it. A man who loves the Savior must in some way be the refuge of the weary. If he speaks, it must be as one tempted man speaks to another who is battling with temptations. It is not done by fierce warnings. It is not by assailing sinners as you would besiege a city. It is the old and blessed story of God's love leading weary souls to Jesus, helping them to grope out of the dark and tangled wilderness, and cheering them at every step on the way to deliverance and safety. There is no one so poor that he cannot do something for Christ. Whether it be the widow's mite or the rich man's gift, God will bless it."

THE SHAH AND THE MOSLEM.—The relation which the Shah of Persia sustains to the Mohammedan faith is a matter of interest to many people, and some misapprehension has obtained concerning it. He has in London been officially addressed as "the recognized head of the faith of many millions of her majesty's Mohammedan subjects," whereupon the London Times remarks: "The Shah is not even in his own dominions the recognized head of the faith professed by his people, and that faith is not the faith of many millions of Queen Victoria's subjects." The Persians are Sheahs, and the Mohammedans in India almost entirely Sonnees.

Even in Persia the Sheahs, claiming to represent the true faith, have never acknowledged the king as head of the faithful, and "no king has ever claimed to be the head." The Times explains this: "In the days of our Henry the Eighth a certain Mohammed the Twelfth, the last Caliph of the race of Abbas, being then a sojourner with titular pretensions in Grand Cairo, demised his spiritual supremacy as successor of the prophet to the sultan then reigning, Selim the First. The validity of the transfer was recognized by the Mohammedan world, and from that day to this the emperor of the Turks has been saluted as the true "Commander of the Faithful."

"A HORSE-POWER cranberry-picker," the invention of a Wisconsin man, is among the machines recently patented at Washington.

AGAINST THE TIDE.

'Tis sweet to float along the flowing tide,
The water's soothing ripply around,
And unseen harps with notes of dulcet sound
Lulling the ear as down the stream we glide,
And all of beautiful and fair to see,
And balmy winds blowing upon the brow,
And all is well if—let us be as now.
But let the brave, clear thinker strive to free
Fairly spanning spirits from their galling chain,
And, like a ship-wrecked sailor life from shore
The hears the warning of the breaker's roar,
And, should he drift into some smiling bay,
Fierce-eyed warriors motion him away.

Finch's Minor Ire.

Punishment of Silence.

Mr. James Greenwood has published a frightful account of the silent system which is in operation at the Holloway Model Prison in London:

It is an offense for a prisoner to speak one word, and he is never addressed except in whispers, so that he may lie in prison two years without hearing the natural sound of the human voice. The effect of this is so terrible on the mind that prisoners will speak out in desperation at the risk of any punishment, rather than endure that horrible silence.

The prisoners never see one another, but remain in perpetual solitude. One poor wretch, driven by desperation by nine months' solitude and silence, recklessly broke out, in Mr. Greenwood's presence: "O Governor, put me in another cell. Put me somewhere else. I have counted the bricks in the cell I am in till my eyes ache."

The request of the tortured wretch was refused.

There is a view-hole in each cell, and as the warden wears shoes of India-rubber soles the prisoners can never be sure of being alone.

Those condemned to the treadmill have to ascend twelve hundred steps every alternate twenty minutes for six hours; and this in a place so hot and close that prisoners often lose in perspiration three stone in as many months.

Every day the prisoners are taken to the chapel, so arranged that they can see no one save the chaplain, and him only through an iron grating. And thus is the order of devotion observed. Wardens are constantly on the watch, lest for a single instant they, through the whole of the service, depart from the rigid rule of "eyes right." They must look steadfastly at the preacher, must raise and lower their prayer-book with the elbows squared, and all at once, like soldiers at drill. They must not scrape their feet without having afterward to explain the movement. They scarcely wink an eye or sigh without danger of rebuke or punishment.

THE following incident in the early life of the late Dr. Torrey will be received with peculiar interest at this time; and it is probable that its narration may serve to recall to many of our older citizens other equally interesting and suggestive passages in the life of this distinguished scholar. The story, as told by the editor of the Journal of Applied Chemistry, runs as follows: "The manner in which a taste for natural objects and a thirst for a more intimate knowledge of plants was first awakened in Dr. Torrey is quite remarkable. His father held some official station which required him to visit the prisons of the city of New York, and the lad frequently accompanied the parent on these tours of inspection. In the old State prison, which at that early day was somewhere about Twenty-third street, and situated in the country, they found a man in the office of the superintendent who had been condemned to serve out a short term, but was generally believed to have been innocent of any offense. This prisoner was taken into the office to keep the books. He was a man of learning, and especially a fine botanist. Whenever young Torrey appeared at the prison the book-keeper would point out from the window some plants growing in the vacant lots opposite, and ask the boy to go and fetch them; the two then sat down in the office to analyze and dissect the specimens, presenting the curious spectacle of a prisoner in convict's costume teaching a well-dressed boy. The lad never forgot the lessons, and from the taste thus acquired dates his application to the study of botany, in which science he was destined to achieve the most distinguished success. The prisoner was ultimately acquitted of all guilt, and became one of the most useful scientific men of the country."

A LITTLE COAT.—In the life of S. Judd the following striking thought occurs: He preached a sermon from the text, "His mother made him a little coat," First Samuel ii, 9. Passing from the letter to the spirit, he speaks of clothing for the mind and the soul, and endeavors to impress mothers that they should be more solicitous about such little coats than for the fashions and frock-jackets or other garments of the body.

I meet a man in the streets literally clothed in rags, clothed also with manifold tokens of depraved life. I ask, did his mother, when young, make him a little coat?

When I see a person clothed in humility, entertaining a modest sense of himself, reverent of truth—his mother made for him a little coat.

These coats last a long time. Children shall wear them when parents are dead; they shall wear them in distant lands; that old family style shall show itself in many places and times.

What sort of clothes are we making for our children? Is their vesture wisdom or folly? Is it the true beauty of goodness, or a poor imitation from the draper's?

SIR MOSES MONTEFIORE, the great London lender of the Jews, was negotiating a loan on the Bourse when a small lot of capitalists approached him. "Oh, dear," says one, "he is going to swallow us all." "No, my dear sir," said Sir Moses, with a caustic smile, "my religion forbids me that."

THE one is often only a beautiful speculation, or at best a sentimental entertainment; the other is the real practice, and the solid fruit of our reading and meditations on his passion.

Religious Intelligence.

DURING the last three months the French railroads have sold 300,000 tickets to religious pilgrims.

THERE are at present 50,000 Sunday school scholars and 4,000 teachers in Germany. Ten years ago there were none.

THE Board of Missions of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church have decided to begin their work of establishing missions in South America and the West Indies.

A NEW MISSIONARIC has been formed for British Kaffraria, and Rev. Dr. Callaway, a missionary of the Church of England at Spring Vale, Natal, has been named as the first occupant of the See.

THERE are now over 3,000 native Christians among the Telougoos, and the work goes on hopefully. But the great want there, as everywhere, is an educated and trained native ministry. For that a training school is needed.

THE Nez Perces missionaries is gathering a rich spiritual harvest. Rev. H. H. Spalding, of this mission, baptized 150 converts. This is a great movement. One of their own tribe has been their only preacher and teacher until recently.

THE Baptist Missionary Union are now adding to the strength of their mission at Japan by sending an earnest and devoted young man from the last graduating class of Newton, Rev. J. H. Arthur, of Hartford, who will be accompanied by his youthful bride.

THE Methodist Mexican mission has purchased the cloisters of the Convent of San Francisco, for use as a mission building. The structure is spoken of as one of great elegance, forming with its beautiful arches and pillars one of the most magnificent of courts. The entire cost of the edifice was $20,000. It is said to have cost originally over $100,000.

A PRIVATE NOTE from Rev. S. L. Baldwin, of our mission work in Foochow, China, announces the decease of Ting Ang, the first convert of our mission in China. He died in peace at Foochow, on July 11. He had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for seventeen years. His daughter is the wife of Rev. Yek Ing Kwang, one of the seven native preachers ordained by Bishop Kingsley.

A WRITER in the Memphis Presbyterian states the following fact in illustration of the cost of dancing:

"A community that was not wealthy had much trouble to raise $80 a month for their pastor, who was much beloved. But that their children might know how to dance, the same community paid a dancing-master $300 a month, and among those who footed the bill were some of the officers and members of the church."

JAMES BAIRD, a Scotch iron-master, has paid over to trustees the sum of £500,000 ($2,500,000) to be used for the benevolent operations of the Established Church of Scotland. This magnificent gift will be available immediately, and Mr. Baird will have the pleasure of seeing his good deeds live with him, and of being assured that they will live after him. It is understood that Mr. Baird is deeply impressed with the spiritual destitution which prevails among the poor of Scotland, and is exceedingly anxious that some adequate provision should be made for their religious education.

INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC, which fifteen years ago was not to be thought of in the Scotch Presbyterian churches, is now becoming very popular. Since the Assembly of the Established body voted to allow its congregations to use organs and harmoniums, they are rapidly finding their way into the churches. Even the quiet, out-of-the-way districts must have their expensive organ, one of the latest instances being that of the old church in the west of Scotland, in whose graveyard rest the remains of Burns' "Highland Mary." The Scotch Free Church still gets along without instruments.

A COMMUNICATION to the Christian World from San Luis Potosi, Mexico, states that on the sixth of June a party of about thirty Protestants, assembled in their own house of worship, in the city of Puebla, were attacked. Three men were killed, others badly wounded, and the women grossly abused and beaten. The women called for protection to the police and the government, but were refused. The government of Puebla would do nothing to defend them or to bring the offenders to justice. Other cases of persecution are alluded to in the State of Zacatecas and the city of Orizaba.

THE conference of German professors of canon law, which was held at Cassel on the thirteenth and fourteenth of August, has decided that the Old Catholics must be recognized by the State as members of the Catholic Church; that the German governments are obliged to recognize Dr. Reinkens as a Catholic bishop; that the Old Catholics may vindicate by law the endowments of the Catholic establishments and institutions; and that priests disobeying the laws of the State may be deprived of their incomes. Another conference will take place next year at Nuremburg.

COMPLAINT comes from the mission-field in Syria that American travelers, who are passing through that land in unprecedented numbers this season, do not observe the Sabbath in their eagerness for sight-seeing, and that the effect of this on the native Christians is far from salutary. Clergymen even are found among Sunday-traveling parties, one of whom is stated to have said in justification of his course that "he could meditate as well on horseback as in a dirty Arab village." He received the reply that a Syrian convert, upon seeing him, would also meditate.

REV. WILLIAM TAYLOR, the American Methodist evangelist, has removed from Bombay to Calcutta. The Lucknow Witness states that for two weeks he preached in the Wesleyan church, where many were converted. He next began independent service and has organized a church of more than fifty members. Though at present confining himself to the English-speaking population, his ultimate aim is to reach the natives through the agency of the Christians who live among them. Mr. Taylor intends to build a preaching hall in Calcutta, at a cost of $10,000, one-half of which has already been paid by a friend of the work in Bombay. Mr. Taylor is pushing his work, calling for helpers, and intends that the work under his supervision shall be self-supporting.

PIUS THE NINTH cannot complain of poverty. He may be the prisoner of the Vatican, but he is, nevertheless, a prisoner well supplied. His revenues as a temporal prince may be cut off, but his revenue in "Peter's Pence" is unfailing. The Catholic Review estimates that from 1861 to 1872 the sums contributed by the faithful under this name reach the enormous aggregate of 400,000,000 francs, or $80,000,000. The contributions have been so abundant that a large surplus has been put aside "for a rainy day." The Unita Cattolica gives the following table of the contributions of Peter's Pence from 1861 to 1868:

| PETER'S PENCE. | |
|---|---|
| 1861 | [illegible] |
| 1862 | 9,492,000 |
| 1863 | 7,647,000 |
| 1864 | 5,882,353 |
| 1865 | 6,145,000 |
| 1866 | 5,909,000 |
| 1867 | 11,312,000 |
| 1868 | 6,000,000 |
| Total in eight years | 71,951,000 |

It will be seen that since 1868 these gifts have been enormously swelled. We don't see that the Pope has much to complain of; he is decidedly well cared for.—Methodist.

SOME church statistics have been gathered from the census of 1870 by Hon. Amasa Walker, which in their way are quite suggestive. He gives a table (printed in the Congregationalist) showing the wealth belonging to the different denominations, so far as it can be ascertained from the value of their church property, which may be said to represent with considerable accuracy the pecuniary ability of the worshipers. In exceptional instances churches have large funds invested in various forms, but these are mostly in the large cities. Beginning with the Methodists, we find that their 21,337 edifices have an average value of $3,271, and they can accommodate 6,500,000 worshipers; the Baptists have 12,857 churches, with not quite 4,000,000 sittings, valued at $3,042; the Reunited Presbyterian edifices number 5,683, at an average value of $7,338, sittings, 2,200,000; the Roman Catholics have 3,806 churches, value at $16,023 each, on the average, and their sittings number not quite 2,000,000; the Congregationalist churches, numbering 2,715, are estimated at $9,231 each, sittings, 1,117,200; then come the Episcopalians, with 2,660 edifices, ranging at the higher value of $11,039, sittings, 991,000; Universalists, churches, 602, value, $9,136, sittings, 210,380; Reformed, churches, 408, value, $22,135, sittings, 227,228; Unitarian, churches, 310, value, $20,236, sittings, 145,471; Jews, synagogues, 152, value, $33,916, sittings, 73,265. The Lutheran statistics are not given, but they are one of our largest bodies, numbering about 3,900 churches. Figures, as a rule, are usually dry reading, but the foregoing bear upon the question of denominational policy and influence. The largest denominations reach the poorer classes, the smallest the richer, from which it might be inferred that the former occupy the field in the truest spirit of the gospel. But as the rich are much fewer than the poor, and need to be preached to and converted no less, distinctions in this respect would be invidious. The statistics are worthy of study by such as may be interested in them, as a number of inferences can be drawn from their comparison.—Christian Union.

MISSIONARY PROGRESS IN INDIA.—Some statistics on the subject are the more remarkable as being included in the Calcutta letter of the Pall Mall Gazette, and lately mentioned the results of missionary enterprise in Bengal as ascertained by the late census. These results briefly amount to this: that there is now a total Christian population under the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal amounting to 93,098 souls, of whom 70,000 are born and bred in India, and 50,000 are pure natives. The report of the Missionary Conference at Allahabad has just published the statistics for all India. Unfortunately it deals only with the Protestant Christians—pure natives—who number 224,161. The most remarkable feature disclosed by the missionary statistics is the rapid progress of proselytism during late years. Between 1851 and 1871 the number of Christians has more than doubled in Bengal, while the communicants have increased nearly three-fold. In Central India the native church has multiplied by nearly 400 per cent., in Dudh by 175 per cent., in the northwestern provinces it has nearly doubled, in the Punjaub and Bombay it has increased by 51 per cents, and the total increase for all India is 51 per cent. The increase during the previous ten years, from 1851 to 1861, was only 53 per cent. The missionaries calculate that, assuming a uniform increase of 61 per cent. for each ten years, the number of native Protestant Christians in India will amount in 1951 to 14,000,000, and in A. D. 2001 to 130,000,000. They very prudently admit, however, that such calculations are liable to unforeseen contingencies. But they have established, in a startling and unexpected manner, that Christianity is really living faith among the native of India, and that it is spreading at rate which was altogether unsuspected by the general public. The number of native ordained ministers has risen during the ten years in question from 45 to 226, and the number of communicants for all India has more than doubled. The report very honestly shows, however, that the missionary work in India is an educational quite as much as a proselytizing enterprise. In 1871 no fewer than 122,132 pupils attended the mission schools; and these institutions are every year growing more popular, as is proved by the increase since 1861, when the attendance stood at 75,975. On the whole, it is felt that the missionaries have done wisely in taking up the gauge of battle regarding their alleged want of results, and that they have proved their case in a quite unexpected manner."

A Reason of the Hope.

Among other things lying in the line of the Christian's duty, as Peter affirms, is that of readiness to give an answer to every man that asketh a reason of the hope that is in him. There is no obligation to satisfy the inquirer, because this may be impossible, but an answer is to be always at hand for him who asks a reason. The questioner may be a caviler, seeking to entangle and confuse, and moved by no good purpose. Sometimes those who ask may be bigots, intent on overthrowing the faith and comfort of the soul. Often, however, the question will be most honestly put, and it will be from a heart intent on knowing the truth. And often the most earnest and deeply-concerned inquirers will be those who seldom if ever put the subject directly in the form of words. They are awakened and deeply broken up in their souls, and would give the world to know about experimental religion.

It is not so much the general history and doctrines of the gospel, and the evidences set in array and duly classified in books, that the ordinary inquirer seeks of the Christian acquaintance or friend. It is rather his single and personal testimony, and such particulars as belong to the individual experience. If it were a matter of learning, critical, historical and scientific, it would be impracticable and utterly impossible for most Christians to make answer. But the most illiterate, if truly converted, can tell the facts and circumstances of the wonderful change, and attest the reality of a spiritual transformation. A reason of the hope, if every Christian is to give it, must be something as simple as the defense of the man whose sight was recovered by the Savior's miracle-working power. No casuistry, no prejudice, no amount of sophistry could successfully meet the plain, blunt declaration: "One thing I knew, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." Paul's most convincing arguments for the Christian religion are found in the relation of his personal experience and the facts of his own conversion.

The hope that is in a man, so far as he is conscious of the processes, may have had no relation to the systematic evidences and the learned defenses of the gospel. His conscience, the truth appealing to the conscience, the awakening, the struggle in prayer for mercy, and the day-break of light and peace, and Christ as a precious and present Savior from sin, are the main phenomena, as they can be recalled. Such a defense or apology can every converted person be ready to give, and there is always a demand for this kind of testimony, and for a reason after this order. Not an answer in words only, but in a life wherein the grace of God is manifest. When the hope that is in a man exhibits the bloom and fruitage of upright and pure conduct, and when the contrast with his past life and with the course of the world is strikingly apparent, the best of answers has been given. The hope of heaven is a central fact in experience, and embraces everything important in connection with the doctrine of salvation in Christ. The future life, the immortality of blessedness, the resurrection of the body, and a divine power to regenerate the fallen nature of man are implied. And besides these is the doctrine of assurance, personal, comfortable and clear, as to our pardon and acceptance with God; and, further still, are the divine government, and the plan of salvation, with its provisions and terms.

The hope that is in a man reaches out to and dwells upon all these sublime and tremendous matters, and all are, after a manner, expounded from the experience of an individual believer. That hope implanted, that new creation in Christ Jesus, that life of holiness flowing from both of these, are the demonstration and the reason more perfectly reached than by any other means. Here is a result of prayer most manifest, and greater by an almost infinite measure than the healing of the sick or the arrest of the sun in its daily course. This is the answer that every Christian can give—a reason grounded in a conscious change of heart, and in a life so pure as to be something more than miraculous in this world of sin. A reason for his hope is that which every Christian can render, so far as this hope is a living and inward power, and so far as it is a matter of experience. Perhaps more than any other defenses of our religion do we need to insist upon this: the testimony of personal experience, and the power of Christ as exhibited in upright and incorruptible character and conduct. It is an evidence mere within the ordinary comprehension, and far more calculated to convince than mere abstract exhibitions of Christian evidence.

There is in reality less demand for Christian evidence presented on a scientific basis than for the argument of tempers and lives imbued with all sweetness and goodness. The reason to be given for the hope that is in us cannot be scientific, neither can it be of the nature of an abstract demonstration. The heart that loves an unseen Savior, and "rejoices with joy unspeakable and full of glory," is conscious of the kingdom established within, and an unselfish, benevolent and blameless life can flow but from one fountain. This line of evidence is the surest bulwark against infidelity, and the best antidote to skepticism, ancient or modern. The felt experience of the new birth is a thing to be exhibited as a power in the soul and in the entire life, and Christianity can be no cunningly-devised fable if it changes the wicked into meek, obedient and holy, and purifies and ennobles all the relations and attributes of human nature. How far each Christian is faithful in answering, and in contributing to this distinctive testimony for his religion, must be ascertained by self-examination. To give a reason of the hope that is in you is your part of this work. This it is which the world needs—the testimony of a deep and true experience of the divine life in the soul, and the witness of a conversation that is beautified by all the ornaments of grace. There is no championship of Christianity equal to practical godliness.

The Cause and Cure.

DR. LOVICK PIERCE.

This venerable preacher still teaches the people knowledge, and as a watchman on the walls of Zion utters no uncertain sound. We give the most of a recent letter published in the Southern Christian Advocate. Let the church and the preachers give heed to these apples of gold. Writing September 19, Dr. Pierce says:

I am going to go out a little, if God will preserve me, even as I am. But much must not be expected—I am a broken vessel. But my heart is all right—always preferring labor to rest. I feel as if I have a mission that is yet unfulfilled. It is a mission on true godliness, or a revival of spiritual religion in the church. Although I am no longer a man in authority, yet I am on Zion's walls; nay more, I am emphatically on her watch-towers, surveying with diligence her open gates, or, what is no better, her unguarded entrances, and announcing the points of invasion, where satan's intriguing hosts are in camp. And if my younger brethren will allow me, I beg to say that I am well satisfied that the lower grade in spiritual godliness, now so undeniably visible everywhere in the church, is owing, in a great measure, to the fact that the sinfulness of sin is nowhere seen or felt as it is. Of course the preachers are somehow or other chiefly to blame. If we were to dwell on this topic, and show that shallow views of sin can never lead to a soul-deep conversion, such ideas of repentance as are now as current as what are called "revivals" would never prevail. No one under divine conviction of sin will ever rate its moral views below what is its estimated guilt in the special delineations of it by those who are received as God's teachers of saving truth. But you have unwittingly sealed down the awful revelation of sin to the sinner's mind by allowing these superficial convictions and superficial conversions to pass into a religious currency among us, until the church is nearly ruined by the rapid accumulation of a membership in whom the affections and lusts of the flesh were never crucified. Never crucified because the sinfulness of sin was never properly seen, and, of course, was never sufficiently felt. No one will ever sufficiently fear sin, after professing conversion, that did not properly abhor it while under conviction. And properly to abhor sin requires a view of it such as we feel is God's abhorrence of it—as his enemy, and the enemy of all moral rectitude. So that as the convicted sinner comes to mourn over his dereliction in heart and life and spirit toward God, as its awful guilt opens upon the astounded mind and guilty conscience, urging on the troubled soul its merited deserts in everlasting woe, its ease and quiet is just a moral impossibility. Agony will ensue. This style of quiet mourning, never thrown out of quiet self-possession; would never be seen about our altars of penitential prayer again.

But you will ask me: What is to be done with these tearless mourners? Let them come, but show them their error by preaching the sinfulness of sin, and clearly delineating the sense of sin as felt by all true penitents until they experience the heart-agonizing grief of a truly awakened sinner.—Never let any one suppose you believe him savingly converted whose conviction of sin was not deep enough to make him feel himself lost and undone, and without his being created anew in Christ Jesus—being fully absolved from sin by a gracious pardon, through faith, testified to by the witnessing Spirit of truth.

But still further, my brethren. There is too much looseness in some places in the reception of members into the church. I mean particularly in the examination into the grounds of their faith. Whatever may be said in other respects, in reference to mere desires, still I take it upon myself to say that the intention of the General Conference was to prevent the reception of members into the church short of a clear justification by saving faith in Christ. And every pastor to whom has been committed the edifying of the body of Christ, who receives members into the church short of the satisfactory assurance of their justification by faith, ascertained through a special inquiry, in conversation with every applicant, is doing his work after his own way, and not as he was employed and intrusted by us to do it. It is absurd for any pastor in our work to attempt to justify his haste by pretending a want of time. Time can always be gained if it is officially claimed. I believe a month or more, in the relation of an applicant, with the understanding that this solemn examination into the precedents in conviction, conversion and the witnessing of the Spirit with his spirit is to be made, would by its own benefit and blessing be salvation to the church. What if every now and then an applicant is kept longer in this peculiar relation because the faithful pastor doubts whether the ground work has been properly laid? Does not every one see that this holy caution in bringing in other members into Christ's mystical body would wake up in all who might desire to be incorporated into Christ's church a more thorough conviction of what Peter meant when he called church-members lively stones. It means really that none but true converts can enter into this spiritual house, because only spiritual sacrifices can be acceptably offered there. There may be too much greed after numerical strength. It is flattering to report large accessions to the church; and I am inclined to think many of these accessions were only applicants for membership, and should be so reported—otherwise, it may be safely concluded, all applicants are counted as accessions in advance of passing the ordeal prescribed in the Discipline. It is time all our members should come in impressed with the conviction that it is a truly Christian membership we seek. I give it as my belief that in this way we may, with a moderate exercise of discipline, restore Methodism to its primitive views of spiritual godliness. The simple increase of a membership better founded in the faith will bring it about. I am well satisfied that the present state of the church has not been superinduced by backsliding from a renewed state of mind, but by the accumulation of a membership with unrenewed minds. Reliable church-members must be renewed in the spirit of their minds. Let us all begin to inaugurate this safer way, and I will insure a glorious gain. To admit unconverted persons into the church, among other unconverted members, is to make the church the smoothest way to hell. Oh, with what dread should every pastor induct immortal souls into the church, for unless they bring religion with them, being in the church will become a fatal snare to them. They will not seek religion like any other sinner, because they have been for a long time recognized as church-members—a position which all common sense involuntarily considers a profession of religion. Let us build our church temple with prepared living stones.

Oregon.

Rev. F. W. D. Mays, transfer from Holston to the Columbia Conference, accompanied Bishop Doggett to the Pacific coast. We give a part of an interesting letter which he writes to the Nashville Christian Advocate:

On Monday, August 18, the Bishop, Bro. Pratt, late of England, and myself got aboard the cars at half-past eight A. M. for San Francisco, California. We were due in San Francisco on Saturday, August 23, and would have gotten there had we not chosen to stop—the Bishop and Bro. Pratt at Stockton, and myself with Bro. Moody in Sacramento. I worshiped with Bro. Moody on Sunday. He is a clever bachelor. About noon the Bishop and I, the Tuesday following, left Stockton for Redding, the terminus of the railroad which is being built, aiming to reach Oregon. At Redding, California, we took stage for Roseburg, Oregon, a distance of three hundred miles. Bishop Doggett slept none from Stockton, California, to Salem, Oregon. Poor Bishops get many jestlings and bumpings, as well as other preachers. From Roseburg to Salem, Oregon, we had a first-class rail-coach. Would your readers believe it were I to tell them we saw plenty of snow and frost in the month of August? It is a verity. When at Sherman we were at an elevation of eight thousand two hundred and forty-two feet. I have not the time, and your space is too scarce, to give any description of the country through which we passed. I have given the above information for those who may wish to come over the same route. The Bishop, no doubt, will give you an account, hence I have not entered into detail. The Bishop seemed inspired as we made the pass in the Rocky mountains. Well he might. The Devil's Slide and Pulpit together, with the surrounding heights of rocks thrown confusedly together, present a sublimely grand spectacle.

To see all the "sights" it is said there are on this trip, and especially over the deserts and prairies, one would have to be multocular. I wish to say a word to any of my friends or others who wish to come to this coast, that the cheaper route is to go to New York city, and take steamer to San Francisco or Portland. The Central Pacific railroad is a perfect monopoly. At Omaha they make you pay $15 per hundred for excess of baggage. The maximum weight of trunk that goes free is one hundred pounds.

The stage line from Redding to Roseburg is a swindling machine, and nothing else. The Bishop and I had to pay $22 in gold to get our trunks over the line of stages.

Bishop Doggett dedicated our new church in the State capital on Sunday, August 31. It is in a central part of the city. Bro. Dawne, the pastor, has wrought faithfully to erect this neat building, which does credit to him and the good people who helped with their means. The Bishop preached to the delight of all (as our Bishops always do) in the morning, in our new church, and then at night in the chapel of the college, under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The houses were filled on both occasions. I heard a minister, and not a member of our church, say that the Bishop did "the best preaching ever done in this city."

Our Conference closed on Monday, September 8. It was a pleasant session. Everything moved on well under the scrutiny of the Bishop. The preachers of this Conference are men of bone and sinew. They have to labor under many disadvantages. In the main, we have to worship in other people's houses, which is embarrassing sometimes. We cannot have our Sunday schools as we like when we are thus situated. We held our Conference in the Baptist church. We have but thirteen preachers in the Columbia Conference. If we had twenty more good working men, in a few years this Conference would be equal to Holston. And by the way, according to showing, she is ahead of any in the connection in her increase of the last year, both in clerical and lay members. When I know more of my work, and of the Conference, as a whole, I will write you again.

I parted with the Bishop last Tuesday, and reluctantly too. I learned to love him dearly while associated with him. We traveled together here—ate and slept together at Conference. He is in Oregon yet. I wish we could keep him here. I am very anxious about his trip to the Pacific Conference, as I was informed privately that they would certainly cane him on his return from Oregon. If he does get a caning, Bro. Mason, of Stockton, California, should be held responsible. My admonition to our Bishops is to watch such men as Bro. Mason, if they do not like to be caned.

My work is, with the exception of one appointment, in the beautifully fertile valley by the name of Willamette. The adjoining country is very rugate. I have one appointment on the Tillamoak bay. I suppose it was attached to this work as a kind of rusticating point, where the preachers may recreate. Young men, if you wish to be abundant in labors, and build up Southern Methodism, leave those older Conferences and come to the "Ultimate West," as Bishop Doggett calls it, and cast in your lot with us.

Our German Work in Texas.

From the Galveston Christian Advocate of October 8 we quote as follows:

Rev. F. Vordenbaumen, presiding elder of the German mission district, called in upon us last week, and gave us a good report of his work. He has just closed his third round, and reports between twenty-five and thirty conversions during the last quarter. The contracts for two churches, one of stone, and the other a wooden building, have been let out. This is one of the marked features of our German work. As soon as a society is organized they proceed to build a house for the Lord. Two were built last year, and Bro. Vordenbaumen remarked, with emphasis: "They are paid for!" and, what was still more cheering, the congregations at this point are growing steadily in numbers and influence. The missionaries on the different missions are at work in cheerful spirits, and with their hearts fully devoted to the cause. The work is opening so encouragingly in this field that at least three additional preachers will be needed next year. The tide of immigration is enlarging the work rapidly, and our brethren are preparing to meet the increased demand. We are sure that they will meet the cordial sympathy and support of their American brethren.

BISHOP KEENER.—After the session of the Louisville Conference Bishop Keener made a visit to Franklin, the seat of the Tennessee Conference. He occupied the chair a short time on Thursday morning, and made a touching address to the Conference (this being his first visit,) which was feelingly responded to on behalf of the Conference by Dr. McFerrin. The Bishop made a most effective speech on behalf of the Publishing House—the question of aiding it by selling a hundred dollars' worth of its publications being before the Conference at the time. He followed Bro. Pitts at night in a most eloquent missionary appeal. He left on Friday for Marion, Virginia, the seat of the Holston Conference, which began October 15.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Advance of Protestantism.

One of the most unpleasant signs of the times is the willingness of Protestant editors to foster the sentiment that Protestantism is losing ground in the United States. We [illegible] a few weeks ago, to enter a protest against the animus of a paper in Scribner's Monthly, which we regarded eminently unjust and unintelligent. More offensive still have been the recent utterances of the New York Daily Times, which appears to have fallen into the embraces of some one with an enormous genius for not seeing what he ought to see and for believing without evidence. Happily for the many readers of that generally well-informed journal, one of its own correspondents comes to the editor's relief by furnishing an array of facts and figures which put to flight the editor's idea that Protestantism is on the decline. The Rev. Lewis R. Dunn has made a compilation of statistics which are useful not only to meet the loose and ignorant reflections of the enemies of the truth, but to strengthen the faith of those who may have supposed that Romanism was indeed gaining upon Protestantism in this country. Mr. Dunn says:

"In 1860 the population of the United States was 31,443,321. At that period the Protestant churches, including all denominations, numbered 54,009, and furnished accommodations for 19,128,751 persons, and the total valuation of church property was $171,397,032. This was an actual increase for the past decade—1850 to 1860—of 15,918 churches, of accommodation for 4,893,926 persons, and of valuation to the amount of $83,969,131. Is there any evidence of decline up to 1860?

"How is it, then, during the last decade, 1860 to 1870? If there has been decline, it has taken place during that period. Upon examination we shall find the facts and figures equally encouraging. In 1870 there were 72,459 church organizations, 63,082 church edifices, with accommodations for 21,665,062 persons, and a total valuation of church property amounting to $354,483,581. Thus we see that while the population increased during the last decade to 38,558,371, the churches increased in number to 63,082, and furnished accommodations for 21,665,062, or for nearly two-thirds of the entire population; with their valuation increased to the large sum of $354,500,000. The decadal increase was, in churches, 9,073, or about three for every working day of the period. The increase in accommodations was 2,536,319, while the valuation of the church property was increased $183,085,649. So far, then, as material prosperity is concerned, instead of there being any decline in Protestantism, there is a steady, healthy and vigorous growth.

"How is it, then, with the membership of the Protestant churches? Is there any decline in their numbers? In 1860 the communicants in the different Protestant churches numbered about 5,750,000. In 1870 they numbered 6,250,000, an increase of 1,500,000 in round numbers, or 150,000 communicants for each year. If we reckon, as is usual, three persons for each communicant, as attached in some form to our churches, there are about 20,000,000 of nominal Protestants in this country.

"And this increase, too, was during the period in which our fearful civil war was raging, and our Protestant churches sent forth hundreds of thousands of their young men to battle for the rights and institutions of our country. At a low estimate, we think the Protestant churches lost a hundred thousand men in that struggle. Thus we see that, instead of any decline in the last decade, the increase in every interest in the church—in material wealth, in churches, in accommodations and in numbers—has been most gratifying.

"To this must be added the fact that, during the period now under consideration, more money has been contributed by Protestants for educational purposes, buildings, endowments, etc., than during any other decade in their history. In fact, if all the figures were at hand, we think we should be safe in saying that more has been done in that time than in the fifty years preceding. At the same time the contributions for foreign and home missions, for the American Bible Society and other institutions, have advanced in the aggregate full thirty per cent. During the past year alone five denominations contributed $28,911,341, which was an average of $14 per member. Doubtless the other churches, could we avail ourselves of their benevolent statistics, would show an equally gratifying result, which would swell the sum total of contributions for current and benevolent purposes to more than $80,000,000."

These are a few of the figures furnished by Mr. Dunn to the Times, and it will puzzle a wise man to tell why an intelligent writer, knowing the facts, should contend that Protestantism is declining, or, being honest, and ignorant of the facts, should speak confidently on the subject.

We are aware that the earnestness with which Romanism is resisted may lead ill-informed persons to infer that Protestants are alarmed at the progress of Romanism. The only alarming feature in the case is the subserviency of politicians to the Roman Catholic element. Knowing, as we do, that Romanism is a temporal, civil and despotic power, aiming at the government of States through the ecclesiastical, we are alarmed when politicians, for a mess of pottage, sell the birthright of American citizens, religious liberty, to the emissaries of Rome. This our time-serving politicians do when they give the public money to sectarian schools and charities. They rob the people to pay the priests. This is alarming. But we have no more fear that Protestantism will decline than that the sun will fall. And the intimation that the decline has begun, coming from a political paper of commanding influence, will quicken the pulse, and tinge the cheek, and fire the heart of a Protestant people.—New York Observer.

A MAN who has tried it, says that all the short cuts to wealth are overcrowded.

Fever in Memphis.

Our latest telegrams bring the cheering intelligence of a decided abatement in the epidemic. From the columns of the Western Methodist we see that [illegible] of our Methodist people are among the victims. We are glad to learn that thus far our pastors have been spared. Dr. Jones, mentioned in the following extract from the Western Methodist, is, we trust, convalescing, as we have seen no mention of his case in the secular papers. Under the heading of Our Pastors the Western Methodist of October 18 says:

We deeply regret to state that the Rev. Dr. Guilford Jones, pastor of the Hernando Street church, has been suffering from an attack of yellow fever since Friday, October 10, but at this time (Wednesday) we are not without strong hope of his recovery. In answer to our inquiries, he assured us that he has no fear, and that he has a good trust in the Lord Jesus Christ. A faithful servant, he was prostrated in the discharge of duty to the sick and dying. Let his brethren remember him in prayer to God.

The Rev. S. B. Suratt, pastor of Central church, after much service, is sick with bilious fever. His condition is now favorable, and he will, we hope, soon be able to do active service again.

The Rev. Dr. E. C. Slater, pastor of the First Methodist church, is untiring in his arduous labors. Thus far, though he has been greatly exposed, God has mercifully preserved his health.

The Rev. J. H. Priddy, employed as pastor of Sullarans Street church, since last spring, when the Rev. W. D. F. Halford, with the consent of the Bishop, resigned that charge, has been doing excellent service, and we hope continues in good health—we have not seen him for some days.

The Rev. A. H. Thomas, our presiding elder, is at the post of duty, and doing his work with fidelity.

THE Minutes of the seventh session of the Delhi District Conference, Louisiana, is a portly pamphlet of thirty-eight pages, beautifully printed, and filled with valuable and instructive information. Respecting the retiring presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Daves, the following resolutions are on record:

Resolved, That the announcement by our beloved presiding elder, Rev. Joel T. Daves, of his purpose to accept of a call and appointment to the superintendency of the new mission in Mexico, fills our hearts with sadness—not that we are sorry that so great and glorious a work is committed to his hands, but that to part with him as our presiding officer is to us a source of the deepest regret.

Resolved, That the members and brethren of this conference and district hereby assure our beloved brother of our high esteem and heartfelt love for himself and family.

Resolved, That we will ever cherish a grateful remembrance of his zeal and earnest efforts to promote the highest interest of the district, and the well-being, spiritual and temporal, of pastors and people of the district, and assure him that we will not fail to remember him and his in our approaches to the divine Father.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY.—President Andrews writes to the Nashville Christian Advocate, Greensboro, Alabama, October 4: "We have opened our fall session under more favorable auspices than our most sanguine friends anticipated. Despite the stringency of the money market, the poor crops in the portions of the country from which most of our patronage is drawn, and the general despondency that prevails, we have commenced the session with a larger number of pupils than were ever in attendance before during the first week. We confidently expect from one hundred and sixty to one hundred and seventy-five matriculates during the scholastic year. We have a large number of young preachers present, and our prospects for usefulness were never brighter. The health of Greensboro is very good, and we enter upon our work full of hope and zeal."

WE WERE PRESENT, says the Nashville Christian Advocate of October 18, during a part of the session of the Tennessee Conference, but could not remain till its close. Some account of the first four days' proceedings will be found on our first page, but next week we will give statistics, appointments, etc. The following are the delegates to the General Conference: Clerical—John B. McFerrin, A. L. P. Green, John W. Hanner, Robert A. Young, J. B. West, R. P. Ransom, W. Burr, F. E. Pitts. Reserves—R. K. Hargrove, W. Mooney. Lay delegates—Watson M. Cooke, E. G. Smith, T. M. N. Jones, Atha Thomas, J. M. Sharpe, W. A. Webb, P. A. Sowell, W. F. Holder.

THE DELHI DISTRICT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.—By a note from Rev. James E. Cobb, preacher in charge of Monroe station, we learn that Bro. B. F. Alexander has been released from the Delhi district, and that Bro. Cobb has been appointed presiding elder of the district in his place.

TIME OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—A note from Bishop Paine informs us that the North Mississippi Conference meets November 26, and not on December 3, as first announced.

ETERNITY is the divine treasure-house, and hope is the window by means of which mortals are permitted to see, as through a glass darkly, the things which God is preparing.—Mountford.

WASHINGTON COOPERAGE ESTABLISHMENT.—Mr. W. J. Beirne has recently completed a large cooperage establishment, at the corner of Marengo and Levee streets, for the manufacture of cooperage by machinery, and claims superiority over the ordinary hand-made cooperage. He is now turning out seventy-five hogsheads per day, and is capable of making double that number. Planters will find it to their interest to call on Mr. Beirne.

W. W. WASHBURN, ARTISTIC PHOTOGRAPHER, No. 113 CANAL STREET.—The demand for copies from old daguerreotypes, photographs or other pictures has been so great that Mr. Washburn has made copying and enlarging a special branch of his art, and has two first-class German artists engaged upon this branch of the arts.

TEACHERS are invited by E. F. Hart & Co., St. Louis, Missouri, to write for samples of rewards cards, etc.

A HOME-LIKE BOARDING-HOUSE. To persons who are desirous of finding a boarding-house where they may feel at home, where everything is scrupulously neat and clean, where the cooking is good, the fires substantial, the rooms large and comfortable, and prices reasonable, we would recommend the large, three-story house corner of Julia and Carondelet, which is conveniently [illegible] and third stories, running round the entire of the main building, which is now undergoing thorough repairs. This house is kept by Mrs. J. C. McAllister, whose efforts to make her guests comfortable are untiring.

SOUTHERN SALE STABLES, CORNER DELORD AND DRYADES STREETS.—Mr. O. P. Alford, the proprietor of the above stables, has made arrangements by which he is receiving daily the very best mules and horses ever brought to this market. With ample accommodation for the good care of stock, Mr. Alford and Mr. Morlin, his assistant, are enabled to offer every advantage to customers. The stables are in close proximity to the New Orleans and Jackson railroad.

CARPETS, OIL CLOTHS, ETC.—Attention is directed to the advertisement of Elkin & Co., which appears in our columns to-day. Mr. F. Stringer, the managing partner in the firm, is one of the most estimable gentlemen we have ever known. This has been our opinion for about twenty years. Their stock is large and varied. Give them a call.

NEW ORLEANS SAVINGS INSTITUTION.—There is in our judgment no safer place in this city to leave deposits than at the Savings Institution, which owns and occupies the elegant iron building, No. 156 Canal street. We have for years regarded Mr. Jones, the treasurer, as one of the most reliable and trustworthy bank officers in our community.

LIFE INSURANCE.—We direct attention to the advertisement of the Ætna Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, well and favorably known to many of our readers. The clever manager for Louisiana and Mississippi, William E. Fitzgerald, Esq., may be found at his office, No. 2 Carondelet street, room No. 10.

THE National School Furniture Company, of St. Louis, Missouri, are the sole manufacturers of Peard's folding-lid desk and seat. Their stock of maps, globes, charts, etc., is from the leading publishers. Full illustrated catalogues and price lists sent free on application.

OUR READERS will find in the new advertisements, this week, the card of the Franklin Fire Insurance Company of New Orleans, which should not be confounded with the Franklin Insurance Company of Philadelphia, which has an agency in this city.

MARTIN LANNES, the well-known and reliable butcher, whose stalls are Nos. 37, 38 and 7, Magazine market, desires to inform his friends and the public that he is prepared to furnish families, hotels and steamboats with the best meats the market affords.

WE CALL ATTENTION to the advertisement of the American Life Insurance Company. The office of the Southern branch is at No. 10 Carondelet street, where particulars will be furnished to applicants.

TO THE PUBLIC.—Those who contemplate giving up housekeeping this winter, and desire to have their furniture carefully packed for shipping or storing, will do well to call on J. Bois, 291 Camp street.

AT THE establishment of Henry Brishi, No. 3 Carondelet street, will be found all the latest and best styles of hats and caps. We recommend him to the patronage of our readers.

W. F. CLARK, No. 134 Rampart street, manufacturer and repairer of carriages and buggies. His work is equal to that of Eastern cities, and his prices are reasonable.

BULBS AND SEEDS.—Messrs. Kern, Steber & Co., of St. Louis, Missouri, will mail free to all applicants their catalogue of bulbs and seeds.

A TESTIMONIAL as to the merits of the Cundurango Bitters will be found in another column.

A. COYLE, No. 419 North Sixth street, St. Louis, Missouri, advertises for agents.

NAVRA & OFFNER, No. 174 Canal street, dealers in crockery and Chinaware.

FOR THE TABLE of every family the Hulford Lechestershire Table Sauce is expressly adapted for use upon fish and meats of every description. It is the cheapest relish, and the best that is made in any part of the world. Sold by all A1 grocers at only thirty cents per pint bottle.

COLGATE & CO.'S new perfume for the handkerchief, "CASHMERE BOUQUET," will be appreciated by all who have enjoyed the delicate and peculiar fragrance of their toilet soap of the same name, which is so universally popular.

HEARING RESTORED.—A great invention. Send stamp for particulars to George J. Wood, Madison, Indiana.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

NO PAY if Dr. Tobias' Venetian Liniment does not cure, when first taken, cholera, diarrhœa, dysentery, croup, colic and sea-sickness. Taken internally, warranted perfectly harmless (see oath accompanying each bottle,) for chronic rheumatism, sore throats, mumps, bruises, old sores, pains in the limbs, back and chest. Externally, this Liniment has been warranted for over twenty-six years, and not one bottle returned. Many families have used it for years, and state that if it was $4 per bottle they would not be without it. Depot, 10 Park Place, New York.

HAMILTON'S preparation of Buchu and Dandelion cures that most distressing malady, Piles, by increasing the digestive function of the stomach, and by securing a proper secretion and excretion of bile for the lubrication of the bowels. This prevents constipation, and constipation is the immediate cause of Piles. There is common sense in this treatment. Go to Fredericksoo & Harte's or E. J. Hart & Co.'s drug stores and tell them you want Hamilton's Buchu and Dandelion. They can tell you all about the remedy, and sell it to you also.

TESTIMONIAL.

DELUDED AND DESPONDENT, No. 33 [illegible] New Orleans, September 20, 1873.

CAPT. TRYON & J. WOODWARD, Agent Maguire's Medicines, No. 58 Magazine street:

Esteemed Sirs—From a feeling of heartfelt gratitude and a general sense of duty I am prompted to address you, and respectfully beg to give you a voluntary and brief statement of my past and present state of health, and my personal experience in the use of MAGUIRE'S CUNDURANGO LIVER AND BLOOD BITTERS, and SARSAPARILLA TONIC.

My health for years has been bad, but from the commencement of this year I rapidly declined, forcing me to abandon all character of business; and upon becoming completely paralyzed in my right arm, and with my whole right side threatened, I became helpless and hopeless indeed, though attended upon by the most skillful physicians of this and other States and cities, with no benefit; and, in fact, my own medical knowledge forced me to realize the fact that unless some change and improvement took place soon with me I would shortly die, and made my every earthly arrangement accordingly, when by a most providential circumstance I was directed to and ordered you, about a month ago, and from your generous sympathy was induced (to gratify you, but with no confidence or hope of benefit to myself) to only try the Cundurango; and to my utmost astonishment and gratification am now almost entirely restored to perfect health, and that by the use of but one bottle of the Cundurango Liver and Blood Bitters, and one bottle of the Sarsaparilla Tonic. I feel, indeed, a renewed and resurrected man, and will ever, my dear sir, be grateful in my remembrance of you for the kind interest and generous sympathy shown me in my wretched helplessness, and am convinced that to the use of Cundurango, under Divine Providence through you, I am indebted for a new lease upon life.

From a sense of duty, let me ask that a publication of my case be made—and by my happy experience none need despair—and that through you, in the use of Cundurango, they may also find relief and restoration to health, when even hope itself has failed. With respect and gratitude, I remain

Yours truly, etc.,
THOMAS M. LOGAN, M. D.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 21, 1873.

We, the undersigned, being personally acquainted with Dr. Logan, cheerfully certify that the above statement is true and correct in every particular.

MEDICAL.

TAKE SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR

THE FAVORITE HOME REMEDY.

—IT IS—

PURELY VEGETABLE,

containing those Southern Roots and Herbs which an all-wise Providence has placed in countries where Liver diseases most prevail. It will cure all diseases caused by derangement of the Liver and Bowels.

SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE is eminently a Family Medicine; and by being kept ready for immediate resort will save many an hour of suffering, and many a dollar in time and doctors' bills.

After over forty years' trial it is still receiving the most unqualified testimonials to its virtues from persons of the highest character and responsibility. Eminent physicians commend it as the

MOST EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC

for Constipation, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, bad taste in the mouth, Billious attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, despondency, gloom and foreboadings of evil, all of which are the offspring of a diseased Liver.

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion it Has No Equal.

It is the cheapest, purest and best Family Medicine in the world. Manufactured only by J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Macon, Ga., and Philadelphia. Price, $1. Sold by all druggists.

DR. TUTT'S VEGETABLE LIVER PILLS.

THE STARTLING DRAWBACK ON nearly all medicinal agents has ever been that in their process of purgation and purification they have also debilitated the system. To obviate this difficulty physicians have long sought for an agent that would PURGE, PURIFY and STRENGTHEN At One and the Same Time.

Their research has at last been rewarded by a discovery which fully realizes the fondest desires of the medical faculty, and which is justly regarded as the most important triumph that Pharmacy has ever achieved. This important desideratum is which purifies the blood and removes all corrupt humor and unhealthy accumulations from the body, and yet produces no weakness or lassitude whatever, but, on the contrary, tones the stomach and invigorates the body during the progress of its operation. It unites the heretofore irreconcilable qualities of a strengthening purgative and a purifying tonic.

DR. TUTT'S PILLS are the most active and searching medicine in existence. They at once attack the very root of diseases, and their action is so prompt that in an hour or two after they are taken the patient is aware of their good effects. They may be taken at any time without restraint of diet or occupation. They produce neither nausea, griping or debility, and as a family medicine they have no rival.

Price, 25 cents a box. Sold by all druggists.

The Child's Corner.

A BIT OF A SERMON.

Whatsoe'er you find to do,
Do it, boys, with all your might!
Never be a little true,
Or a little in the right;
Trifles even
Lead to heaven;
Trifles make the life of man;
So in all things,
Great or small things,
Be as thorough as you can.

Let no speck thist surface dim,
Spotless truth and honor prize!
I'd not give a fig for him
Who says may be is white!
He who falters,
Twists or alters
Little atoms when we speak,
May deceive me;
But, believe me,
To himself he is a sneak!

Help the weak, if you are strong;
Love the old, if you are young;
Own a fault, if you are wrong;
If you're angry, bite your tongue;
In each duty
Lies a beauty,
If your eyes you do not shut,
Just as surely
And securely
As a kernel in a nut!

Love with all your heart and soul;
Love with eye and ear and touch;
That's the moral of the whole—
You can never love too much!
'Tis the glory
Of the story
In our babyhood begun:
Our hearts without it—
Never doubt it
Are as worlds without a sun!

If you think a word would please,
Say it, if it is but true;
Words may give delight with ease
When no act is asked from you.
Words may soften,
Soothe and soften,
Gild a joy or heal a pain;
They are treasures
Yielding pleasures
It is wicked to retain!

Whatsoe'er you find to do,
Do it, then, with all your might;
Let your prayers be strong and true:
Prayer, my lads, will keep you right.
Pray in all things,
Great and small things,
Like a Christian gentleman;
And forever,
Now and ever,
Be as thorough as you can.

Good Words for the Young.

About a Dear Little Boy.

MR. EDITOR: Often, when looking over your corner for the children, do I feel like writing to them. Until now I have never had anything definite to tell you. Now I want to tell you about a dear little boy whom I have known from the hour of his birth till God saw fit to call him home, on the fourth of August, 1873. He was born in Alabama, at a little village—Society Hill, Macon county. When a year old his parents moved to this place—Green Hill, Stewart county. Little Percy was always a good and lovely child. I want to tell you some of his sayings, though he was so young, his age being only three years, ten months and thirteen days when God took him home. William Percy was his name. Ask him his name and he would say: "William Percy Whitby Blanchard." His grandfather was named Whitby. Many still remember him. He was a Methodist preacher. Though he died when Percy was a little babe, he would always say his name was his. For the last year or more his mother has been an invalid. Nothing delighted him more than to nurse her in his baby fashion. He would fan her, and bring her medicine and water. One day he was applying some cups to her temples, when she said: "When my little boy gets to be a man, what is he going to be?" "Why, mamma, don't you see I am a doctor now? I go with papa now to see the sick people, and I help him doctor you."

One day he was standing by the window, looking out at the clouds as they gathered for a rain. He spoke very low to himself, and said: "God is mad. See how he is making ugly his face." It began to thunder, and he said: "God is talking now. He is angry." When it began to rain he said: "God is crying now." He always loved to talk about God—would ask his papa and mamma many questions about God and heaven. He always called heaven God's face, and the stars God's eyes. His elder brother, Tom, would say they were stars. "No, no," he would say, "they are God's eyes—one for everybody. How can God see everybody with one eye?" He often got the children together and preached to them. He had learned the little prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep," and most of the Lord's Prayer. He would repeat these in his devotions with the children, and his songs would all end with: "Oh! come and let us worship at his feet." He was loved by all who knew him, especially by the children who knew him best.

On the third of August, which was the Sabbath, he was out preaching to the children, after which he came to his grandmamma and said he was hungry. She fixed his plate at the table, where he soon went to sleep, with his head on the table, and never spoke any more. He had congestion of the brain, and died the next day. What a warning, dear children, to live so as to be prepared for death.

I must tell you something more that I heard a young man telling his friends, while standing looking at his remains: "The night before he was interred this child gave me a greater rebuke than any preacher; and I was not alone, but there were many others. When he had on his first pantaloons he came to the store with his papa. Many were in the store—some drinking. One had Percy on his lap, and asked him if he was not a man now. 'Yes,' he said, 'I am most as large as papa.' After making him talk awhile he said: 'Now tell Mr. —— God d——n.' Percy jumped from his lap, walked off, turned around and said: 'I shan't say it. God hears what I say, and he hears you too.' He walked off without another word. I never heard another profane word that day."

I could tell you many things similar to this of this lovely child. He has left many to mourn for him; but we know he is now an angel in heaven. Let us try to meet him there.

One who loves you, S. B.

The Brave Fisher Girl.

On the coast of Normandy, near Granville, the rise and fall of the tide is very great, being about forty-four feet at spring-tide. It comes in very rapidly, and at particular places may be seen making up in a great wave, two or three feet high. In a book on Normandy the following story is narrated of two English gentlemen:

They had been out on the sands, watching the manner in which sand-eels were caught, and watching the structure of the rocks, which were like sponges, when of a sudden one of them, whose name was Cross, shouted: "I forgot the tide, and here it comes!"

His companion, whose name was Hope, turned toward the sea, and, seeing a stream of water running at a rapid rate, replied quickly:

"I suppose we had better be off."

"If we can," replied Cross. "By crossing the rocks we may yet be in time."

They began to scramble up the rocks, and walked as fast as they could toward the nearest shore, but it was some time before they reached the highest point. On gaining, they looked around and saw that the sand was not yet covered, though lines of blue water here and there showed how fast it was rising. They hastened on, but had not gone far when they found that the sand was in narrow strips, with sheets of water between; but, seeing a girl before them who was familiar with the beach, they cried:

"We shall do yet," and ran forward.

The girl, however, instead of going toward the shore, was running to meet them, and, almost out of breath, cried: "The wave! the wave! it is coming. Turn, turn—run, or we are lost!"

They did turn, and saw out at sea a large wave rolling toward the shore. Out of breath as they were, they yet increased their speed as they retraced their steps toward the rocks they had just left. The little girl passed them and led the way. The two friends strained every nerve to keep pace with her, for as they neared the rock the wave still rolled toward them, the sand gradually becoming covered. Their last few steps were knee-deep in water.

"Quick! quick!" said the girl; "there is the passage to cross, and if the second wave comes we shall be too late." She ran on for a hundred yards till she came to a crack in the rock, six or seven feet wide, along which the water was rushing like a mill-sluice.

"We are lost," said the girl; "I cannot cross; it will carry me away."

"Is it deep?" asked Cross.

"Not very," she said; "but it is too strong."

Cross lifted the girl in his arms, plunged into the stream, and, though the water was up to his waist, he was soon across. His companion followed, and all three now stood on the rock.

"Come on, come on!" cried the girl; "we are nearly there!" and she led the way to the highest point of the rocks, and on reaching it cried: "We are safe now."

All were thoughtful for a moment, as they saw the danger which God had delivered them from; looking round, the sand was one sheet of water. "We are quite safe here," said the girl; "but we shall have to stay three or four hours before we can go on shore."

"What made you forget the tide?" said Cross; "you must know the coast well."

"I did not forget it," she replied; "but I feared, as you were strangers, you would be drowned, so I ran back to tell you what to do."

"And did you risk your life to save ours?" said Hope, the tears starting to his eyes.

"I thought at any rate I should get here," she replied; "but I was very nearly too late." Hope took the little girl in his arms and kissed her, and said: "We owe you our lives, you brave little maid." Meanwhile the water was rising rapidly, till it almost touched their feet.

"There is no fear," said the girl; "the points of the rocks are always dry."

"Cold comfort," said Hope, looking at them; "but what shall we do for our young friend?" he said to Mr. Cross.

"If we put all our money in our pockets into a handkerchief and tie it round her neck it will warm her, I warrant, for she looks cold enough." One of them had twenty and the other seventeen francs, and, binding these in a knot, Mr. Hope passed it round her neck. On receiving it she blushed with delight, kissed both their hands, and cried: "How jealous my sister Angela will be, and how happy my mother!"

Just then a wave rolled past, and the water began to run along the little platform they were sitting upon; they arose and mounted on the rocky points, and had scarcely reached them when the water was a foot deep where they had just been seated. Another wave came—the water was within six inches of their feet.

"It is a terrible high tide!" said the girl; "but if we hold together we shall not be washed away." On looking to the shores they saw a great many people clustered together on the nearest point; a faint sound of cheers was heard, and they could see hats and handkerchiefs waved to them.

"The tide has turned," said the girl, "and they are shouting to cheer us." She was right; in five minutes the place was dry. They had some hours to wait before they could venture on the sand, and it was quite dark before they reached the beach; but at length, guided by the lights on the shore, they gained their own home in safety, not unmindful of him who says to the proud waves: "Hitherto shalt thou come and no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed." The friends handsomely rewarded the little fisher girl, whose name was Matilde, for her bravery.

THE ASS AND THE LOCOMOTIVE.—A donkey one day was quietly munching thistles when he heard the screaming whistle of a locomotive. Pricking up his ears he started into a gallop and raced across lots, with his tail high in the air.

Moral.—This fable teaches what an ass he was.—Sarsfield Young, in Lippincott's Magazine.

OH! fight hard against sin and the devil. The devil never sleeps; be ye also active for good.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Fruit Garden.

There is considerable art in raising fruits; but there is as much or more in gathering and ripening them. Pears and apples are commonly ripened as soon as the seeds begin to turn black, or as soon as they will part easily from the tree by gently raising the stalk, or as soon as the leaves show indications of falling from the trees; indeed, whether they are duly ripe or not, no length of time will avail them aught after the leaves fall. No rules can be given for the exact place to put them away in, but the principle must be applied to each individual case. In the first place, the fruit-shelves must be secure from frost. In the next place, it must be just moist enough to prevent withering, but not too much so, or the flavor will be inferior. Nor must it be too hot, or your fine Bueres may become Fondantes, or resemble cooked Pommes des terres, alias boiled potatoes. If it is too cold, barely above the freezing point, the fruit becomes insipid and tasteless. The happy idea is to strike central to all these extremes. Of course they must be hand-picked from the tree, as the slightest bruise causes decay. The stock must be occasionally overhauled anyhow to take out such as will be found, from various accidents, in a decaying state. Apples, for commercial purposes, are usually barreled up, with chaff or other light substance between each layer; and some pears, such as Lawrence, will bear the same treatment; but such preserved fruits are never equal in quality to those preserved in a more open way on shelves.

We may perhaps repeat the advice to plant considerably more fruit-trees together on the same space of ground than is usually done, even though some have to be cut away in time. This should especially be in the case where parties prefer to keep the surface soil clear, as the intense heat reflected from bare soil is one of the great sources of disease in young trees. It might be well to introduce nurse-trees into orchards, to obviate this somewhat. Alders, poplars or willows might, we think, be used to advantage; of course cutting them away before they grew large enough to interfere with the roots of the fruit-trees. A dry, warm bottom, but cool surface is of the highest importance in fruit-growing.

The past season, in most parts of the country, has been one of very abundant bearing, and, unless the food has been kept up by a liberal supply of manure, there will be many weak and exhausted trees, and short crops next season. We prefer to manure, in such cases as these, in mid-summer. The cells of trees are like honey-combs, and store up matter for use the next season. They have, of course, to do this while growing. Whenever this has not been done, matter for a surface dressing should be got ready during autumn and winter. Much injury has been done to fruit-culture by the expressed dread some cultivators have of a "too rank growth," and a consequent advice not to manure. A fruit-tree never suffers from too much manure, if the roots are healthy. If a tree seems to suffer after a heavy manuring, it is only that it was in a bad way before this. Of course, if one were to empty a cesspool, a cart load of fresh lime, or some other inordinate mass of food under a tree, it would suffer; but our meaning is that no amount of manure, that would be found of benefit to any regular garden, will be otherwise than beneficial to a fruit-tree, if the roots be healthy.—Gardeners' Monthly.

RAISIN-MAKING IN CALIFORNIA. For making raisins they wait until the grape is fully ripe, and then carefully cut off the bunches and lay them either on a hard clay floor, formed in the open air, or on brown paper laid between the vine rows. They do not trim out poor grapes from the bunches, because, as they assert, there are none; but I suspect this will have to be done for the very finest raisins, such as would tempt a reluctant buyer. The bunches require from eighteen to twenty-four days of exposure in the sun to be cured. During that time they are gently turned from time to time, and such as are earliest cured are at once removed to a raisin-house. This is fitted with shelves, on which the raisins are laid about a foot thick, and here they are allowed to sweat a little. If they sweat too much the sugar candles on the outside, and this deteriorates the quality of the raisin. It is an object to keep the bloom on the berries. They are kept in the raisin-house, I believe, five or six weeks, when they are dry enough to box. It is as yet customary to put them in twenty-five-pound boxes, but no doubt, as more experience is gained, farmers will contrive other parcels. Chinese do all the work in raisin-making, and are paid $1 a day, they supplying themselves with food. There is no rain during the raisin-making season, and consequently the whole out-door work may be done safely as well as cheaply.—Moore's Rural.

HOW TO RIPEN TOMATOES.—Pick them from the vines as soon as they have their growth, put them in an upper room before a sunny south window. A painted floor is best to spread them over, as it will draw the heat much better than an unpainted one. Tomatoes do not ripen fast if left on the vines after the weather gets chilly. Vines that have been kept from the frost can be pulled and hung up by the roots in the cellar. It is said the tomatoes will continue to grow and ripen for weeks. Try it and report result. I am going to try the experiment.—Ohio Farmer.

RICE PUDDING.—Two tablespoonfuls of rice to one quart of milk, two-thirds of a cup of raisins, and two-thirds cup of sugar. Bake two hours, and stir occasionally while baking. Good either warm or cold. Serve without sauce.—Household.

TO MAKE CIDER INTO VINEGAR. Add half rain-water and a little molasses, and set in the sun or where it will keep warm.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

THE NEXT TERM OF THIS VENERABLE INSTITUTION OPENS ON THE FIRST MONDAY IN OCTOBER.

Faculty.—REV. C. G. ANDREWS, A. M., President, and Professor of Mental and Moral Science, Political Economy and International Law; A. R. HOLCOMBE, A. M., Professor of Mathematics and Adjunct Professor of Natural Science; G. H. WILEY, A. M., Professor of Ancient and Modern Languages; T. S. JONES, M. D., Professor of Natural Science; REV. E. H. NORSWORTHY, A. M., Principal of the Preparatory Department.

Charges.—Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in College, $60; Tuition, per session of forty weeks, in Preparatory Department, $40; Contingent expenses, $5. A matriculation fee of $5 must be paid on entering any regular college class. One-half the charges must be paid when the student enters, the other half on the beginning of the second term, March 1.

Board.—Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel, can be had in the best families for $20 per month. Day-boarding with the same family, $15 per month. Rooms provided in the dormitories free of rent. Board to be paid in advance at least one month.

Location.—This institution is located in the lovely village of Jackson, about two miles from Bayou Sara, in a grove of pine, magnolia, oak and beech. The location is remarkable for its beautiful eminences, its bland and delightful atmosphere, its pure water, its unrivaled healthfulness, and its cultivated and refined society.

When Founded.—The college was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and ceded to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1856.

Alumni.—Its Alumni numbers two hundred and three, and they are to be found in the most honorable and useful stations in the land.

Apparatus and Cabinet.—The college possesses a valuable set of Philosophical, Astronomical and Chemical Apparatus, and also a well-selected Mineralogical and Geological Cabinet. The apparatus includes a Theodolite, Sextant, Compass, Chronometer, Atwood's Machine, Whirling Table, Electrical Machine, Air Pump, various combinations of the Mechanical Powers, Batteries, Chemical Tests, etc., sufficient for a thorough and extended course of observations and experiments. Steps have been taken by the Board of Trustees to put these in thorough repair.

Literary Societies.—There are two regular Literary Societies connected with the Institution. These are of great utility to young men acquiring a liberal education—improving them in the art of public speaking, making them in some degree familiar with the proceedings of deliberative bodies, and cultivating systematic business habits. Each Society has a convenient hall and a well-selected Library—about one thousand six hundred volumes which, added to the College Library of two thousand volumes, makes over five thousand volumes in the college.

Building.—The Trustees are determined to continue the repairs on the buildings till completed. The grand Center Building is a noble specimen of architectural beauty and adaptation to the purposes of its erection. The wings, built of solid brick, present each a front of two hundred feet, with upper and lower galleries the entire length, supported by Tuscan columns, and with the center making in the perspective a continuous front of seven hundred feet.

Preparatory Department.—In the Preparatory Department students are fitted for regular college classes, or may obtain a thorough English and commercial education.

The Faculty.—Its Faculty are men of experience and success in teaching.

WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE,
BROOKHAVEN, MISSISSIPPI,

ON THE NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON AND GREAT NORTHERN RAILROAD one hundred and twenty-eight miles from New Orleans, will reopen on the TWENTY-FOURTH OF SEPTEMBER NEXT.

The health is good, discipline firm but parental, instruction thorough, and economy in diet enforced. The expenses are as low as the advantages given will allow.

The Director of the Music Department, Prof. ECKHARDT, is unrivalled. Madame JULIUS, a accomplished Parisian lady, has charge of French and the ornamental branches.

During the past term there were Thirteen in the Faculty, and Two Hundred and One pupils in attendance, over one hundred of whom boarded in the college.

All the branches of a thorough education are taught, including the Languages, ancient and modern, also the higher mathematics.

Particular attention is paid to Spelling, Writing, Reading and Composition; also to the morals, good manners and morals of the pupils.

EMORY AND HENRY COLLEGE,
WASHINGTON COUNTY, VA.
On the Eleventh of September
our scholastic year begins, and continues Forty consecutive weeks. It is divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. The Spring session begins January 29, 1874. Students can enter at any time, though they should, if possible, begin with the session. The entire expenses for the forty weeks, including board, tuition, fuel, room-rent, washing and contingent fees, need not exceed $230. These rates, so remarkably low considering the superior advantages here offered, must commend this institution to the favor of those seeking thorough collegiate training. Before selecting your school consult any of those knowing the college, especially our Alumni and old students, prominent men in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and professors of the University of Virginia, who have authorized this reference, or send directly to the undersigned for a catalogue or for any information desired.

EAST MISSISSIPPI
FEMALE COLLEGE.
A Chartered Literary Institution under the auspices of the M. E. Church South.
Located at Meridian, Mississippi
ANNOUNCEMENT.
The annual term of 1873-4 will open on WEDNESDAY, September 24, 1873. It will be divided into two sessions of twenty weeks each. Combining convenience for boarding in the college, the pupils will be furnished and supervised by the best. The Board of Trustees claim to have made the arrangements for the Literary, scientific, ornamental and Musical departments of the college, the election of competent and experienced officers for the various departments, and that facilities for thorough and liberal education in the East Mississippi Female College may no more than be equalled by the best of other similar institutions. This college is recommended to public consideration with candor and with confidence of a successful career. We hope to see its interests and usefulness widen and deepen, under continued and increasing prosperity, and it is apprehended that young ladies, in whose behalf the Trustees appeal to the public, will be pleased to find in coming years the institution will be pleased to coming years by organizing in their behalf a Home Matter a living and lasting success of editor and enterprise.

BOARDING.
Boarders engaged for the whole term will be charged $150, one-half of which must be paid at the beginning of each session.
Those engaged for one session will be charged $80, one-half of which must be paid at the beginning of the session. Those engaged for a shorter time than a definite time will be charged $20 per month, to be paid quarterly in advance.
Extra charges will be made for washing, lights, etc. Each boarder must furnish two sheets, one blanket and two towels. Especial printed regulations will be given each boarder, giving her instructions not restrictions respecting their family, social relations and practices.
In all cases of sickness, resulting in the removal of boarders from the college, advance payments will be promptly refunded. No pains will be spared to render each boarder comfortable and happy. Their treatment will be parental, and unfaithfulness, strict propriety and refinement will be constantly brought to bear upon all their habits.
Our college is in its incipiency. The entire South has been recognized by the Mississippi Conference as meeting a growing demand for education in the higher branches. In the judgment of the Bishops in east Mississippi, in the Judicatory of the Church, in the Conference, Meridian is the most suitable place for the institution. The location is healthful, access is easy, society is of the right type, and almost every consideration strengthens the position of the board and Conference in locating the college at this place. Since this institution is under the supervision of the church there is no necessity for urging earnest co-operation on the part of the ministry in the surrounding country. Our appeal is earnest. We propose to place the standard of instruction high, that they who graduate here may be prepared for honors conferred by other institutions, and thereby honor themselves, the college and the world. Address J. W. ADKINS, President.

New Orleans Markets.

From the New Orleans Price Current.

The river is 13 feet 11 inches below high-water mark.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the seventeenth instant:

|---|---|
| Louisiana and Mississippi | bales |
| Lake | |
| Mobile | |
| Texas | |
| Total | |

On Saturday the market opened with a fair inquiry and moderate supply, while factors were rather more stringent in their pretensions, especially for strict low middling, which was in good request and limited supply. The sales embraced 1,850 bales. On Monday the demand continued light during the morning, but subsequently showed more vitality, although without much animation, and 1,000 bales changed hands at irregular and generally easier prices, showing a decline of about ⅛c. Good ordinary sold at 15⅛@15⅜c.; strict good ordinary at 15¼c., strict good ordinary to low middling at 15⅞c., low middling at 16⅛@16¼c., the latter for good style, strict low middling at 16⅜, 16⅝@16¾c., strict low middling to middling at 16⅞, and strict middling to good middling at 17@16c. On Tuesday, with a more copious supply, buyers came forward with increased spirit, but lower limits, and to effect sales factors were compelled to make further concessions of about ⅛c. The demand, however, was quite active at the reduction, and the sales summed up 2,600 bales. Good ordinary sold at 15¾c., good ordinary to strict good ordinary at 15⅝c., strict good ordinary at 15⅜c., a high style of the same at 15¾@c., low middling at 16@16¼c., the latter for high style, strict low middling at 16⅜@16½c., and strict low middling to middling at 16⅝c.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 5,850 bales, against 3,100 for the corresponding time last week and 5,200 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 69,985 bales, against 125,-⅝ bales to the same date last year, and the decrease in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 157,459 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is a decrease of 37,922 to Great Britain, of 20,463 to France and of 7,201 to other foreign ports. We quote:

|---|---|
| Good ordinary | 15⅞ @ 15⅞ |
| Strict good ordinary | 15⅛ @ 15¾ |
| Low middling | 16 @ 16⅛ |
| Strict low middling | 16¼ @ 16⅜ |
| Middling | 16½ @ 17 |
| Strict middling | 17¼ @ 17½ |
| Good middling | 18 @ 18⅛ |

The class will please read all the books of reference, and be prompt to meet the committee at the time appointed. D. M. HUDSON, Chairman Committee of Third Year.

Appointments for Quarterly Meetings.

NOTICE.—The Publishing Committee of the ADVOCATE gave it as their opinion that the insertion of the notices of Quarterly Conferences once or twice was sufficient, and, as the space of the paper is valuable, they passed a resolution recommending that they "be not inserted more than once or twice." Our friends who are interested in these appointments will take due notice there of, as we propose to be governed by the resolution in future.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

HOUSTON, Oct. 22.—Most discouraging telegrams have been received from Columbus regarding the increase and malignance of the fever.

Twenty-two deaths since Sunday. Thus far every case has proved fatal. The town is almost depopulated.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 24.—It will be recollected that nearly two weeks ago the President, during an interview of a semi-official character, said a return to a specie basis can never be effected except by a shrinkage of values; that the shrinkage had now taken place; the currency had appreciated to about par with silver, and the wonder to him was that silver was not pouring out. When this should take place, his theory was that the country would absorb two or three hundred millions of it.

Since that time the President, in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, has been considering how such a result might be produced, with a view of affording relief to the country, within legal limit.

The Director of the Mint has been acting in accordance with the President's policy, and is making extensive arrangements for the coinage of both gold and silver to an extent heretofore unprecedented, so as to be ready for a resumption of specie payments, there now being large amounts of these metals awaiting coinage.

The first step in resumption has been taken, it having been ascertained to-day from the Secretary of the Treasury that the government will pay out silver as soon as it can be profitably and conveniently coined for that purpose.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Oct. 21.—Four yellow fever deaths in the past twenty-four hours.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 24.—Heavy frost last night, and ice quarter of an inch thick.

A nurse gave carbolic acid to a patient by mistake, which proved immediately fatal.

The mortuary report to six o'clock this evening shows deaths from yellow fever, twenty-three; from other causes, four. A few new cases to-day reported. Prospects more favorable than since the first outbreak of the fever.

REDDINGS, CAL., Oct. 24.—People came from every quarter to see the remnants of the Modocs. They were a sorry-looking party. Captain Jack's wife and the Princess Mary attracted the most attention, clad in deer skins, blacked (tar and ashes,) for their kindred. All look as though they had laid all winter under an ash-heap.

SHREVEPORT, October 24.—Three deaths from yellow fever during the twenty-four hours ending at six P. M.

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 25.—Two yellow fever deaths in the last twenty-four hours.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 25.—The grand jury have indicted Whitelaw Reid, of the New York Tribune, and Charles A. Dana, of the Sun, for libel.

JACKSON, MISS., Oct. 25.—The House passed a bill by nearly two-thirds majority postponing the general election till next year. The passage of the bill in the Senate, which adjourned this morning until Tuesday, is doubtful. It is conjectured that the senators favoring an election on the first Monday proximo may not return until after that date, thus preventing a quorum.

The House passed a bill by an unanimous vote providing for an amendment to the constitution for biennial elections, and that the repudiated Planters' Bank bonds shall never be recognized.

SAVANNAH, GA., Oct. 25.—A special to the Morning News from Bainbridge, Georgia, received at seven P. M., says there are a great many new cases reported this evening. The dangerous cases reported as better this morning relapsed, and their deaths are hourly expected.

Four hundred people have left. The streets are entirely deserted. The trains this evening were packed. Vehicles cannot be had for love or money. Physicians say the disease is on the increase.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 25.—The official returns from all but one county insure Allen's election as Governor. The other State officers are Republicans.

MEMPHIS, October 26.—Yesterday there were twenty-four deaths by yellow fever; four by other causes.

SAVANNAH, Oct. 26.—Reports from Bainbridge state that the excitement about the fever is dying out, and the panic is over. No fatal cases to-day.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The United States treasury has $500,000 in silver, and Secretary Richardson will order its payment on each check to the extent of $5.
